Hoover Urges North To Help Flood Sufferers

NATION IS ASKED FOR $2,000,000 RELIEF INCREASE

Bankers and Industrialists Urged To Contribute $1,500,000 to Financing Agencies.

40 RADIO STATIONS CARRY FLOOD PLEA

Reconstruction "Should Be Task of Generous North to Courageous South," Says Secretary.

114 Is Flood Toll, Red Cross Reports

New Orleans, May 28.—(AP) One hundred and fourteen persons have lost their lives thus far in the Mississippi flood, the American Red Cross reported today.

The largest number of flood deaths occurred in Arkansas, where 59 died. Mississippi came next with 42, Louisiana 9, Illinois 2, Tennessee 2. None was reported in Kentucky and Missouri.

A total of 568,359 persons have been cared for in refugee camps and concentration points within the past six weeks.

Three hundred and eighty thousand refugees still are being cared for in 73 concentration camps, the report said and the number is increasing as the flood waters moved toward the Gulf of Mexico. This number is divided among seven states, Illinois, 2,500; Missouri, 6,483; Arkansas, 71,865; Kentucky, 9,443; Tennessee, 2,153; Mississippi, 153,430; Louisiana, 145,231.

New Orleans, May 28.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover tonight called upon the north to come to the aid of the south in her tremendous task of giving 600,000 victims of the greatest Mississippi valley flood in history a new start in life.

The appeal of the commerce secretary, who has directed the great relief machine of the flood, broadcast by 40 radio stations into every state in the union, asked the nation to contribute $2,000,000 more to the Red Cross and the northern bankers and industries to subscribe $1,500,000 to the capital of the financing agencies of the three hardest hit states which will supply funds for the reconstruction of the refugees.

Reviews Devastation.

Mr. Hoover reviewed the entire devastation of the flood and described how the greatest machine to save lives and care for the homeless in the nation's history was organized in the southland. He also outlined the great task of reconstruction of the people, driven from their homes by the inundation, which confronts Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi after the waters recede. Six hundred thousand of the 700,000 homeless are destitute, he said.

The reconstruction "should be the task of a generous north to a resolute and courageous south," he said, "and

Drastic Changes In State System Urged by Auditor

Slate, in Annual Report, Urges Only 12 State Departments and Many Other Economies.

TO BRING GEORGIA WITHIN HER INCOME

Hits Deficiency Appropriations; Proposes Revolutionary Reorganization in State Governmental Methods.

Plans by which the state of Georgia can solve the problem of making the expenses of government fall within the state's income are outlined by Sam J. Slate, state auditor, in his annual report to the legislature, made public Saturday.

Auditor Slate made many specific recommendations, which he declared would enable the state to make its appropriations and revenue match, without the imposition of additional taxes, if these recommendations are carried out properly.

All income of whatever kind and from whatever source should be paid into the general fund of the state and there should be uniformity in collection of all, according to the auditor. He also recommends collection of gasoline tax monthly instead of quarterly; recommends separation of the oil inspection department from the state department of agriculture; declares that the state should make a thorough educational survey of all state institutions; declares that the state could reorganize its fiscal and administrative system and coordinate and reduce the number of its activities into 12 or 14 major departments. He takes up nearly all the major departments and points out where savings can be made which would reduce expenses. He also suggests the abolition of deficiency appropriations and makes other recommendations concerning the manner in which appropriations are made.

Challenges Thought.

"Our present problem of state finance," Mr. Slate said, "is going to challenge the earnest thought of the general assembly, for, with the present scale of appropriations for the biennium 1926-1927, though we shall close the year 1927 practically free from current debt, provided no deficiency appropriations are made to be paid from 1927 income, the revenue for the next biennium will not equal present appropriations without additional taxation.

"We appropriate now from the general fund 12 million dollars a year, and our income for the next biennium to the general fund will be approximately ten and a half millions. The state lost in 1927 the one-cent gasoline tax which now goes to highways, approximately $1,500,000 thus lost to the general fund, and the W. & A. rentals, amounting to $540,000 a year for the years 1928 to 1935, inclusive, discounted for payment of past due pensions.

"The attempt to make income and appropriations match will be a problem. You will be confronted with many worthy pleas for increased ap-

PRISONER CLAIMS THAT HE MURDERED BERT DONALDSON

Carolina Penitentiary Inmate Confesses to Eleven Murders Since 1919.

Columbia, S. C., May 28.—(AP)—Confessions that he was responsible for eleven murders, including that of Bert Donaldson, government agent, in Atlanta last summer, are causing penitentiary officials here to investigate the record of A. H. Olmstead, alias Almstead, serving a term of three and a half years after his conviction in Greenville last January of larceny of a rented automobile.

Olmstead, who insisted that his real name is James Alton Brill, after giving various stories, according to B. E Evans, captain of the penitentiary guard, assumed full responsibility for the Donaldson murder, claiming that he fired the shot which killed the government agent in an Atlanta hotel. On communication from penitentiary officials an agent of the solicitor-general of Georgia was sent here to interview the man.

Saying that he was employed by a Cincinnati gang to kill Donaldson, Olmstead gave a story that agreed generally with published accounts of the murder, according to Captain Evans.

Olmstead, who is about 30 years old, said he killed ten other persons since 1919, in various parts of the country. His first murder, he claimed, was that of his wife, who he said was unfaithful. Other deaths for which he assumed responsibility were those of policemen and others who interfered with him in liquor and dope running.

The penitentiary officials are writ-

FACING VICTIMS, MAN CONFESSES TO KILLING FIVE

Tampa Murder Mystery Cleared Up by Fisherman's Story, But Motive Is Undetermined.

Tampa, Fla., May 28.—(AP)—B. F. Levine, alias Levens, 30, a fisherman, tonight confessed to the wholesale murder of the Herman Merrell family here early Friday morning. Levine's confession came abruptly when he was taken to the morgue to view the bodies of his victims.

Confronted by the bodies of his victims for the third time during the day, he suddenly broke before the questions hurled at him by a dozen detectives and admitted that he alone crept into the small home of the humble family early Friday morning and beat them with a railroad spike maul as they lay helpless. Merrell, Mrs. Merrell and three of the four children attacked have died of their injuries.

Kills Wrong Family.

"I did it! I killed them! I thought they were the Ryles family! God knows why I did, I must have been crazy."

That was the gist of the giant roustabout's confession, while Levine stood handcuffed, perspiring and shaking in the dimly-lighted morgue with the dead forms of his victims arranged around him.

His eyes closed time after time, his lean fingers dug into the flesh.

The lean leather-faced man could not even remember what the Ryles, a family who lived in the cottage until they moved to the country three months ago, had done to him.

"I don't remember," he muttered. "It wasn't nothing much. I was just crazy, crazy."

Not until the next day, when he read of his terrible crime in the paper, did Levine realize that he had wreaked his maniacal vengeance on the wrong family.

Companion Cleared.

Leonard Thompson, who was arrested after Levine accused him of the murders, had nothing to do with the killing, Levine declared under questioning. He had been with Thompson earlier that night and when he was taken into custody and realized that he faced the electric chair, he charged Thompson with the crime in sheer terror.

The latter probably will be released this morning, Sergeant Blanton said.

Levine did not go into details in reciting the crime. His confession came slowly and laboriously in reply to questions plied at him by one officer after another.

"Here's your victims. Do you real-

HIGHEST HONORS POSSIBLE GIVEN TO ACE OF AIR

"I Have Heard Much of Famous Soldier King of Belgians," Flier Tells Ruler.

CHEERING THRONGS WELCOME AVIATOR

While Thousands Cry Out for Sight of Lindbergh He Plays With Embassy's Children.

Unusual Honor Paid Lindbergh by Fliers

Brussels, May 28.—(AP)—Captain Charles Lindbergh, who flew from Paris to Brussels today, was presented soon after his arrival with the highly coveted gold medal of the Royal Aero club, an honor that only five other airmen, all Belgian citizens, have received. These are Willy Coppens, Lieutenant Thierry, Maurice Medaets, Jan Olieslager and Ernest de Muyter. The Belgians say that Lindbergh has "become a sixth member of this little family and thus is a sort of adopted son of Belgium."

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

Brussels, Belgium, May 28.—(United News.)—Charles Lindbergh, of Missouri, was honored today as few Americans ever have been honored in Europe.

After flying from Paris to Brussels to receive the highest honor Belgium could bestow, he became the intimate of royalty and made the first chum he has found so far abroad.

The shy and reserved young American, unspoiled by the honors that have been heaped on him because of his magnificent achievement in flying across the Atlantic, warmed spontaneously to the Belgian royal family.

Highest Honor Bestowed.

He was received in the royal palace by King Albert and patted affectionately on the shoulder while the king, breaking all royal precedent, pinned on his coat the Order of King Leopold, the highest Belgium can bestow.

"You deserve more than this, but it is all I can give you," the king said with sincere emotion.

It was an important departure from court routine, as the king's aide-de-camp usually affixes decorations. The new chevalier of the Order of Leopold warmed to the king then, but it was nothing to the quick friendship he formed a few hours later with Prince Leopold at a dinner in his honor at the American club.

Prince Leopold sat on the right hand of the guest of honor and for

CHARTER REVISION SENTIMENT GROWS

Charter Revision Committee of Council Called To Consider Tentative Plans Thursday.

Movement for revision of the Atlanta charter, abolishing the board of education and cutting down what is termed an unwieldy city council, gained impetus Saturday, while Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and a group of council members moved cautiously and deliberately in order that they might offer a solution to any possible ills in the present form of city government.

Dr. C. J. Vaughan, chairman of the charter revision committee of city council, has called a session of that body for 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and at that time it is expected that Mayor Ragsdale and others interested in a change in the charter will offer several plans to cut the number in council and to provide a school board consisting of six members named from six school districts.

City council will be asked to adopt one of the proposals, which will be recommended by the charter revision body as the most feasible and practical for Atlanta, and petition the Georgia assembly to make the charter changes necessary to put them into effect.

To Forestall Fight.

Advocates of this plan pointed out that unless some change is made, Atlanta probably will be torn by another charter fight two years from now, because of the same criticisms which were launched against the local government in the recent campaign. They pointed out that the people of Atlanta repudiated the proposed new charter because it was too sweeping and radically different from the present system of government, but that even the opponents of the proposed city manager charter admitted that certain changes are necessary.

Sentiment favors a reduction in the number of council—probably to 18 instead of the 36 as at present. The plan as advanced would be to elect one councilman from each of the 12 wards, abolish the aldermanic board and divide the city into six school districts, naming one councilman from each of the school districts so formed.

This would provide a council of 18 and would preserve to a large extent ward representation and equal representation in council. The program also is to elect one member to the board of education from each of the six school districts, either by appointment of the mayor subject to ratification of council, or by election by the city at large. Members of council

Praise Given To Lindbergh By Army Head

Major General Summerall Predicts Government Appreciation of Flyer's Feat.

That he feels certain that the United States government will confer every honor due Charles Lindbergh in recognition of his wonderful feat of flying from New York to Paris, was the view expressed by Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States army, upon his arrival in Atlanta Saturday night from Fort Benning where he attended graduation exercises at the infantry school at that place in the afternoon.

While in Atlanta until noon today, General Summerall is the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. B. Gardner, of La France avenue. Prior to leaving for Washington at noon, he will perform only one official act, that of inspecting Fort McPherson in the morning.

Lauds Lindbergh.

The enthusiastic manner in which General Summerall spoke of Lindbergh and his achievement was taken as being particularly significant coming as it does at a time when much agitation is being felt over what this government will do in the way of honoring the national hero. While General Summerall would express no opinion as to the form of recognition this country would pay the daring flyer, there was no mistaking his own unqualified belief that something appropriate would be done.

General Summerall was most complimentary as to conditions at Camp Benning and spoke in the highest praise of the work being done at the infantry school at that place. Asked as to the way in which the army in this section compared to that in other sections of the country, General Summerall replied that this section was on a par with the rest and that there was no difference in any section.

He was very enthusiastic over the work of the training camp at Fort McPherson and spoke in a complimentary manner of the training activities as conducted in this section.

General Summerall was met at the Terminal station on his arrival from Camp Benning by a military reception committee composed of Major General Malin Craig, commanding general of the fourth corps area; Brigadier General H. O. Williams, commanding officer at Fort McPherson, and Colonel D. K. Major, of Fort McPherson.

Prominent Figure.

Immediately after his arrival General Summerall went to the home of his sister, Mrs. Gardner, on La France avenue.

Probably no figure in the recent history of the army is more conspic-

BITTER WAR SEEN OVER AQUEDUCT

Expert Riflemen Are Ordered Into California Valley To Shoot To Kill All Dynamiters.

Los Angeles, May 28.—(AP)—Prospects of fighting in Owens valley, cockpit of the 20-years' struggle over water between the ranchers and the city of Los Angeles, cast its shadow over the situation there tonight.

As a result of two dynamite explosions, each of which severely damaged the Los Angeles aqueduct, main artery of the city's water supply, within the last 24 hours, expert riflemen were ordered into the valley with instructions to "shoot to kill" any suspicious persons loitering near the water course.

Hardly had the echoes from the first blast near Little Lake, at the "Every measure within the bounds of the city's authority will be employed," an official of the bureau of water and power said, "to repulse with deadly force any attempt to continue the present campaign of outlawry."

The city will not call upon Governor C. C. Young for state troopers to invade the valley as at first decided, however. Although the governor said he would give serious consideration to such request after the city's intention was first announced, officials later decided to invoke every means within their authority before calling for assistance.

Officials of Inyo county reported little progress late today in efforts to apprehend the gang of ten armed, unmasked men who set the first charge of dynamite in No-Name canyon yesterday morning. Officials of the water bureau here believed that the same band of men were responsible for the second blast about midnight last night, 75 miles north of No-Name canyon.

A section of 420 feet of steel siphon, which raises the water over a range of mountains, was blown out in the first explosion. The armed men overpowered two Los Angeles city guards held them off with rifles and touched off the blast. When the liberated waters poured out into the valley, word was flashed to the Haiwee reservoir to the north and the head gates were closed.

A hundred men were rushed to No-Name canyon, 175 miles north of here, and started the work of repair, which was expected to consume two weeks.

In the second blast, two charges of dynamite were set off simultaneously under a steel penstock leading from Big Pine reservoir to Big Pine power house. Two sections, totalling about 300 feet, were destroyed. The water, which falls sharply from the reservoir under 500 pounds pressure, rushed out over city property, washing out a road and endangering the power house itself.

SCHOOL SQUABBLE AIRING SCHEDULED

Board of Education and Citizens' Advisory Body Will Hold Meeting Wednesday.

Early settlement of differences between the Atlanta board of education and the citizens advisory body supervising school department expenditures this year was forecast Saturday when it was learned that a conference committee from the board will attempt to "iron out" differences at a joint session Wednesday.

Although definite time was not set, D. M. Therrell, chairman of the board committee stated that the conference has been settled upon and that he is confident that some feasible solution will be evolved.

The board is now operating on a tentative budget by agreement of the advisory body, the latter group having declined twice to accept a proposed budget offered by the board. W. D. Hoffman, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board, and Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president, have issued statements to the effect that although the last budget offered by the board provided for operation of schools only eight months during the year instead of nine, half of the eliminated month's pay rolls have been made up by a program of strict economy. Omission of the one month from the curricula was one of the reasons assigned by the advisory committee for failure to accept the budget.

When a financial crisis threatened to close schools last fall, citizens gave their personal indorsements to a note on which $500,000 was borrowed from Atlanta banks with the understanding

RODEO MANAGER HELD AS CHEATER

Junior Order of Mechanics Swindled by Stampede Management, Claimed in Warrants.

Chick Hannon, 29, arena manager of the rodeo and stampede at Lakewood Park during the past week, was lodged in Fulton tower late Saturday afternoon on charges of cheating and swindling, on a warrant sworn out by W. R. Suddeth, of 397 Jonesboro road, while officers were looking for Jack Ault, manager of the rodeo, on a similar warrant.

Warrants for the two men were sworn out before Judge Luther Z. Rosser in municipal court by Suddeth, who said that the charges involved the sum of $400 which was advanced to the rodeo. The managers of the rodeo were to have refunded the money to a group of individual members of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, but failed to do so, Suddeth said.

After arrest Hannan said that the Junior Order deposited $400 with which to bring the rodeo to Atlanta, with the requirement that the money be refunded. Attendance at the show during the week was so poor that the rodeo managers were unable to repay the $400, he claimed. Hannan declared that he did not handle the money, stating that Ault was in charge of finances.

Early Saturday night, Suddeth appeared at Fulton tower in an effort to have Hannan released, stating that "Hannan has satisfied us with proper security." Suddeth declared that Ault is the man he and his fellow sponsors of the show want to prosecute on the warrant. He was retained by Suddeth's attorney is H. F. Sharp. At the tower despite this action, Sud-

Couper Paintings Are Added To High Museum Collection; Wood, Metal Work Displayed

So keen has been the enthusiasm and interest aroused by the artist members of the Atlanta Art association in the exhibits now being featured at the High Museum of Art that several notable contributions have been added recently to swell the already imposing collection now on view.

Outstanding among those who have added to the collection is Mrs. B. King Couper, who has brought a group of paintings of rare merit to the exhibit. Mrs. Couper, who was formerly Miss Josie Sibley, daughter of Josiah Sibley, pioneer cotton mill man of Georgia, is mistress of her craft. The daring and abandon with which she has treated her subjects is breath taking. Yet her line work, deft and subtle, balances the vivid color treatment and produces an ensemble that is charming and restful.

New England fishing villages and North Carolina mountains seem to have been her favorite locales. To these much painted and etched scenes she brings a new and refreshing quaintness and glamour.

Confederate Figure.

Certainly the prominent work in her collection is "The Spirit of the Confederacy," a portrait of General J. Colton Lynes, painted as only a daughter of the Confederacy might. There is simplicity and grace in the martial figure, which sits with an unsheathed sword across the knees, that is symbolic of its title.

Apparently Mrs. Couper has been unwilling to miss any phase of the life of her beloved south. In portrait, landscape and study she has constantly striven and more often than not succeeded in bringing to her canvas the very essence of its culture, tradition and environment. "Alta Vista," a mountain view, was a masterly handling of light and shadow; "The Pet Cat," with a startling reversion to animate life, showed the artist versatile. Possibly one of the finest bits of the collection is "The Street Scene, Gloucester," not prominently displayed. There is in this canvas an attention to detail and technique which makes it truly a fine piece of work.

Although she has studied with a number of teachers, her work seems to have been most closely influenced by Hugh Breckenridge, of Gloucester, Mass., who administered the finishing touches to her artistic education. She has exhibited in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore and has also studied with William E. Chase and Elliott Dangerfield.

Excellent Wood Cuts.

Another valuable addition to the High Museum is that of a small but excellent collection of wood cuts loaned by Palmer Johnson, who brought them from Europe recently.

Mrs. George B. Hinman, who has made a study of the subject, gives a short outline of the history of this form of graphic art. She says in part:

"An understanding of these works of art adds greatly to the pleasure of looking at them. Black and white wood engraving was the earliest form of the graphic arts. There can be no doubt but that engraving on wood was practiced in very early times, but it must have been of little practical use for the purpose of reproduction until the invention of paper, as parchment or skin can never have been a suitable medium on which to print. We can thus say that engraving, except for the making of seals or for casting purposes, did not really begin until the first part of the fourteenth century.

"The design was first drawn on a smooth block of wood. The wood around this was hollowed out with a gouge, leaving the design in relief. This was inked and the material to be printed, pressed against the wood, received the relief design. Both the workmanship and the design were very crude. Only simple line work was attempted, no shading.

"The earliest known wood-cut, 'The Virgin Surrounded by Saints,' now in the museum at Brussels, is dated 1418. In olden times manuscripts were illuminated by hand, but with the invention of printing came the opportunity for reproducing many copies of the same kind. Both the picture and the printing were done by the same process and on the same page. The books were loose-leaved pages, fastened together. Some of these may be seen in the library of the Cathedral of Siene, that beautiful little room with its mural decorations by Pinturicchio.

Craft in Vogue.

"Wood engraving, or wood block printing as it is now named, has again come to its own in recent years, and artists are finding in it a new and delightful medium of expression. Colored wood block prints are quite the vogue. There have been many exhibitions of wood cuts, both in colors and in black and white, in the last few years. Mr. Johnson tells me that there is now on exhibition at the public library in New York city a very beautiful collection of colored wood block prints.

"The value of a color-print, of any work of art, depends not alone upon the artist's skill but also upon his artistic perception. He must have the ability to express himself in a way to arouse the emotions of those who look upon his work in whatever medium he chooses.

"These prints of Mr. Johnson's are by different artists, but all are a delight to the eye and possess a quality called charm. In both coloring and design they have a spring-like freshness and simplicity; there is nothing awesome or mystic, but all is gladsome sunshine and play of birds, trees and flowers. They light the rooms where they are hung and bring joy and gladness to the eye of the beholder.

"There are birds of most gorgeous plumage, merrily clinging to branches of trees gay bits of color; flowers of rich and varied hues, all boldly decorative. There are small scenes of deep and brilliant color, and others in lighter and more illusive tones. One springtime scene particularly captivates me, a delicate green meadow with lambs gamboling about in the frisky manner of youth, the very spirit of spring time, inspiring the beholder to at once shake the dust of the city and bid him to 'green fields and pastures new.' Is not this the very province of art?

"This collection of wood block prints will remain at the High Museum of Art throughout this coming week."

Metal Pieces Shown.

Providing variety to the exhibit is a group of metal craft exhibits by Millicent Strange Edson, who has been an outstanding exponent of her craft throughout the country. She has been awarded prizes for her work in several national exhibits and several of the winning pieces are on display at the museum.

Among these is a silver locket in cloisonne enamel which won a prize at Buffalo, N. Y.; a silver chain with plique a jour enamel, a prize winner in Boston, Mass.; a small copper box enriched with panels of Limoges enamel and selected by a collector as one of the most interesting pieces on exhibition.

Mrs. Edson has learned her art in her own country, England, in the workshop of a famous craftsman, Henry Wilson, whose friendship for her brother, Edward F. Strange, assistant keeper of the museum of South Kensington and noted art critic, secured for her unusual advantages in her chosen work. Mrs. Edson's studio was in Washington for a number of years but she is now a resident of Lakemont, Ga. Her work will be on exhibit until June 4.

SHRINERS PLANNING CONVENTION JOURNEY

With only 10 more days left before the Yaarab temple's two special trains pull out of Atlanta for the imperial council sessions of the Shrine to be held in Atlantic City early in June, many city and state Shriners are rapidly completing plans for the week's visit to the eastern playground.

Although many of the choice reservations have been taken, there are that more still to be had, according to Jerry C. Beam, of the Yaarab's transportation committee.

Those Shriners who are contemplating the trip are urged to make reservations as early as possible in order to insure the best service possible during the trip.

While officials are completing plans for the trip, the Yaarab's organizations are putting the finishing touches on their drills and music in preparation for the event which is expected to bring new laurels to Yaarab and Atlanta.

Frank A. Cundell, director of the Yaarab chanters, who has accepted 11 invitations to appear in Atlantic City during the week, has planned a number of rehearsals during the next few days in order that the chanters may be in the best possible condition. They have been chosen as the official chanters for the imperial potentate, an honor bestowed upon the Atlanta singers for the fourth time.

Yaarab's "million dollar" band will be under the direction of E. J. Galyean while the patrol will be in charge of Lieutenant Glover Thrash, due to the illness of Captain F. E. Van der Veer.

Major J. O. Seamans, grand marshal, and Yaarab's staff will be in charge of all uniformed organizations on the trip. He will be assisted by Asa G. Candler, Jr., chief of staff; Henry H. Green, aide, and Harry J. Carr, aide.

The largest oriental band ever to leave the south will be in charge of Dr. C. E. Wilson, president and director of Yaarab's Oriental band. It is the second largest in the country.

ECUADOR TROOPS TAKE MONASTERY; FOIL REVOLUTION

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 28.—(AP) Ecuadorean troops have taken possession of the Dominican monastery in Quito, says an official statement issued Saturday, because an inquiry "brought forth the fact that the entire revolutionary plot, recently frustrated, centered there." Arnoldo Balladares, the alleged leader, described in the statement as a Dominican priest, has been deported to Peru.

The statement says that President Avora, firmly determined to preserve peace at all costs, has ordered that the monastery be used as military barracks, with the friars remaining in possession of the upper floors, not being interfered with in the performance of their religious duties.

An attempt to overthrow the government of President Ayora was made in March, but the movement collapsed when the garrison at Quito refused to support it. Subsequently several prominent Ecuadoreans were ordered deported.

Erritt, editor of the Bible school supplies of the Standard Publishing company, at East Point; Miss Henrietta Heron, editor of "Girlhood Days," at the South Boulevard church; Rufas A. Russell, retiring editor of the Florida Metropolis, Jacksonville, at the Lakewood church, and R. L. Porter, at the Capitol View church, where the convention sessions are being held.

SLIGHT DAMAGE DONE IN TWO COLLISIONS

In a collision Saturday morning a light touring car belonging to the police department and manned by Police Officers Harry Sexton and W. W. Roper, was badly damaged and a heavy sedan driven by Mrs. W. S. Pratt, who gave a downtown address, was slightly damaged. The police car was chasing a bootlegging car when the accident occurred on Jackson street. There were no injuries.

A car driven by Edwin Chandler, of 909 Marietta street, was slightly damaged while turning into his driveway, when it was struck by a small car driven by two unidentified negroes. The negroes leaped out and fled and the car is still in the possession of the police, no effort on the part of the negroes having been made to recover it.

AMERICUS COTTON DAMAGED BY FIRE

Americus, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) Damage estimated at $4,000 was done here today when fire of unknown origin ravaged many bales of cotton stored near the plant of the Atlantic Compress company at Americus. The staple was owned by Frank Goldberg, of Gastonia, N. C., and consisted entirely of cotton taken from the Commercial Warehouse storage building which was destroyed by fire several weeks ago.

There was about $30,000 worth of cotton endangered by the blaze, which firemen had difficulty in controlling. Insurance to about half the value of the burned staple was carried.

The fire spread from the cotton to the coal yard of L. G. Council and a small frame building near by caught fire from flying sparks, but damage in both latter instances was only nominal.

Aero Group Will Entertain Glover And Paul Redfern

Installation of officers and entertainment of W. Irving Glover, third assistant postmaster in charge of air mail, and Paul R. Redfern, of Savannah, who will attempt a non-stop flight from San Francisco to Honolulu in August, will be features of a dinner of the local chapter of the National Aeronautical association Tuesday night, it was announced Saturday.

The occasion, in addition to having local color, also will be in honor of the achievement of Charles Lindbergh, who has just completed the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

Harold F. Pitcairn, president of the Pitcairn Aviation company, which has just closed an air mail contract between Atlanta and New York, and who will launch the schedule this fall, also will be one of the principal guests at the dinner, which will be held at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

The local chapter is the only active one in the state, it is said, and through courtesy of the Atlanta Newsreel Service, the chapter and its guests will be shown first pictures of Lindbergh's arrival, at his destination in Paris and his sensational reception, if they can be rushed from the steamer to Atlanta in time for the banquet.

Officers of the chapter are Henderson Hallman, president; John K. Ottley, Jr., vice president; Wyley R. Wright, secretary; M. Baxter Maddox, treasurer.

Members of the board of directors in addition to the officers are Doug Davis, William B. Hartsfield, Milton Dargan, Jr., Professor C. E. Cooledge, of Georgia Tech; Clark Howell, John S. Cohen, F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, Lieutenant Edgar E. Glenn, of the Tech air service; Colonel Earl D'A. Pierce, commandant at Tech, and Colonel Charles H. Danforth, air officer of the fourth corps area.

The organization will be a distinct asset to Atlanta and to Georgia in that it will take an active interest in protection of air inerests of the city and state, Mr. Hallman said Saturday.

"We propose to take steps to interest Atlanta in the advantages of a good air port, and then to sell the nation our air assets and facilities so that air transportation may be popularized," he declared. "In this we are seeking the cooperation of all those interested in a bigger, better Atlanta."

In addition to members of the chapter, Walter Stewart and Captain George Hope, members of Fulton county commission; George West, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Edwin K. Large, postmaster, and B. S. Barker will be present.

They will come here in a plane from Savannah. Redfern will compete for the $25,000 award offered by James A. Dole, Hawaiian pineapple king, to the first aviator who completes the 2,100-mile non-stop hop. It is estimated that the jump can be made in 20 hours.

Captain LINDBERGH conquered the Atlantic with an air-cooled motor

Captain Lindbergh triumphed for two reasons—ability and a faithful motor. Ability was the more important, but — modestly — he credits the motor . . . . .

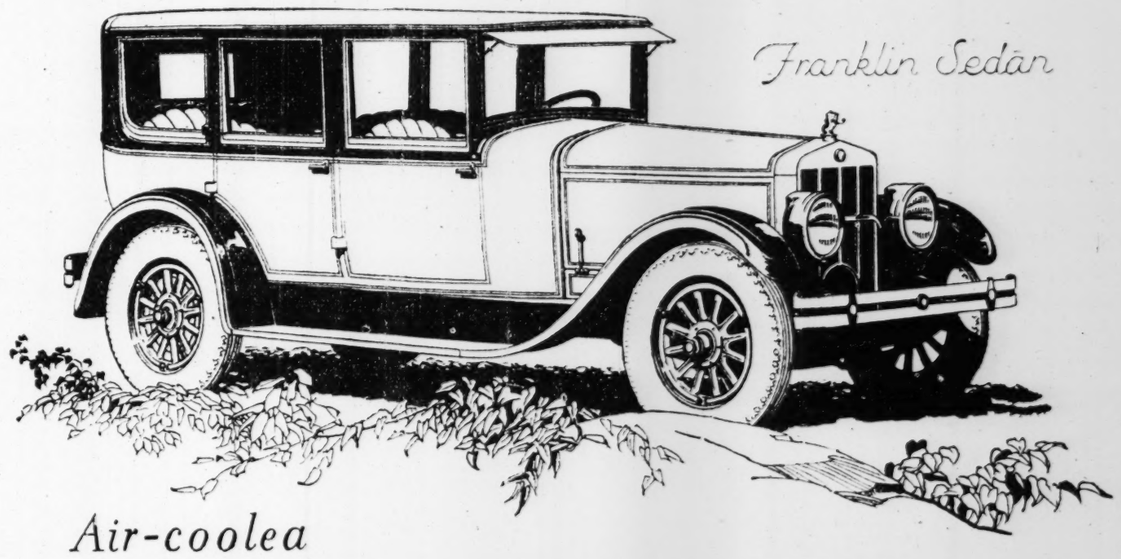

NEVER has so much responsibility been placed on a single motor. For 3600 miles it purred prettily and sweetly, never once hesitating to respond to a call. Through 1000 miles of rain, sleet and fog, from the very wave tops to 10,000 feet and back again in a few minutes, endeavoring to throw off the encompassing storm; from temperate warmth to freezing altitudes and back again, with never a complaint from the faithful air-cooled motor.

Why are Lindbergh, Acosta, Byrd and a host of the leading air pilots so enthusiastic about air-cooled motors? Evidently they know there is less to go wrong, fewer moving parts, no water to boil or freeze, no radiator and jackets to burst, no pumps to fail, a much greater cruising radius due to a more economical engine and larger fuel-carrying capacity. Air-cooling leads to reliability, to weight saving and to higher motor efficiency.

This latest triumph of the air is a most astounding demonstration of a cooling system. Maintaining 107 miles per hour for 33½ hours and never a sign of cooling trouble.

Of this achievement Franklin is justly proud. Franklin perfected air-cooling for the world. Franklin owners are as confident of their air-cooled motors as the pilots are of theirs. Experience has shown owners that principles just as original and advanced as air-cooling are also responsible for the outstanding comfort, ease of handling, safe control, roadability and long life.

All that Franklin stands for is typified by Franklin ownership. Lindbergh's history-making feat added to day-by-day experience, only serves to show again why the Franklin Owner's next car is so generally another Franklin.

Couper Paintings Are Added To High Museum Collection; Wood, Metal Work Displayed

So keen has been the enthusiasm and interest aroused by the artist members of the Atlanta Art association in the exhibits now being featured at the High Museum of Art that several notable contributions have been added recently to swell the already imposing collection now on view.

Outstanding among those who have added to the collection is Mrs. B. King Couper, who has brought a group of paintings of rare merit to the exhibit. Mrs. Couper, who was formerly Miss Josie Sibley, daughter of Josiah Sibley, pioneer cotton mill man of Georgia, is mistress of her craft. The daring and abandon with which she has treated her subjects is breath taking. Yet her line work, deft and subtle, balances the vivid color treatment and produces an ensemble that is charming and restful.

New England fishing villages and North Carolina mountains seem to have been her favorite locales. To these much painted and etched scenes she brings a new and refreshing quaintness and glamour.

Confederate Figure.

Certainly the prominent work in her collection is "The Spirit of the Confederacy," a portrait of General J. Colton Lynes, painted as only a daughter of the Confederacy might. There is simplicity and grace in the martial figure, which sits with an unsheathed sword across the knees, that is symbolic of its title.

Apparently Mrs. Couper has been unwilling to miss any phase of the life of her beloved south. In portrait, landscape and study she has constantly striven and more often than not succeeded in bringing to her canvas the very essence of its culture, tradition and environment. "Alta Vista," a mountain view, was a masterly handling of light and shadow; "The Pet Cat," with a startling reversion to animate life, showed the artist versatile. Possibly one of the finest bits of the collection is "The Street Scene, Gloucester," not prominently displayed. There is in this canvas an attention to detail and technique which makes it truly a fine piece of work.

Although she has studied with a number of teachers, her work seems to have been most closely influenced by Hugh Breckenridge, of Gloucester, Mass., who administered the finishing touches to her artistic education. She has exhibited in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore and has also studied with William E. Chase and Elliott Dangerfield.

Excellent Wood Cuts.

Another valuable addition to the High Museum is that of a small but excellent collection of wood cuts loaned by Palmer Johnson, who brought them from Europe recently.

Mrs. George B. Hinman, who has made a study of the subject, gives a short outline of the history of this form of graphic art. She says in part:

"An understanding of these works of art adds greatly to the pleasure of looking at them. Black and white wood engraving was the earliest form of the graphic arts. There can be no doubt but that engraving on wood was practiced in very early times, but it must have been of little practical use for the purpose of reproduction until the invention of paper, as parchment or skin can never have been a suitable medium on which to print. We can thus say that engraving, except for the making of seals or for casting purposes, did not really begin until the first part of the fourteenth century.

"The design was first drawn on a smooth block of wood. The wood around this was hollowed out with a gouge, leaving the design in relief. This was inked and the material to be printed, pressed against the wood, received the relief design. Both the workmanship and the design were very crude. Only simple line work was attempted, no shading.

"The earliest known wood-cut, 'The Virgin Surrounded by Saints,' now in the museum at Brussels, is dated 1418. In olden times manuscripts were illuminated by hand, but with the invention of printing came the opportunity for reproducing many copies of the same kind. Both the picture and the printing were done by the same process and on the same page. The books were loose-leaved pages, fastened together. Some of these may be seen in the library of the Cathedral of Siene, that beautiful little room with its mural decorations by Pinturicchio.

Craft in Vogue.

"Wood engraving, or wood block printing as it is now named, has again come to its own in recent years, and artists are finding in it a new and delightful medium of expression. Colored wood block prints are quite the vogue. There have been many exhibitions of wood cuts, both in colors and in black and white, in the last few years. Mr. Johnson tells me that there is now on exhibition at the public library in New York city a very beautiful collection of colored wood block prints.

"The value of a color-print, of any work of art, depends not alone upon the artist's skill but also upon his artistic perception. He must have the ability to express himself in a way to arouse the emotions of those who look upon his work in whatever medium he chooses.

"These prints of Mr. Johnson's are by different artists, but all are a delight to the eye and possess a quality called charm. In both coloring and design they have a spring-like freshness and simplicity; there is nothing awesome or mystic, but all is gladsome sunshine and play of birds, trees and flowers. They light the rooms where they are hung and bring joy and gladness to the eye of the beholder.

"There are birds of most gorgeous plumage, merrily clinging to branches of trees, gay bits of color; flowers of rich and varied hues, all boldly decorative. There are small scenes of deep and brilliant color, and others in lighter and more illusive tones. One springtime scene particularly captivates me, a delicate green meadow with lambs gamboling about in the frisky manner of youth, the very spirit of spring time, inspiring the beholder to at once shake the dust of the city and hie him to 'green fields and pastures new.' Is not this the very province of art?

"This collection of wood block prints will remain at the High Museum of Art throughout this coming week."

Metal Pieces Shown.

Providing variety to the exhibit is a group of metal craft exhibits by Millicent Strange Edson, who has been an outstanding exponent of her craft throughout the country. She has been awarded prizes for her work in several national exhibits and several of the winning pieces are on display at the museum.

Among these is a silver locket in cloisonne enamel which won a prize at Buffalo, N. Y.; a silver chain with plique a jour enamel, a prize winner in Boston, Mass.; a small copper box enriched with panels of Limoges enamel and selected by a collector as one of the most interesting pieces on exhibition.

Mrs. Edson has learned her art in her own country, England, in the workshop of a famous craftsman, Henry Wilson, whose friendship for her brother, Edward F. Strange, assistant keeper of the museum of South Kensington and noted art critic, secured for her unusual advantages in her chosen work. Mrs. Edson's studio was in Washington for a number of years but she is now a resident of Lakemont, Ga. Her work will be on exhibit until June 4.

Captain LINDBERGH conquered the Atlantic with an air-cooled motor

Captain Lindbergh triumphed for two reasons—ability and a faithful motor. Ability was the more important, but — modestly — he credits the motor . . . . .

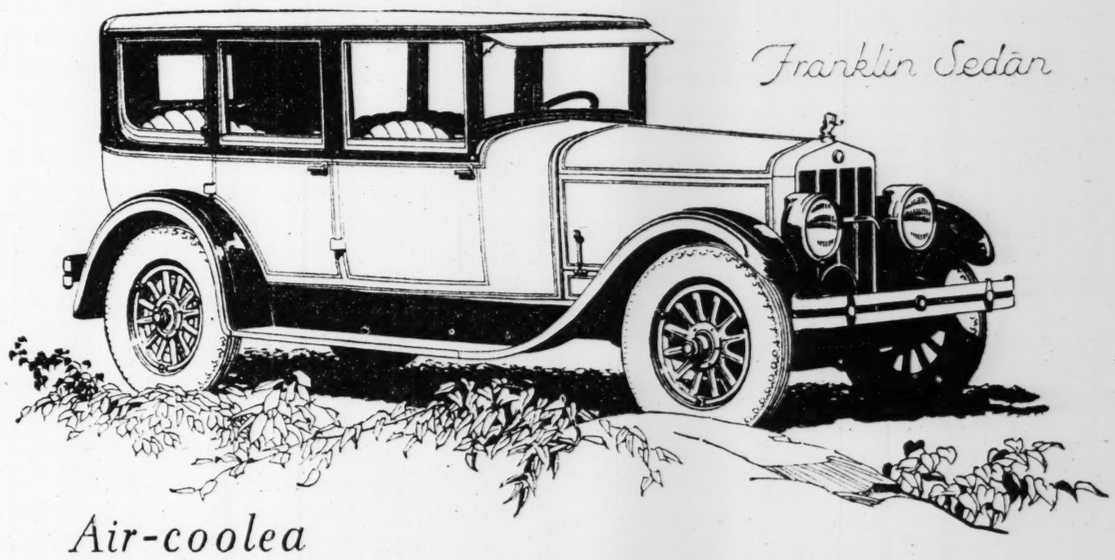

NEVER has so much responsibility been placed on a single motor. For 3600 miles it purred prettily and sweetly, never once hesitating to respond to a call. Through 1000 miles of rain, sleet and fog, from the very wave tops to 10,000 feet and back again in a few minutes, endeavoring to throw off the encompassing storm; from temperate warmth to freezing altitudes and back again, with never a complaint from the faithful air-cooled motor.

Why are Lindbergh, Acosta, Byrd and a host of the leading air pilots so enthusiastic about air-cooled motors? Evidently they know there is less to go wrong, fewer moving parts, no water to boil or freeze, no radiator and jackets to burst, no pumps to fail, a much greater cruising radius due to a more economical engine and larger fuel-carrying capacity. Air-cooling leads to reliability, to weight saving and to higher motor efficiency.

This latest triumph of the air is a most astounding demonstration of a cooling system. Maintaining 107 miles per hour for 33½ hours and never a sign of cooling trouble.

Of this achievement Franklin is justly proud. Franklin perfected air-cooling for the world. Franklin owners are as confident of their air-cooled motors as the pilots are of theirs. Experience has shown owners that principles just as original and advanced as air-cooling are also responsible for the outstanding comfort, ease of handling, safe control, roadability and long life.

All that Franklin stands for is typified by Franklin ownership. Lindbergh's history-making feat added to day-by-day experience, only serves to show again why the Franklin Owner's next car is so generally another Franklin.

DRASTIC CHANGES IN SYSTEM URGED

propriations. The problem can be solved by tax increases, but I hope to discuss the question of how we can, without increased taxation, make funds available to efficient and worthy departments and institutions, by decreasing expenses, cutting down waste, consolidating activities, effecting savings in purchases, and by changes in the financial system.

All to One Fund.

"In the first place, all income from whatever source and whatever kind should go into the general fund, except such income as represents special service for an individual, as tuition fees, board and sales of products at institutions, and all departments and institutions of the state government should be supported by an appropriation.

"This means that there shall be no special funds. I take the view that it would be manifestly unfair if the legislature, in view of the decrease in income for the general fund, should determine to cut appropriations while other departments are supported in comparative affluence from special funds.

"Should this legislation fail to pass, then there is a measure designed to save large sums in interest which ought to be enacted. All funds, general and special, that is, all state revenue, should be imbursed to the state treasury, and all disbursements be made on warrant of the governor, with the right and power of the chief executive to impress or to use any funds, that is, special funds, when in the treasury, to the extent of his borrowing power, for the payment of school teachers. Under the present system, special funds, collected largely in a few months, lie idle and untouched in the treasury, while the state has to borrow money to pay school teachers. Under the proposed plan the special funds may be impressed for temporary needs, anticipating the collection of general revenue, and postponing the dates and shortening the terms of loans, and effecting a saving of at least $100,00 in interest charges per annum.

Special Funds.

"Salutary legislation could be passed requiring the departments supported by special funds, funds which the said departments collect and expend with no control over them, to turn into the general treasury the excess of funds over the expenses of the department or board 30 days after the close of the calendar year. We have some departments with savings accounts. I approve of saving rather than spending, but this money should be placed in the general fund in the treasury.

"There are a few changes that could be effected in our disbursing system. The treasury's office and staff should be enlarged by constitutional amendment to take care of a centralized and modernized disbursing system.

"There should be uniformity of collections of all revenue. All funds should be collected by one central authority, under one control. The central collecting agency should take over the many collecting agencies and turn all income into the state treasury.

Delinquent Taxes.

"These two important functions, collecting and disbursing, should be under two major departments only. The details can be worked out.

As an instance of savings effected in the audit of the comptroller general's department, I have explained in detail a complete plan for a check on county tax collector's settlements. We have sent one auditor in an effort to collect delinquent taxes and in a year there has been turned into the treasury nearly $40,000. In one year, three auditors could turn into the treasury net of expenses, $125,000 annually, of delinquent ad valorem taxes.

"The gasoline tax, which has now reached high proportions, about $6,000,000 annually, should be collected monthly instead of quarterly. Oil companies, at times under quarterly settlements owe startling amounts, and every now and then a small company fails owing the state and having no assets. It would impose no hardship as oil companies make monthly reports to home offices, and the tax is not paid until it has been collected from the consumer. The transfer of this tax to the treasury monthly will add practically $500,000 to the treasury balance, and add $10,000 to the state's income. In addition, all distributers of gasoline should be required to register as such in comptroller's office and file indemnity bond.

Saving in Pensions.

"A change in the method of pension payments would produce a saving of about $15,000 a year, by the simple method of payments direct by check instead of through ordinaries. Instead of paying a fee of $2 per pensioner to the ordinary, or about $20,000 a year, checks could be mailed direct at a cost of $5,000 and we could secure better receipts through the clearing of checks through banks.

"The oil inspection fee should be divorced from the department of agriculture. This fee should be collected in the central collecting office. With the distillation test substituted for the gravity test, and the inspectors cut from 190 to the smallest possible number, we would save $100,000 a year to the state. The laboratory for the distillation test should be at a school of technology and engineering school, for three reasons: This scientific work could be more efficiently done at a college; second, the educational value to our young men in practical work; third, it will enable us to materially increase our appropriation to our engineering and technological school without additional burden of taxation.

"The fertilizer tag tax should be collected by the central collecting agency, divorcing it from the department of agriculture, and the test should be made at a college fully equipped to teach agricultural science, for the same reason as above stated. This would result in a substantial saving, and the general assembly would be enabled to materially increase the appropriation to our college equipped to teach agricultural science without strain upon income.

Wonderful Opportunity.

"I have suggested ways of reducing costs at some points, and thus releasing funds for better service in other directions. If we are to make governmental service most efficient the general assembly of 1927 has a wonderful opportunity. We learn from business that today is the day of consolidation, avoidance of duplication of activities, and small economies, which mean increased profits and services.

"The state could reorganize its fiscal and administrative system and coordinate and reduce in number all activities into 12 or 14 major departments, with the executive in charge and the following subdivisions as a basis—under which grouping all of our present activities can be placed.

"Education, highways, finance, treasury, agriculture, corporation, conservation, health and hygiene, penal and corrective, eleemosynary, labor and industry, law, state.

Wants Budget Law.

"This affects only the executive branch through administrative heads and recognizes the three-fold division of power and authority under our constitution, the legislative, the judiciary and the executive with administrative heads.

"There should be a modern executive budget law in this state. By this I mean a law should be well drawn, creating a director of the budget and requiring that all appropriations be made under the budget law. Any budget law without authority in the director is of no permanent benefit. The present budget and investigating committee simply receives the requests for appropriations and passes on them in the light of present appropriations and anticipated income.

"There should be a centralized system of purchasing under a board of control. I would like to see small supplies standardized and stocked by the state and large equipment let to contract. Coal and many other supplies could be purchased in large quantities at considerable savings. The elasticity feature must be recognized in the case of certain purchases at certain institutions.

Three Modern Plans.

"Now these three modern plans, that is, the reorganization, the executive budget and the control of purchasing require the painstaking and sympathetic thought and consideration of our representatives. As a beginning, an efficiency commission could be set up by this legislature with the right to employ technical and expert assistance in working out the plan. I am opposed to any commission that is not set up by legislative authority and one not number among its members some legislators. The most useful commissions have existed when the legislature named five, the chief executive two, with two fiscal officers and the governor, ex-officio members. This would prevent the copying of laws of other states and yet embody all new functions that are desirable without topheaviness.

"The auditor wishes to again emphasize the fact that the fiscal officials have often had a vexatious problem in attempting to hold the various departments and institutions within the limit of their appropriations. An individual is wise who lives within his means. Most states have penalties for officials who exceed their appropriations, and such penalties are salutary. I want to say that we can never hope to make progress in Georgia until an official learns that the department or institution must live within the appropriation.

Encourages Extravagance.

"Deficiency appropriations, except those for acute and unforeseen emergencies, encourage extravagance in office, rewards the official who disobeys legislative instructions and penalizes the one who lives within the limits prescribed.

"For what sound reason does the legislature struggle with an appropriation act, divided the income to the various units according to the needs and in their best judgment, and then puts the man on the back who disobeys their instructions with a deficiency appropriation?

"We are much criticized about our appropriations to higher education, and no one who loves his state could be thoroughly satisfied with conditions existing as to our higher educational system. I do not believe that abuse and criticism and invidious comparison with other states can solve the problem. Let us face facts.

Many Colleges.

"We are appropriating $1,334,750 to the university and its branches, or 65 per cent of the total amount that is given by one of the South Atlantic states that appropriates most. Yet many of our appropriations to our different educational units are pitifully small, as compared with other states' similar units. What is the answer? Ten is the greatest number of state colleges in any of these states. Georgia has 24.

"Can Georgia feed 24 hungry colleges? This invites consideration and study, when other states are now reducing colleges by consolidation and elimination.

"Of course I realize I am discussing this question from the financial end and the educator approaches it from another viewpoint.

"Can we not secure a survey of the educational system and institutions in this state and map out a schedule of what we should undertake educationally, how many large, well-equipped colleges would be required to carry out the plan and the amount of money required to maintain and equip this system? We need concerted action to secure this result.

"The auditor is no educational expert and is not discussing this question from that angle, but looking at our population, or resources, our taxable values, the auditor sees no hope of adequate support for 24 colleges of various types and grades.

Question At Issue.

"The question is whether we shall have a small number of well-equipped, well-supported colleges, and a large university, whose curricula and whose faculty could amply provide for the boys and girls, or shall we limp along with 24 schools and colleges meagerly maintained, poorly equipped, and every year have the message go out as to how ill-supported and poorly equipped are our colleges.

"I believe that an educational survey commission should be authorized by this legislature and that at least five members should come from the legislature, two from the educational group, two from citizens of the state who are business men with the public welfare at heart, the chancellor of the university, the superintendent of public instruction, two fiscal officers of the state, and the governor ex-officio, and that this commission undertake this survey, with the right and with sufficient funds to employ educational experts' advice, particularly that of the federal government and the general education board, who shall study the local conditions. As a result of this survey we should know what is the matter, what is required, and then we should at once apply the remedy and raise the money.

"I know that local pride and fear have operated to keep such a survey from being made, but I believe now all will cooperate. Much good work has been done in the past, but still the limitation upon former commissions prevented anything much beyond a discussion of the needs of various colleges, but we want to go deeper and find out what is necessary to give our boys and girls the best educational facilities upon the least wasteful, most economical plan, and when we do this the money will be provided. A complete survey might reveal other than financial ills in our educational system.

Has Been Supported.

"In concluding these recommendations, I feel that it is but right I should express thanks for the support I have received from the governor, and for the attitude of the heads of departments, boards and institutions. I have been treated with uniform courtesy and consideration. The members of the general assembly personally and as a body have treated this department with every consideration. The press of the state have given largely of their space in carrying details of audits, and such publicity in my opinion has been very salutary.

"In a review of three years it can be seen that much progress has been made, but the goal is still far ahead of us.

"The legislature will have much important business before it. I firmly believe that you will, without bitterness and rancor, dispatch the same for the good of Georgia. I think you are going to enact prudent and carefully planned laws. The governor, who shall counsel and advise with you, will, in my judgment, cooperate in every way to help you. The auditor is anxious to cooperate with the executive and legislative branches, to his furthest capacity, to improve state government, to secure 100 cents in value for every dollar of tax money expended."

could be named by the district or voted on by the city at large, under the tentative plans.

Mayor Praised.

Citizens of Atlanta expect city council to initiate some plan to reduce the size of council and to provide a board of education which will live within its means and at the same time operate a good educational program, council members said Saturday. They praised the mayor for his stand in the matter, and declared he would make many practicable suggestions and offer good advice to those who are expected to advance the plan.

It has been suggested that the mayor and the chairman of the school committee of city council be made ex-officio members of the board of education, and that the mayor be authorized to use his veto power, at least in matters concerning expenditure of money.

The mayor also would be vested with additional power and committees would be combined so that the number would be materially reduced. Another feature of the proposal, which still is in the formative stage, is that council select by vote all department heads.

Several conferences between those closely associated in outlining the plan are slated for the early part of this week, and when the matter is brought before the charter revision body it is expected that it will have the backing of strong civic organizations, business clubs, labor and other influential organizations in addition to tacit councilmanic sanction.

MAN CONFESSES TO FIVE KILLINGS

ize what you have done?" was the first question asked him.

Tells Story of Blood.

"I don't remember," he replied, but there was a note of uncertainty in his voice for the first time. The break followed swiftly and five minutes later, the tale was told complete.

More than 2,000 persons visited the morgue to view the bodies today and when the officers arrived with their prisoner, several hundred were milling through the establishment and in the street outside.

The room was quickly cleared, the lights dimmed and the cross examination got under way. When Levine confessed, the doors were locked and everyone in the room was warned not to breath a word of the confession. The prisoner was hurried through a side door, bundled into an automobile and rushed back to the city jail.

The breakdown of the prisoner really began when Mrs. Lizzell Bants, a fortune teller, identified him as one of two men who came to her Friday at noon and nervously asked if "they would get in any trouble over the murders."

Levine denied that he was the man, but later admitted that "he might have gone there."

He was questioned for an hour, locked up and then brought out again. For two hours steady streams of questions were directed at him. He weakened perceptibly but stubbornly stuck to his protestations of innocence.

Then he was abruptly taken to the morgue and the last spread of his resistance gave way in the presence of the persons he had slaughtered.

Levine is 38 years old and was born in Polk county. He has been living in Tampa for the last 5 or 6 years.

Ax Murders Blamed.

It could not be learned tonight just what his relations were to a "Ryles" family whom he thought he was killing. Ryles, however, told the police Friday that he was sure it grew out of the Rowell ax murders last year.

At that time he received some information about the case and when he turned it over to the police, he and his family were threatened, he said.

Two months ago an unidentified man attempted to break in the cottage—he was living at the Merrell house at the time—and frightened away, dropped a heavy railroad maul. Ryles became convinced then, he said, that he and his family were in danger and he moved to the country.

The authorities speculated as to Levine's connection with the Rowell murders. The two crimes are similar, the murderer committing them with almost identical weapons and much in the same manner. Ryles' story and Levine's statement that he mistook the Merrells for the others, led to the theory that Levine might also be responsible for that crime. He was not questioned about it tonight, however.

Heir to Belgium's Throne Pays Tribute to Lindbergh

:: SAYS FLIER REPRESENTS HOPE OF FUTURE ::

Brussels, May 28.—(AP)—For the first time during a week of ceremonies in his honor, Captain Lindbergh sat tonight beside a young man his own age, sharing his own tastes and talking his own language. It was at a dinner at the American club, and his companion was the 25-year-old Prince Leopold, duke of Brabant, heir to the Belgian throne and aviation enthusiast.

After dinner was over, Lindbergh, the prince and a group of Belgian aviators sat in a little circle, talking aviation, while a group of elderly gentlemen of considerable importance impatiently waited for them to go home and get to bed, in order that they themselves might leave.

The banquet which closed Captain Lindbergh's busy afternoon and evening, brought him an expression in English of Prince Leopold's sincere admiration, which the young heir-apparent assured him "could be expressed only with great difficulty after the tremendous enthusiasm the great flight had provoked."

The prince, speaking fluently in Lindberg's own tongue, concluded by saying, "All I may say appears rather faint after the receptions you have had in France and Belgium, but I simply want to say how I admire your great achievement."

Two minutes of cheering followed the speech, and Premier Jaspar then offered his felicitations.

"I congratulate Captain Lindbergh," he said, "not only upon his extraordinary flight, but also for his serenity of soul. He remains unchanged amid all these honors. He personifies simplicity and heroism.

"The sentiments of the American people are well known to Belgium, and your achievement will help to bring the two countries closer together than ever. Captain Lindbergh represents the hope of the future."

LINDBERGH GIVEN BELGIAN DECORATION

the first time Lindbergh dropped his reserve and talked freely. They are the same age and it soon was no question of royalty or democracy between them.

Lindbergh Finds Pal.

They were such firm friends at parting that Leopold told Lindbergh that he must call tomorrow on the prince and his bride, the former Princess Astrid of Sweden. Lindbergh is of Swedish ancestry on his father's side.

The prince told Lindbergh that Astrid insisted she would not permit the American to leave Belgium until she had met him.

Lindbergh appeared at the banquet in full dress, with the medal and ribbon of the Order of Leopold pinned on his breast. His inability to speak French was no handicap, as he and the prince talked animatedly throughout the dinner in English.

Both the prince and Premier Henri Jaspar who also spoke, praised Lindbergh's courage and daring. In reply, Lindbergh repeated the story of his trans-Atlantic flight.

Tells Story Again.

It was the fourth time he was obliged to tell it in Brussels. When he was received at the royal palace, he told it first to Queen Elizabeth. She was so enthusiastic she had her son Charles, Count of Flanders, brought in, and then her daughter, Princess Maria Joe. Lindbergh had to tell it over to both in turn.

It was an animated gathering, as everyone spoke English and Lindbergh was able to enjoy himself thoroughly. The queen asked Lindbergh to convey her respects to his mother. Lindbergh was not in the slightest self-conscious in the presence of royalty and answered without embarrassment the numerous questions the queen put to him about his flight. The bond of sympathy between Lindbergh and the royal family was strengthened by the fact that the king is an enthusiast over aviation.

Before he left the palace, Lindbergh was compelled to sign his name in the autograph book of Princess Maria Jose. The king insisted on introducing Lindbergh personally to his officers. Leopold and Astrid, the Duke and Duchess of Brabant, were not present during the palace reception.

Lindbergh greeted the soldier-king with the ready grace that has made him famous.

"I have heard much of the famous soldier king of the Belgians," the young American said.

Comes in Famous Plane.

Lindbergh came here in the Spirit of St. Louis, the monoplane in which he made his one-man flight from New York to Paris. He arrived at the Evere aerodrome shortly after 3 p. m., making the trip from Paris in two hours.

The city of 1,000,000 persons greeted him with an enthusiasm that rivaled the demonstrations in Paris. He was driven through the flag-bedecked streets, lined with cheering thousands, to the brownstone American embassy. There a great crowd gathered to cheer him.

Before he was taken to the royal palace, another of the incidents occurred which endear the unassuming young man to those who know him. Officials hunted for him shortly after his arrival so he could be taken to a balcony of the embassy to answer the plaudits of the thousands outside.

Playing With Children.

After a search they found him. Lindbergh, oblivious of the honors that awaited him, was playing happily with the embassy children.

On his way to the palace Lindbergh was driven to the tomb of Belgium's unknown soldier, overlooking the city, where he laid a wreath as America's tribute to the fallen soldiers of Belgium. A crowd of 8,000 stood in reverent silence as the American performed his graceful act.

After the ceremony at the palace, Lindbergh was driven to the Royal Aero club to be presented with a gold plaque and meet the Belgian air aces. A dinner at the American club tonight was the final event on the day's program. Tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. Lindbergh will fly across the channel to London.

Lindbergh came from Paris in a downpour but kept himself dry in the closed cabin of his plane. He mistook the landing signals and came down in a far corner of the field, obliging the diplomats, warriors and officials on the reception committee to make a cross-country drive to receive him. Before coming down he circled the field three times while the crowd cheered.

Remains in Plane.

Lindbergh remained in his plane until the auto bearing the reception committee pulled alongside. He shook hands with the reception committee through the windows. Lindbergh was officially welcomed by Premier Henri Jasper and the minister of war, Comte Charles de Broqueville.

A crowd of 40,000 was out on the field and Belgian troops surrounded the plane, guarding it with their bayonets to prevent a repetition of the damage caused by souvenir hunters on his arrival in Paris.

Lindbergh and the plane were then taken to an elevated platform so that all in the crowd could see him. He received an overwhelming demonstration, a thousand children waving American flags while the crowd cheered itself hoarse.

Lindbergh had only time for a few handshakes and to refuse several hundred requests for photographs before he was driven to the embassy. He praised the performance of his plane during the flight.

"It was a splendid flight and I enjoyed every minute of it," he said. "The motor is in splendid shape. We could circle Europe without overhauling it."

Demonstrates Skill.

Lindbergh again demonstrated his uncanny navigating skill in today's flight. He had only his small compass, the size of a watch, and used no maps, flying by sight. He held absolutely true to his course.

The flight was made in constant rain, mists and "bumpy" weather, obliging him to fly at varying altitudes of from 400 to 6,000 feet. Nevertheless, he averaged 100 miles an hour. Escort planes which went out from here to meet him found him exactly on his course at Mons, but had difficulty keeping up with his speedy plane. He easily outdistanced commercial planes which followed him from Paris. Reporters and photographers in the commercial planes became seasick from the rough going.

Lindbergh arrived in a borrowed helmet, as a souvenir hunter in Paris who volunteered to hold the helmet in which he crossed the Atlantic disappeared with it. He wore one lent by a French flier. It didn't fit.

No Visit To Berlin.

Lindbergh announced definitely he would not go to Berlin or Rome and said a visit to Sweden depends on the length of time he remains in London. The aviator, who is of Swedish descent, was much interested when he was told that Prince Leopold would attend the dinner tonight. He asked at once if Princess Astrid, of Sweden, Leopold's bride, would be there, but was informed she had to attend a royal function.

Lindbergh brought only the most essential clothes with him, two small suitcases and a hat box. His other garments were sent by train.

Before leaving for London tomorrow Lindbergh will be received at the Hotel De Ville, where he will sign the golden book. His name will be on the page next to that signed by the former kaiser and not far from the signature of the Prince of Wales.

GRACEFUL GESTURE MADE BY LINDBERGH.

Paris, May 28.—(United News.)—Charles Lindbergh spun away from Paris today with a graceful gesture of friendship and farewell to the millions whose hearts he conquered in the name of America.

As he started for Brussels, Lindbergh swooped low over the Place de la Concorde.

The assembled thousands had a moment of alarm as the daring pilot swung so close to the Luxor obelisk in the great square that he seemed almost in danger of hitting it.

Then a blur of color fluttered down from the plane as a large French tri-color, with a message attached to a sandbag, was released.

When the flag was rescued from the crowd that fell upon it, the message was unfolded and read. It said:

"Goodbye, dear Paris. Ten thousand thanks for your kindness to me.

"CHARLES LINDBERGH."

American Saves Flag.

The flag was saved from the eager souvenir hunters by Howard Darring, an American. It was turned over to Raymond Orteig, donor of the $25,000 prize which Lindbergh won by his trans-Atlantic flight.

Orteig arranged to have the message and flag framed. He telegraphed to Lindbergh in Brussels:

"They will be given to the public, who never will forget the wonderful deed you accomplished and how you endeared yourself to their hearts."

PRINCESS OF BELGIUM GIVES LINDBERGH ROSE.

BY HENRY WALES.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Brussels, May 28.—King Albert received Captain Charles A. Lindbergh this afternoon in the throne room of the royal palace and decorated him with the Order of Leopold, personally pinning the massive gold medal on the aviator's breast.

King Albert congratulated the flyer on his feat of conquering the Atlantic and introduced him to the queen and Princess Maria Jose, aged 19, who was thrilled at meeting the hero and who handed him a rose, and Prince Charles.

The royal meeting was informal. The king did not kiss Lindy like the French officials, but shook hands warmly.

Getting Over Cold.

"I am getting over a bad cold," said Lindbergh, blowing his nose often. "I have no engagements early tomorrow. I want some sleep. I only had four hours sleep each of the last two nights. My ship is in fine shape and as solid as a house, and I won't need to touch her tomorrow—just turn her over and drive off. The French told me at Le Bourget this morning that I had 87 gallons of gasoline left in the tanks, which was enough for six hours flying after I arrived from New York.

"I will leave Brussels tomorrow about 3 o'clock, circle over the city, and then fly straight to London, circle there, and land at Croydon a few minutes after six. Rain won't stop me unless it is a heavy storm. The only thing which will stop me is fog. It is not necessary to take any chances with this ship. I don't need weather reports for short flights like this, if the weather is good enough to jump off. I can always turn around and come back if I encounter bad weather."

ST. LOUIS PREPARING FOR FLIER'S RETURN.

St. Louis, May 28.—(AP)—Preparing for the return of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, trans-Atlantic flier, to St. Louis, Mayor Victor Miller today appointed a citizens' Lindbergh reception committee of 250 men and women to have full charge.

"Never in the history of St. Louis has there been the interest shown in an event that has been manifested in the successful unprecedented and epoch-making flight of Captain Charles Lindbergh," the mayor said in a statement. "The people of St. Louis are united in the thought that the celebration in St. Louis upon his return home should surpass all celebrations of any kind held."

OFFER OF $720,000 MADE TO LINDBERGH.

London, May 28.—An offer of $720,000 for a year's work in the movies will be made to Captain Charles Lindbergh when he lands at Croyden tomorrow, it was reported tonight.

The offer was said to have been prepared by J. V. Bryson, London director of a European motion picture company of which Carl Laemmle, American film magnate, is a director. The pictures would be made in Hollywood. The reported price would be a record for such an engagement.

New Recreation Hall at Camp Civitania Is Dedicated by Club Representative

Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Camp Civitania committee of the Civitan club, presenting deed of recreation hall to Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, chairman of Girl Scout committee, during dedication exercises Saturday.

A spacious recreation hall which sits on the hillside approximately 75 feet away from the placid waters of a woodland lake at Camp Civitania, Atlanta Girl Scout camp, was formally presented to the scout organization Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Camp Civitania committee of the Civitan club, at appropriate dedication ceremonies.

The new recreation hall is approximately 50 feet wide and 75 feet long and has an unusually smooth floor upon which the girl scouts may "trip the light fantastic" or use in any way they might desire. It belongs to them. The Civitan club has deeded the property to the organization, and now has given the girls the recreation hall located in the heart of the camp amidst a group of camp huts, a mess hall and other up-to-date camp houses.

In making the presentation of the hall to Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, chairman of the Girl Scout camp committee, Mr. Neely said that it was the desire of the Civitan club to provide for the young girls a recreation camp where they might keep themselves physically fit and avail themselves of the splendid mental and moral training given by the camp instructors.

Express Gratitude.

Mrs. Ashcraft responded with words of appreciation in behalf of the scout committee and the girls and declared that the organization would continue to improve the site, and that the Civitan club might rest assured that there would never be anything to reflect against the civic organization which had so generously given the splendid recreation hall and camp.

The girl scouts assembled rendered several appropriate vocal selections during the ceremonies. Misses Louise Wesley, Helen Bauer and Frances Holsenback, girl scouts, made brief talks, expressing their thanks for the new hall.

Immediately following the dedication exercises, flag-raising ceremonies were participated in by the more than three score of persons assembled. The girl scouts who acted as colorbearers and who conducted this ceremony were Misses Ann Wynn Fleming, Margaret Bates, Virginia Heard, Dorothy Fugate, Joe Newberry and Louise Wesley.

Beef Served.

A barbecue served in the dining hall of the camp brought to a close the ceremonies of the occasion.

The camp will open for its third season June 20. Since the purchase of the camp site and its presentation to the scout organization by the Civitan club in 1924 the maintenance of the camp has been one of the major projects of the Civic club, and many of the improvements have been made by the Camp Civitania committee of the club.

Mrs. Frank Holland, camp director and head of the Girl Scouts, had charge of the arrangements, while Mrs. William Talley, girl scout director, called the assemblage to order at the beginning of the exercises. Mrs. Ashcraft, in addition to being the chairman of the Girl Scouts' camp committee, is a national vice president of the organization.

that a committee of citizens was to be named to supervise school expenditures for this year. The board accepted the proposal rather than permit the school doors to be closed to more than 50,000 students.

Outlook Bright.

A spirit of optimism was expressed Saturday night by members of the school board concerning an agreement between the two bodies, since an impasse seemed to have been encountered in the attempt of the board to offer a budget acceptable to the advisory board and conversely the advisory committee held that the board was not showing the proper spirit of cooperation.

Another problem facing the two conference bodies will be some solution of payment of William James, auditor, who several weeks ago completed an audit of 1926 accounts of the board, and submitted what certain members of the board termed "an educational survey." He billed the board for approximately $3,400 and Mr. Hoffman declined to recommend payment on the grounds that the board is now bound to pay for a survey it did not authorize.

It is known that Harold Hirsch, chairman of the advisory committee, will insist that the board pay Mr. James, although the latter has expressed his willingness to mark the account paid in full if his audit will prevent what he termed "extravagant expenditures, which have forced the board into debt" in the future.

Report Submitted.

The advisory committee submitted a report to the school board which among other things asked that Boys High and Tech High schools be consolidated, recommended that other consolidations be made, that kindergartens be discontinued at least until the board is in a financial position to bear the added expense and discontinuance of purchase of school books free.

Members of the advisory committee have held that the board in failing in almost every instance to adopt the suggestions of the committee has been lacking in cooperation. Board members retaliated with the charge that the committee was attempting to force a policy of retrenchment in education in the system which would react to the detriment of every student of the entire department.

All these matters and many others will be up for discussion when the two committees meet Wednesday in Mr. Hirsch's office.

COMMISSION COAL RATES PROTESTED

Louisville, May 28.—(AP)—Coal operators here said today the effect of the interstate commerce commission's order reducing rates on lake cargo coal from the eastern Ohio and Pennsylvania coal fields, will have a serious effect on the southern fields.

"If the interstate commerce commission adds 20 cents to the differential of 25 cents under which the mines of Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia are handicapped at present, it means ruin to this section unless the Louisville and Nashville railroad is allowed to absorb the increase by reducing its ton rate," said Louis Powell, general manager here for the Alex Malcomson Coal company.

John Dewberry, general coal and coke agent for the L. & N., said the order as interpreted here meant the coal operators would be required to pay 45 cents more on each ton of coal delivered over the Great Lakes water route than competing operators in Ohio and Pennsylvania. This road, he said, handled 8,000,000 of the 30,000,000 tons of lake cargo coal each summer. Of this, 5,000,000 tons are from the Kentucky fields 500,000 from Tennessee and the remainder from West Virginia. He said the L. & N. could not change rates without permission of the I. C. C.

Mr. Walker is a veteran in the auto game with many years of experience to his credit. For eighteen years he was service road man for various automobile manufacturers and for the past fifteen months he has been one of the leading members of the sales force for the Darnall company.

While Mr. Walker will immediately assume his duties as service manager, it was made plain that he will not retire from his position on the sales staff of the Darnall company, but will continue this activity in connection with his new work.

Octopus Yields Atlantan's Body In Savage Fight

Port Townsend, Wash., May 28.—(AP)—A huge octopus, bearing in its tentacles the body of one of five men who went down on the tug Warren early Tuesday, gave up its human prize after an hour's battle fifty feet under water with A. E. Hook, a diver. Hook related his story here Friday night upon arriving with the body.

"The diver was under water repairing a fish net, he said, when he sighted the devilfish making his way along the bottom of the sound with the body in his tentacles.

Seizing a pike pole, Hook attacked the sea monster.

Minutes wore on as the diver thrust and lunged at the octopus, which gave savage battle but grimly held to the body. Centering his thrusts on the middle section of the spider-like demon Hook literally cut his tentacled adversary to ribbons before the death struggle was ended.

The octopus sank back, apparently mortally wounded, and lay on the muddy bottom of the sound, while Hook pried the tentacles from around the body.

In Port Townsend the body was tentatively identified as that of H. Healey, cook on the ill-fated tug. Attempts were being made to get in communication with his relatives, who are thought to live near Atlanta, Ga.

None of the bodies of the other four men aboard the tug has been recovered. The craft dropped out of sight early Tuesday morning while en route from Seattle to Victoria.

GOVERNOR MARTIN DECLINES TO HAVE SALARY RAISED

Tallahassee, Fla., May 28.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin considers $9,000 a year salary quite enough because he takes into account the "honor of serving my state."

The lower house of the legislature recently passed a bill to increase the executive's salary to $12,000, but the governor, in a letter today to Senator W. C. Hodges, chairman of the senate appropriations committee, put his foot down on the proposal.

"The honor of serving my state and of doing what I can for the people of Florida is sufficient compensation without additional remuneration," he wrote. "May I ask that the senate decline to increase the salary while I am governor."

JEFFERSON SHERIFF CLEARED IN TAX CASE

Louisville, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—The jury in the case of M. A. Evans vs. D. C. Thomas, collector and sheriff, respectively, of Jefferson county, brought in a verdict here this afternoon in superior court in favor of the sheriff, absolving the latter officer in every allegation made against him as to improper handling of $45,000 worth of Jefferson county tax fi. fas. for the years 1922-23-24.

The case has been on trial here for 10 days, and was marked by a stubborn fight on the part of attorneys on both sides.

PTOMAINE POISON PUTS FORT LAND IN GRAVE STATE

Veterans Cancel Sale of Poppies For Flood Relief

Atlantans who have annually purchased poppies on the streets of the city on May 30, for the benefit of the Disabled Veterans of Foreign Wars are warned not to do so this year. The Atlanta post, No. 390, Veterans of Foreign Wars, voted at a recent meeting not to hold a sale this year, according to announcement Saturday by J. H. Bush, commander of the Atlanta post.

At a recent meeting it was decided that since the public has been called upon for so many donations for rebel work during the past few months that a sale would not be held at this time.

In place of the poppy sale, officials of the Atlanta post are urging every member of the organization to contribute as liberally as possible to the Mississippi flood relief fund.

ing to various cities named by the prisoner to see if Olmstead is wanted.

DON'T BELIEVE IT, DECLARES BOYKIN.

"There isn't a word of truth to Olmstead's wild story," Solicitor General John A. Boykin of Fulton county declared Saturday night when apprised of the details of the confession purported to have been made by A. H. Olmstead in the South Carolina penitentiary at Columbia.

"Ed Stepheus, assistant solicitor, went to Columbia several weeks ago and interviewed Olmstead. His story was nothing more than the ravings of a dope user—Olmstead is a confirmed addict. All he is trying to do is to be brought to Atlanta for questioning but my office will not accommodate him."

Jack Lance, Atlanta gambler, was convicted on May 7 last of the murder of Bert Donaldson, former investigator for the solicitor general's office, in the Georgian Terrace hotel here. The killing took place on July 29, 1926, and is thought to have been executed by professional gamblers and other criminals who sought to remove Donaldson so that he would not assist in prosecuting him. Ten other men were indicted with Lance last February and five are now in custody awaiting trial.

Man Frisked.

Hoke Bell, of Carrollton, Ga., reported to police Saturday night that his pocket containing $28 was picked during the afternoon while he was standing in front of the city hall at Forsyth and Marietta street.

INGRAM APPOINTED TO FORD DEALERSHIP

Freeman, has been appointed Ford dealer in Decatur to succeed E. F. Tuggle.

Mr. Ingram is widely and popularly known here, being a man of extensive experience in every line of the motor industry and allied lines. Since 1921 he has held the position of sales manager for C. E. Freeman, prior to which he was associated with the Ford organization in Newnan for ten years.

His appointment was made in the face of a number of rival bids for the dealership, and it is regarded generally as a deserved tribute to the high ability and unswerving business integrity of Mr. Ingram.

Raymond Robinson, well known salesmanager of the Decatur concern, will continue in that capacity, and E. P. Jones will be in charge of providing service for the extensive clientele of the branch.

MELLON STRESSES BANKERS' DUTIES

Pittsburgh, May 28.—(AP)—The future of both America and Europe will be influenced largely by the ability of bankers to meet new responsibilities placed upon them by international financial problems, Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, told his fellow townsmen here tonight at the chamber of commerce "Favorite Sons" banquet.

Accompanied by James J. Davis, secretary of labor, Mr. Mellon reviewed the rapid growth of the banking business in America and of the financier's interest in industry. He lauded the federal reserve system as preventing panics in times of stress.

Terming old-time banking methods "haphazard," the secretary said that "instead of a coordinated system of banks, with a common reservoir of credit, we had a large number of independent banking units which, in times of stress, struggled against each other and never worked together as part of one great financial structure."

"These defects," he said, "were cured by the federal reserve system. The 12 regional banks, under the responsible coordinating influence of the federal reserve board can effect that prompt mobilization of reserve which is so essential in preventing panics."

Secretary Mellon termed the unlimited extension of Federal Reserve bank charters by the last congress "one of the most important pieces of legislation that has passed congress since the war; and the fact that it was passed by a large and united vote of both parties leads us to hope that banking is at last free of politics, and that questions of banking policy, so vitally affecting the business of the country, will hereafter be decided on the basis of financial, rather than political consideration."

Turing to American foreign investments, he said: "So great is the amount invested that the question has recently been raised as to whether such loans are safe and can eventually be repaid. As to the question of soundness, the test of security of a foreign loan is the same as in the case of a domestic loan. But the banker, floating the loan in this country, owes it to his client to exercise unusual care in investigating the security back of offerings which he may make. x x x x

"Banking is finding that, just as it earlier became involved in industry, and has been obliged to help in the solution of industrial problems, so it must now help in finding a solution of those international problems which must be solved if the world is to go forward."

BESSIE TIFT HOLDS 80TH COMMENCEMENT

Forsyth, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) The 80th annual commencement of Bessie Tift college opened Friday when the senior class presented its play. On Saturday morning a meeting of the alumnae was followed by a luncheon and Saturday evening the grand cocert of fine arts was given.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at the First Baptist church, Dr. E. C. Dargan, of the Sunday school board, Nashville, Tenn., will deliver the commencement sermon. Dr. Dargan is well known in this section, having been for several years pastor of the First Baptist church at Macon. Dr. Dargan will also conduct the annual missionary program of the college with students of the B. S. U. taking part.

Monday evening at 8 o'clock class day exercises will be held, in which seniors will deliver their caps and gowns to the juniors. This is one of the saddest features of commencement, as the graduating class realizes that their happy association of four years is at an end.

Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock Dr. William D. Nowlin, of Arcadia, Fla., will deliver the baccalaureate address. Dr. Nowlin is well known through his writings, as well as his ministerial work.

The close of the 80th year of this Baptist college for young women brings to a close a successful period under the leadership of Dr. A. Chamlee. The college has reached an independent maintenance and has begun a campaign for endowment which will permit the institution to take its place in the Southern Association of Colleges. With an additional $400,000 the college will be placed among the foremost colleges in the south, as the curriculum is now at a high standard.

MIKE PHILLIP BROGAN PASSES IN MOULTRIE

News of the death of Mike Phillip Brogan, well-known lumberman and former mayor of Moultrie, who died Saturday morning at his home in Moultrie, was received in Atlanta by his sister, Mrs. Oscar M. Ray, an employee of the Georgia Power company here.

In addition to Mrs. Ray, Mr. Brogan is survived by another sister, Mrs. Neal Duress, of New York city; his widow and two children, M. P., Jr., and Verma, and a brother, Dan M. Brogan, of New York city. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Girls' High Art Students Exhibit Craft at Rich Store

Photograph by Francis K. Price.

Demonstrating methods employed in art classes at the Girls' High school, Miss Mary Hutchins is shown sketching in the exposition of work of the half hundred girls who are taking the art course. This photograph was made at the exhibit being staged in the classroom on the fourth floor of the M. Rich & Bros. Co. department store, which will continue through June 2 with the public invited to attend.

A highly interesting exhibit of the handicraft of the Atlanta school girl and the development of her appreciation of art and beauty is being staged in the big class room on the fourth floor of the M. Rich & Bros. Co. department store.

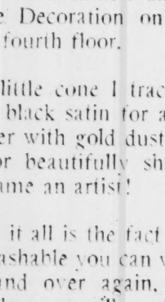

The display consists of drawings, poster work, design work on paper and cloth, costume designing, hand lettering, pen and ink sketching and various other attractive and artistic products of fifty or sixty Girls' High students under direction of Miss Katherine Cuthbert, of the school's faculty.

The display, which will continue through June 2, is open at all times, with Girls' High students in attendance to explain the exhibits. A number of the girls also actually do work of the kind shown in the exhibit, providing a striking demonstration of the methods followed in Miss Cuthbert's course. The general public is invited by the Rich store, which sponsored the exhibit as a means of attracting attention to Girls' High school and encouraging the particular work involved, to call and see the artistic displays.

"Training of the girls in this pursuit is not intended primarily to make artists of them," Miss Cuthbert said Saturday. "It has as its main purpose the matter of developing their appreciation of the beauties of everyday life. It makes them better home builders, for it gives them valuable training in blending of colors and in designing for the home, both in exterior and interior beautifying.

"Those who show a real talent for work of this kind are encouraged to pursue their studies with a view to adopting art as a career, but most of the girls who take the course do so for the practical benefit it confers. The work is elective and carries regular scholastic credit with it."

SUNDAY SUN DUE TO DISPEL RAINS, SAYS FORECASTER

Light showers in the morning that will clear up in time to save Sunday outing parties, were predicted for Atlanta and vicinity in today's forecast by C. F. von Herrmann, meteorologist of the governmental weather bureau. Moderate temperatures are scheduled to accompany the varying weather conditions.

"The rains of the past week were welcomed by farmers and gardeners of this section," the weather man said. "It is fortunate that 'Old Sol' will set in his timely appearance to clear the skies for the week-end holiday. The light sprinkling predicted for the early morning will not make the ground too soggy for picnics or country motor rides."

The temperatures today will range from 62 degrees to a maximum of 80 degrees, Mr. von Herrmann predicted.

AVIATORS LEAVE FOR PT. BARROW

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 28.—(AP)—Captain George Hubert Wilkins and Alger Graham left here at 3 o'clock this morning in the Stinson plane of the Detroit-Wilkins expedition to fly a direct course to Point Barrow.

From Point Barrow, when the weather permits, Captain Wilkins will fly into the "blind spot" of the arctic of undiscovered land.

Captain Wilkins and Alger Graham took with them from Fairbanks their wireless equipment which will be installed at Point Barrow.

BURKE COUNTY MAN IS SHOT TO DEATH

Waynesboro, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—L. O. Russell, age 40, of Burke county, was shot to death here tonight by Ivey Mock, also of the county. The only detail as to the killing is that the two men had an argument regarding cattle.

Mock surrendered to the sheriff and is in the Burke county jail charged with murder.

HOOVER APPEALS FOR AID OF NORTH

we of the north have the right and duty to bind their wounds."

"The upstanding Americans of the south who have suffered in the flood have asked for loans, not assistance, in many cases," Mr. Hoover declared.

"The method of giving the 600,000 refugees a new start was described tersely by Mr. Hoover as to giving the people seed, clothing, a stock of food and feed, shelter and household goods and a minimum of animals and implements so they will in a measure be restored to production and, if we strengthen the credit agencies, they should be able to carry on."

Reconstruction Stage.

Mr. Hoover said his address was "a report of stewardship" to all who had contributed to the Red Cross relief fund of $14,000,000 and his appeal for more funds was for the new stage of this "greatest peace-time calamity in the history of our country"—reconstruction of its victims. He said the toll of the flood was doubled since his radio appeal a month ago from Memphis for the present relief fund.

"The splendid work of devotion, of hardship and heroism of the coast guard, naval seamen and aviators, American Legion, national guard and thousands of volunteers" in rescuing the hundreds of thousands of flood victims was lauded by Mr. Hoover.

"Nor has their work been confined to saving human life, for the rescue of cattle and horses, mules and even barnyard fowls has become part of the daily job," he said. "From the landing of these refugees upon high ground has begun the period of their exile and has also begun the great work of the Red Cross. With tents and bedding supplied from the United States army depots, gigantic camps have been erected both east and west of the lowlands, stretched like great armies on opposite sides of the flood, over a thousand miles from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico.

There have been a total of 80 of these camps, some single ones of them containing as many as 20,000 people.

Three Parts of Machine.

Mr. Hoover said the great machine constructed to cope with the flood was divided into three parts—the rescue stage, the stage of exiles from homes and the stage of return and reconstruction. "As the flood sweeps southward it recedes in the north and each organization must follow in turn," he declared. "At any given point on this southward sweep the rescue stage lasts for a week, the exile stage for a month to six weeks, and the reconstruction stage will take months and even years.

"So far as we know, only half a dozen lives from the flood have been lost in the five weeks since we undertook central control and coordination of all the agencies in relief of this great catastrophe," he continued.

"To have moved 400,000 people from their homes under these dangerous circumstances and to have accomplished it with but a loss of less than six lives is the monument to their effectiveness and courage," he added.

"The rescue stage is nearly over as the crest now reaches the Gulf of Mexico," he continued. Mr. Hoover then lauded the courage and devotion of the Red Cross workers and the volunteer workers of the various communities where refugee camps are located.

"Up to the present time a total of more than 340,000 persons have been taken into these camps," Mr. Hoover said, "and more than 250,000 more have received rations outside the camps or a total exceeding 590,000 dependent upon public help. The additional group coming from the final sweep of the flood in southern Louisiana will bring the total past 600,000 dependent upon the Red Cross. Fortunately this load has not been upon us all at one time. The camps are diminishing in the extreme north as they increase in the extreme south. Tonight we have a load of about 350,000 being fed or rationed.

In praising the Red Cross and cooperating organizations and local volunteers, Mr. Hoover declared "no one has gone hungry, no one has gone unclothed, no one has gone unprotected from the ravages of disease."

"Theirs has been the first line of battle," he added.

"They have carried the burden of administering of the camps and rations to the people in villages often miles within the flood. A month ago I stated that the Red Cross was your hand carrying out the will of your great heart. It is faithfully performing that duty and that inspiration."

The final stage of reconstruction is now uppermost as the flood passes by, Mr. Hoover declared. "In Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee the waters have drained from most of the land and the state of Arkansas is rapidly emerging from the water," he added. "In Mississippi and northern Louisiana," he said, "the flood also is beginning to recede."

"As yet few have been able to return to their homes in that area, but in another two weeks we will have folded the tents in all our camps except in the southern part of Louisiana where the people will be exiled for a month yet," he continued.

Problem Does Not End.

"Unfortunately, our problem does not end when the waters have receded. These people must be returned to their farms and villags. They are returning to what is left of homes and farms to take up life again in the face of heart-breaking discouragement and losses but with resolution and with courage. Thousands have had their homes washed away or damaged, business have been prostrated, the crops have been destroyed, hundreds of thousands of animals have perished, their resources of food and forage are gone. Often enough there is but the bare land to welcome them back.

"We cannot hope to make good all the losses of these people, but we must put them safely on the road to self-support," he added. Mr. Hoover described the machine for these reconstruction as a commission in each of the three states and a finance corporation to make loans to the victims on liberal terms, formed by the bankers. The capital of the three corporations totals $1,500,000 which, with rediscount privileges by the federal intermediate credit bank of four to one increases their financial strength to $5,000,000 and this in turn to be increased by the subscriptions from the northern bankers and industries to eight to ten million dollars. In each inundated county, a committee of leading citizens to examine the conditions of the flooded people in single cases has been formed.

"All this is the emergency stage of reconstruction," he said. "Beyond this we must help to rebuild the homes and supply further household goods, animals and implements. We must assure safety against disease by widespread measures of sanitation, lasting over months. In many ways reconstruction is more difficult than the other stages.

"The excitement and appeal of the human life in jeopardy, of women and children in distress, stir the sympathies and energies of all decent men and women. This is now passing and the public loses its interest. Yet, let us not forget, we must return this one-half million of our fellow citizens to the road of self-support."

LAST DITCH LEVEE FIGHTS BEING MADE.

New Orleans, May 28.—(AP)—Two last ditch levee fights were being waged in the Atchafalaya basin tonight as the flood waters moved down both sides of the river in their final destructive blow at Louisiana before sweeping into the Gulf of Mexico.

Already more than 300 square miles on the east side of the Atchafalaya had been covered by torrents flowing through a crevasse in the levees at McCrea, approximately 130 miles northwest of New Orleans on the opposite side of the Mississippi.

Many other square miles had been covered along the lower end of the stream by backwaters of numerous lakes and bayous.

The greater part of five parishes on the west side of the river had been inundated by a slow-moving lake which had spread more than a hundred miles down the west Atchafalaya basin through the Evangeline country from breaks in Bayou des Glaises ramparts. These breaches were approximately 170 miles northwest of New Orleans, on the west side of the Mississippi river.

Backwaters Are Up.

Backwaters from the McCrea crevasse had welled slowly up the east side of the Atchafalaya to the upper tip of Pointe Coupee parish and were climbing a levee around the town of Torras, near the mouth of Old river. Engineers were doubtful whether the levee would be able to restrain the mounting waters.

In the vicinity of Grosse Tete, midway between the Mississippi and the Atchafalaya rivers in the heart of the sugar bowl, citizens of Iberville and West Baton Rouge parishes were concentrating their efforts upon the reconstruction of an old levee along Bayou Grosse Tete. Long unused, they hoped to be able to rear the levee to a sufficient height to withstand the flood waters creeping down upon their fertile fields from the north.

Even as they worked on the rampart protecting their homes from the invader approaching from the front, backwaters were threatening them from the rear, moving slowly northward and eastward from the bulging Atchafalaya and the many bayous and lakes in the vicinity. Army officers believed that there was little hope that the section could be saved from inundation.

Do You Know You Are An Artist?

I DID not know I was one until I discovered Aurora Cone Decoration on Davison-Paxon Co.'s fourth floor.

THEN with a magic little cone I traced a transfer design on black satin for a pillow, brushed it over with gold dust and filled in with color beautifully shaded and, presto—I became an artist!

THE nicest part about it all is the fact that if the material is washable you can wash the design over and over again, and the work can be done on silk, velvet, crepe, felt, leather, wood, metal, glass or any surface.

COME and try your hand—it is as simple as writing—anyone can do it.

LITTLE FIVE POINTS

"The Big Little City"

An epoch-making incident in the development of Little Five Points as Atlanta's newest community center is seen in the formal white way opening to be celebrated with appropriate ceremonies Monday night at 6 o'clock.

When Mayor I. N. Ragsdale formally presses the little electric switch to signify the opening of the white way system, it will make of Little Five Points one of the brightest spots in the city. The miniature commercial center has been attracting attention over the entire city for its activity and rapid growth.

The new white way system is characteristic of the public spirit developed among members of the community center and exemplified by the support of the merchants listed on this page. Marching forward with lengthy strides of progressiveness the merchants of Little Five Points have kept pace with the most modern commercial developments and brought to the residents of the community advantages obtainable only in the largest of commercial districts. Together with that is the personal contact and service made possible by the neighborhood stores.

The most outstanding development that has re sulted from the activities of the Little Five Points merchants and residents in cooperation with the city officials is the lighting system to be dedicated Monday. It is an achievement that many older sections of the city cannot boast of and stands as a monumental tribute to the civic energy displayed by the merchants and families of the new community.

Third Week of 'Right-Ad' Event To Close Monday

Ads mailed this afternoon should be delivered Monday morning before 9 o'clock in time for the third week's prizes of $50 in cash and 120 merchandise articles to be awarded in the $4,000 amateur ad-writing contest of The Constitution.

Friday afternoon the winners of the first and second merchandise prizes called at the office of the "Right-Ad" editor to receive their rewards. They were delighted with the variety of useful and desirable articles offered for their selection. Many desirable prizes are awarded weekly—merchandise prizes of a varied nature that are well worth any reader's serious effort.

Tomorrow afternoon the following advertising experts will serve as judges: Jack Braver, advertising manager of Effron's; Clayton Daniel, advertising manager of the Clayton Bros. company, and Ed A. Pierce, advertising manager of Parks-Chambers, Inc.

New contestants are entering this fascinating game every day and many of them are winning prizes. Anyone who has had experience, such as newspaper employees and professional ad writers, is not allowed to compete. This makes the contest fair to all who enter it.

Ideas Will Count.

Give your ideas a chance. Write about as many of the 22 contest advertisers as you please. It will cost you nothing in either time or money. You will be placed under no obligation of any kind, even if you win the $300 grand prize. So read the rules and try an ad.

A surprise announcement of interest to all contestants will be made in the next few days, probably Monday. Watch for it!

Rules.

1. The contest may be entered at any time merely by sending an advertising idea to the "Right Ad" editor, The Atlanta Constitution.
2. Everyone may compete except professional ad writers and newspaper employees. This is an amateur contest for people who have never written advertising.
3. Write about any one advertiser or as many as you like. You may win any number of prizes.
4. Each ad submitted must be on a separate sheet of paper. Write on one side of the paper only—put your name and address on the other side. Put as many ads as you want in the same envelope.
5. The contestant is under no obligation of any kind.
6. A different group of judges will be selected and announced each week from among Atlanta advertising men.
7. The names of all prize winners will be published each week and some of the prize-winning ads reproduced.

$4,000 in Cash and Prizes.

One hundred and twenty individual prizes will be awarded weekly—five prizes for the best ads on each advertiser.

Fifty dollars cash awarded weekly as a grand prize.

The four grand cash prizes of $300, $200, $100 and $50 will be awarded for the four best ideas of the entire contest.

(Copyright, 1925, Phelan & Plante.)

Tips for contestants follow:

Duffee-Freeman Furniture Company.

Here is the text of the ad that won for Mrs. Norman C. Creek, 570 East avenue, a fourth prize in the second week's competition:

"THE JUNE BRIDE'S HOME OF HER DREAMS. Select your outfit before the honeymoon. At our large store you will find furniture to exactly suit your taste—whether for a small apartment or a pretentious home. Distinctive designs in good furniture at prices that will decide you at once."

Mrs. Creeck is right. Now is the time to buy, when the Duffee-Freeman "June Bride" sale is on. This store wants the bride to buy her first outfit at the home of "Furniture of Character" and has made it well worth her while to do so.

Draughon's Business College.

It is well established that comparisons lead to a judicious choice. This applies to business schools like everything else. In choosing a business school four comparisons should be made:

1. The courses of one school should be compared with those of another school. Don't compare prices alone for often a higher price is justified by a more thorough course of training.
2. Compare the opinions of former students and remember the school whose graduates are enthusiastic over their success.
3. By actual visits compare the methods and personnel of many schools.
4. Go to the leading business men and employers and get their comparisons of the various schools.

Pedigree Milk Co.

Pedigree milk is pasteurized. While it is made from the very best milk that can possibly be had—Grade "A" milk—it is made even better and safer by the pasteurization process.

A distinction should be made between Grade "A" raw milk and Grade "A" dairies, which many contestants seem to confuse. Grade "A" milk is the richest milk from the healthiest cows—it is the best that can be had. Grade "A" dairies are those approved by the city health department inspectors as fully meeting the strictest requirements. The Southern Milk and Cream company is a Grade "A" dairy selling Grade "A" milk that has been pasteurized.

1907 Emory Class To Hold Reunion On Candler Estate

Emory University, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—With the graduation of the class of '27 at Emory university will come many reunions of other classes. Probably the most enthusiastic of the classes among the twos and sevens is the class of 1907, which is planning to hold its reunion at the beautiful estate of Walter Candler, classman of 1907 and chairman of the local reunion committee.

Fourteen classmates met at the Candler suburban home on the evening of May 25 to make final plans for the reunion. Walter Candler presided.

The class is expected to meet on the Emory campus at 9:30 o'clock on the morning of June 6. The group will spend the morning and early afternoon attending the alumni functions planned by the university and in sightseeing on the campus of their alma mater. At 4 o'clock they will gather at Walter Candler's country home to enjoy swimming, boating, tennis, and to see the Candler estate and its stable of thoroughbreds. At 7 o'clock dinner will be served at the lodge on the estate, followed by an evening of gayety and "reminiscing."

Seventy-five members of the class of '07 are living. Of these 40 have already signified their intention to attend the twentieth reunion, which is expected to be the main feature of alumni day at the Druid Hills institution. Some of the visitors will travel half across the continent to renew the ties of college days.

Major Herbert E. Marshburn, from Fort Riley, Kansas, and James O. Bickley, Houston, Texas, will probably compete for the distance record, unless Paul Haygood or Harry Wisenbaker, who are in California, find it possible to attend. Eugene Barnett, Shanghai, China, will not be able to be present.

Erlanger on Big Circuit For New Season Bookings

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

After a busy week in New York, Lewis Haase, manager of the Erlanger, returned to Atlanta Saturday with a gripful of good news for Atlanta amusement lovers, ranging all the way from the general plans for a great legitimate season beginning this fall to some new announcements concerning the light opera season and a season of comedy and drama productions for next summer similar to the Madge Kennedy-Sidney Blackmer-Charles L. Wagner offerings this spring.

One of the most important items of news Manager Haase brought back was the statement that he has succeeded in having Atlanta looped up with such cities as Louisville, Cincinnati, Chicago, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Buffalo and others of this class for next season's legitimate season. This means that the class of attractions sent to the Erlanger will be much higher than in the past and that this city will obtain virtually the same bookings as the legitimate theaters in the cities named receive.

Another announcement of interest was that Atlanta will again enjoy a series of first class comedy and dramatic productions next spring at the Erlanger theater, either by the company headed by Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer, now playing a ten weeks' engagement here, or by a company headed by artists equal in ability and standing to the two stars who have scored such a success here this season.

New York Shows.

Incidentally, Mr. Haase brought the news that the light opera season will be produced here with several of the productions brought intact from New York theaters, where they scored such heavy successes, particularly "Dearest Enemy" and "Wildflower."

While in New York Mr. Haase had a talk with Miss Claire Madjette, prima donna of the light opera company this season and also heard her sing.

"It is my firm belief that the people of Atlanta will hail the work of Miss Madjette with the wildest enthusiasm," he said. "She is not only a wonderful little actress but possesses a voice of remarkable range and sweetness and I predict that the whole town will be wild about her work."

Signs Dancing Team.

After witnessing the work of several star dancing teams Mr. Haase signed a contract for an appearance in Atlanta of the team of Amerique and Neville.

"These dancers were unquestionably the best I saw in New York and just as soon as I could get them to sign a contract for the Atlanta light opera season I did so. They will appear in fourteen numbers, the first of which will be presented during the engagement of "The Pink Lady," the first production of this summer's season. Miss Amerique is a graceful dancer of rare beauty while her partner, Mr. Neville, is a man of powerful physique and a dancer of amazing ease and grace."

Concerning the future of the early summer production season Manager Haase said he had completed negotiations which will assure Atlanta of at least ten weeks of this type of entertainment next spring.

Perfect Performances.

"The success Miss Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer have scored here and the fine work of the able company have combined to make certain a continuation of this production season at the Erlanger theater," he said. "It is probable that few players have won such a remarkable personal following as have Miss Kennedy and Mr. Blackmer. They have amazed the people of Atlanta by the high standard of their work, by their perfection in their art and by their remarkable versatility. Other members of the cast including Walter Connolly, Miss Mary Marble, Jack Willard, Frank Sylvester, Miss Natalie Schafer, Miss Birkbeck, Miss Morrison, Mr. Lang, Mr. Augustin and Mr. Dawe have rounded out perfect performances by their able work. Priestly Morrison has staged some remarkable shows and this company or one equal to it in standing and ability will play in Atlanta next spring. Charles L. Wagner has seen to it that the productions here have been of the highest type and this policy has made the engagement a great artistic success."

Mr. Haase was not ready to announce any of his bookings for the fall and winter season but while in New York he obtained some of the greatest shows now playing there for engagement in Atlanta.

"Heretofore shows have been sent south through the Carolinas to Atlanta and thence on through Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana towns to Texas," Mr. Haase said. "I have been fighting to have Atlanta looped in with such cities as Louisville, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and other cities of that class and at last I have been able to obtain this for Atlanta. This means that we will get the very best shows that are sent out of New York for road tours."

Under this plan the legitimate attractions will be sent south by way of Richmond and Norfolk to Atlanta and thence a jump direct to Louisville for engagements in the large cities of the middle west.

FORMER ATLANTAN BELIEVED VICTIM OF SEA DISASTER

When a tug boat sank Friday in the harbor at Seattle, Wash., George Moore, about 24 years of age, and believed to be a former Atlantan, was drowned, according to a wire received at Atlanta police headquarters Saturday from the Independent Gravel company of the Washington city.

It is believed that his relatives live in the city or its vicinity, and the telegram urged that any persons having information of his family communicate with them. Young Moore's body had not been recovered at the time the wire was dispatched.

BUSINESS IS GOOD WITH LYNCH & HUEY

Since the opening of the new firm of Lynch & Huey at 68 Edgewood avenue, successors to Lynch & Johnson, business of the concern is reported to be on an upward trend and the firm has closed several jobs. It expects a further increase in work in the near future.

This new firm is in position to execute plumbing and heating work, and repair work will be done by reliable and efficient workmen using the very latest and most modern equipment.

On account of being opposite the Hurt building and the closest shop to Five Points, it specializes in plumbing and heating supplies, which can be bought at low cost.

The firm announces that Gus Hightower, well-known Atlanta heating engineer, is now connected with it. His many friends will be interested to know of his new connections. For the benefit of those who have only Saturday afternoon to do their shopping, this plumbing establishment will remain open all day Saturday.

EMORY UNIVERSITY TO GRADUATE 149

Emory University, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Dr. Stuart R. Roberts, who, as orator for the class of 1902 delivered an address on "Emory College and Its Progress" at his graduation, will deliver the baccalaureate address for the class of '27 at Emory university on June 7, using as his subject "Emory University and Its Progress." Dr. Roberts is a prominent physician of Atlanta. Only recently he returned from Europe where he spent some time in scientific research, which carried him to Vienna, Berlin and other educational centers of Europe.

On June 7 a total of 149 students will get degrees from Emory university, thus completing Emory's 87th commencement program. This number does not include the graduates of the fall and winter semesters, who have completed their work earlier.

Emory's commencement will cover a three-day program. Beginning Sunday morning, June 5, Bishop Warren A. Candler, former president of Emory college, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who was first scheduled to speak, cannot do so on account of illness. Monday, June 6, which is annual Alumni day, will be given over entirely for the reunion of the various classes. The university has planned a program beginning with registration of alumni at 9:30 Monday morning. At 10 o'clock Dr. Harvey W. Cox and Rev. Marvin Williams will address the group, after which the university will be host to the alumni at the annual alumni luncheon in the armory dining hall.

On Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, the last feature of the commencement will be concluded with the graduation address by Dr. Roberts, followed by the delivery of diplomas.

GEORGIA TOBACCO DEMAND NOT HURT BY CHINESE WARS

Washington, D. C., May 28.—(Special.)—There is no lessening in demand for Georgia raised tobacco and no trouble about shipments, Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, announced Saturday following a conference with the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce here.

The senator said that while he was recently traveling through southern Georgia tobacco growers were very much interested in conditions which now exist in China and had expressed the fear that present conditions in China would interfere with Georgia tobacco shipments and sales.

"One-sixth of the Georgia Tobacco crop is shipped to China and brings approximately $15,000," Senator Harris said.

COMBINED FLEETS JOIN AT NORFOLK

Newport News, Va., May 28.—(AP) The combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets are due in Hampton Roads Sunday afternoon, bringing about 23,000 officers and men for a stay of a week or ten days, during which time the visitors will be the guests of Norfolk, Portmouth, Newport News and other Hampton Roads communities at a series of entertainments in their honor.

Several of the ships already are in the Roads and the remainder are due Sunday afternoon and Sunday night. The fleet will be officially welcomed by the mayors of Newport News, Norfolk and Portsmouth at 9 o'clock Monday morning, aboard the battleship California.

President Coolidge will review the fleet on Saturday, June 4, it being his intention at the present time to come down from Washington on the Mayflower, leaving Washington Friday night.

Thursday, June 9 has been designated as Newport News day in the fleet and several hundred officers will be given a ride to historic points on the peninsula, while more than 1,000 enlisted men will be the guests of citizens at luncheon here, this to be followed by a baseball game between teams from the Maryland and the Iowa.

This is the first time a fleet of this size has made Hampton Roads a rendevouz in some years and it is expected that visitors will be here from all parts of the east to view the war craft and be with friends and relatives stationed aboard the ships.

From here the ships will go back to their stations on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, some of them for immediate duty and others for repairs at the various navy yards of the country.

News of the death of Katherine Dodge, 5-year-old daughter of W. A. Dodge, Jr., of 695 Cooledge avenue, Atlanta real estate dealer, who died Friday in Milwaukee, Wis., while visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. FOREIGN TRADE CLUB WILL HEAR M'GINNIS

J. F. McGinnis, noted railroad construction engineer and one of the builders of the world-famous trans-Andean line between Argentina and Chile, will address the Atlanta Foreign Trade club at a luncheon to be held Wednesday at the chamber of commerce at 12:30 o'clock.

This railroad involved one of the heaviest gradients in the history of railroading and the construction of numerous snowsheds and avalanche defenses. Among the great difficulties faced was the driving of 20 tunnels, one of which was nearly two miles long, through the Andes mountains.

In addition to the trans-Andean line, Mr. McGinnis personally supervised the construction of 450 miles of railroad across the barren sand and rock waste of the Great Atacama desert in northern Chile, where the lack of water generally hampered construction operations.

Mr. McGinnis has recently returned to Atlanta following a residence of 30 years throughout the Latin-American counties from Mexico to Argentina. He has seen three revolutions and experienced numerous adventures. He points out that one of the greatest factors in the development of South America will be the establishment of numerous air lines, particularly between points difficult of access by rail or other means of transportation. Vast stretches of rich undeveloped territory will thus be opened in Mr. McGinnis' opinion.

His subject will be "Possibilities of Aerial Transportation Between South America and the United States." Members of the Atlanta chapter of the National Aeronautic association and local engineers are invited to attend the meeting, it was announced by Harry O. Mitchell, secretary of the club.

WILLIS PRESIDENT OF LOCAL CHAPTER BANKING INSTITUTE

The Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Banking announces the election of Eugene F. Willis as president for the year 1927-'28, to succeed E. T. Johnson, cashier of the Citizens & Southen National bank.

Mr. Willis joined the Atlanta & Lowry National bank in 1919 after leaving Georgia Tech and the service. He has served the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking as member of the board of governors, vice president and secretary, as well as member of the national forum committee.

C. E. Tillman, assistant cashier of the Citizens & Southern National bank, was elected vice president for the coming year. Other officers elected were Miss Lurline Crawford, of the Atlanta Trust company, as secretary, and John R. Jordan, of the Atlanta & Lowry National bank, as treasurer. L. H. Moye, of the Citizens and Southern National bank; R. A. Radford, of the Federal Reserve bank, and A. H. Stevens, of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, were elected to serve on the board of governors.

Plans are being made for a delegation of 15 local bankers to attend the national convention held in Detroit in July of this year.

Mrs. W. B. Foster

Augusta, Ga.—"Motherhood left me with a severe case of feminine trouble. I was so weak and nervous that I could scarcely move, my back ached and I suffered a great deal of distress and pain. Program of G.O.P. For Tax Reduction Outlined by Reed

Republican Senator From Pennsylvania Declares $300,000,000 Will Be Available This Year.

CUT IN NUISANCE LEVIES FAVORED

Proposal of Reed Is Likely To Bring About Hot Fight Between Republicans and Democrats.

Washington, May 28.—(United News.)—An outline of what is expected to be the new Mellon plan of tax reduction in the fall, was given today by Senator David A. Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, close friend and business ally of the secretary of the treasury.

Reed said, after a call at the white house, that the surplus at the end of the government's business year, June 30, would be $600,000,000 and that $300,000,000 of this sum should be available to congress in December for a tax reduction bill.

Division of Surplus.

Reed told how he thought this $300,000,000 should be applied. His remarks are held significant because of his reputation as the congressional mouthpiece of the secretary of the treasury.

First reduction should be planned on the income tax of those persons who receive between $30,000 and $75,000 a year, Reed said. These classes were overlooked in all tax reductions since 1919, he said.

Secondly, Reed declared, the corporation tax should be reduced slightly from the present rate of 13 1-2 per cent, probably to 12 1-2 or even 12 per cent.

Other features of his plan were:

Estate taxes should be abolished and this form of taxation left to the states.

Automobile taxes should be retained at their present level.

Taxes on admission to theaters and club dues should be entirely abolished.

Nuisance taxes should be reduced about $1,000,000.

Profitless Prosperity.

"The country is now enjoying profitless prosperity," said Reed. "Everybody is enjoying good business, but no one is making any large profits. This makes for low prices to the consumer."

This plan or a similar one, is expected to be presented by Mellon when the house ways and means committee meets before the opening of congress in December to plan a new tax reduction bill. This course of presenting a treasury plan has been followed in past years and is expected to be continued.

However, it is likely to lead to a serious argument in congress because of the close division between the forces of the administration, independent republicans and democrats. The republicans have theoretically control of the senate by only one vote and if democrats choose to make a fight they will have the assistance of many midwestern republicans who believe smaller incomes should get the benefit of the new reduction.

PRINCESS GIVEN DIVORCE DECREE AND YOUNG CHILD

New York, May 28.—(United News)—Princess Lippe-Lipski, former war worker in Washington, D. C., has been granted a divorce from Prince Nicholas Vladimir De Lippe-Lipski by Supreme Court Justice Hatting.

Justice Hatting heard the evidence in their case six weeks ago in Bronx. With the divorce the princess gets custody of her four-year-old son, Nikolia Vladimir.

Testimony in the case centered about Mrs. Gertrude Schroeder, the princess' sister, in a raid staged by the princess. Mrs. Schroeder admitted that the prince had visited her but declared that they had been only friends.

In May, 1924, the princess obtained a default judgment of $100,000 against Mrs. Schroeder, on the charge that the sister had alienated affections of the prince.

SEASON TICKETS WILL BE OFFERED FOR LIGHT OPERA

Reservations for Entire Series May Be Purchased After June 6, Management Announces.

Heavy demand for season reservations for this year's series of light operas and musical comedies indicates that interest in this annual event is greater this year than ever before and that all indications point to this season surpassing all previous seasons, according to an announcement made Saturday by C. Howard Candler, president of the Atlanta Municipal Light Opera company, and Lewis Haase, general manager.

Mr. Candler said this year's plan of selling season tickets will be of much more convenience to the public than any heretofore. After June 6 tickets for the entire series of productions can be delivered. Last year it was not possible to deliver the entire series of tickets and the purchaser had to go to the box office each week for reservations. The present plan eliminates all delays and inconveniences and will give assurance to ticket purchasers that they can get the seats they desire for the entire season.

Mr. Haase returned Saturday from New York, where he arranged for the transportation of the members of the light opera company to Atlanta, inspected costumes and settings to be used in the productions here and interviewed several of the stars. He talked with Miss Claire Madjette, who will appear as prima donna in this year's company, and other singers. He announced that a new dancing team, Amerique and Neville, had been engaged for the Atlanta season and the dancers would make their appearance in "The Pink Lady" the week of June 20.

Director Enthusiastic.

The musical director, Charles Berton, is enthusiastic about his chorus. The prestige of the Atlanta season has brought a very large number of applicants for the chorus, and this year, it is expected, the ensemble will be the best in history. It is no exaggeration to say that the chorus will be unique in that it will be composed entirely of brilliant young singers of a type which could not be found elsewhere in musical comedy work.

One aim in establishing Atlanta light opera season was to give ambitious boys and girls of this section an opportunity to gain that experience which can only come through actual stage and operatic work. That this is being taken advantage of is demonstrated by the fact that practically every section of Georgia, as well as several surrounding states will be represented in the chorus. The Emory Glee club and Agnes Scott Glee club have each contributed a quota of singers who have heretofore been thoroughly trained by their respective directors. Everything is strictly business-like and former patrons of the opera know that there will be nothing amateurish when they appear before the public.

The list of operas has been carefully picked. Each is a gem of light popular melody worked around clever stories and sparkling fun which gives musical comedies a unique field in the entertainment world.

In response to a large number of requests the season will open with "Pink Lady," one of the most beautiful and interesting of the musical comedy successes. A new surprise will be in store each week. Two plays will be sung that have never before been heard in Atlanta, "Wild flower" and "Dearest Enemy." The latter has just finished a most successful two years' run in New York, this being the first presentation off

Pretty Girls of Atlanta Produce Plenty Pulchritude In Quest of Footlight Fame in Opportunity Contest

Many attractive and talented Atlanta girls have entered the "Opportunity Contest" sponsored by The Constitution and the Publix theaters, in which an Atlanta girl will be selected to play the part of "Miss Atlanta" in "Young America," a Publix production, which will make a 21-week tour of the country. Dozier, and (upper right) Miss Blanche Eubanks. The dancing girl in the Oriental costume is Miss Marion Hull.

Southern Beauties Seek To Represent City in Tour of Publix Theaters.

Many pretty girls of Atlanta are now officially in The Constitution's "Opportunity Contest," which will bring as first prize to some Atlanta girl an engagement of 19 weeks with "Young America," a Publix theater production which will be taken for a tour of the prominent cities of the country. The winning girl will receive a contract with this company as a substantial salary. Second prize will be $100, third prize $50 and fourth prize $25 in Publix theater checks.

Unmarried girls between 18 and 25 years old, who possess talent and who want to get a chance to enter a stage career, are eligible for this contest. To enter girls must send in a late photograph to The Constitution "Opportunity Editor," and if no photograph is available the girl can go to Stevenson's studio and have one made free. The time limit for sending in photographs expires June 3. Publix auditions, at which the contest winners will be selected, will be held the week of June 5 to 11, with the finals held June 11, at the Howard theater.

21-Week Contract.

Will you be the lucky girl to enjoy all the wonders of a big "Opportunity" tour? Perhaps you have been waiting for a chance such as this. Success awaits you. The path to a scintillating future has been made smooth. Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime. If you are talented and pretty, register today.

In the national search for new stage "discoveries" the Publix Theater corporation has won the enthusiastic cooperation of every leading city in the country. The eager desire to give the winning contestants a good time when the spectacular production "Young America," plays their particular cities is indicative of a universal interest in the Publix theaters opportunity contest.

Events Planned.

Every leading city in the Publix circuit has made extensive plans to provide entertainment and local sightseeing trips for the "Young America" girls. The list of events planned include the famous Yale university in New Haven, Conn.; a trip by automobile to Niagara Falls, along the picturesque river road; a boat ride to the beautiful Crystal beach on the Canadian shore of Lake Erie; a trip through the Ford factory at Detroit; visits to points of varied interest in Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines. Then in Dallas, San Antonio and Houston, Texas, similar plans have been arranged for extensive sight-seeing and every kind of entertainment. New Orleans, La., and Memphis, Tenn., intend to give the girls a real southern welcome and a visit to the picturesque river front. Finally the end of the tour in Atlanta, Ga., where farewell parties will be staged for the members of the cast.

Send in your photographs girls. You can not afford to lose any time. The contest is open now. This is a big opportunity to win a stage career.

VESTRY SATISFIES JEALOUS WIVES AND KEEPS CHOIR

Northampton, England, May 28.—(United News.)—Complaints by jealous wives that the silk-clad legs of choir girls were distracting men's attention from the service have caused the vestry of the local Nonconformist church to have a curtain draped around the lower part of the choir benches so that only the demure faces of the female choristers are visible.

"We thought this the best solution," said a spokesman for the vestrymen. "If there is any question of girls giving up choir work or their up-to-date dresses, they will give up the choir."

EARTHQUAKE FELT IN SAN FRANCISCO

Temblor Lasts Four Minutes But Does No Damage, San Mateo Peninsula Area Affected.

San Francisco, Calif., May 28.—(United News.)—A temblor of short duration but jolting intensity was felt Saturday through the San Francisco bay region and the San Mateo peninsula. Its center was estimated to be 35 miles distant.

The shock was felt at 9:39 a. m. and appeared to have ended immediately. On the seismograph of Professor Perry Byerly, at the University of California, at Berkeley, it was shown to have continued four minutes.

Calculations of Father J. S. Ricard, meteorologist at the University of Santa Clara, indicated that the quake may have centered near the lower end of San Mateo peninsula, south of San Francisco. He said that due to the absence of preliminary temblors he judged the shock to have been "local in character."

No damage other than the breaking of a few dishes was reported.

TWO GEORGIANS COMMIT SUICIDE

19-Year-Old Girl Takes Carbolic Acid at Marietta and Poultryman Kills Self Near Forsyth.

Marietta, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) Miss Dora Jean Hughes, 19-year-old daughter of Olin Hughes, an employee of a marble yard at Elizabeth, near here, committed suicide this afternoon in the Cobb county court house by drinking two ounces of carbolic acid. She was rushed to a hospital but died within a few minutes without regaining consciousness.

The girl was seen to emerge from the rest room at the court house and staggered down the steps to the entrance of the building where she fell. No inquest had been planned, officers stated.

A note was found on her body which read: "Hope I won't be in your way any more. I have $200—you can have it." The note was not signed and was not addressed to anyone.

No cause of the girl's act was advanced tonight by members of the family, who moved to Marietta about

TREATY PROPOSED TO INSURE FRENCH AMERICAN PEACE

Draft Providing Machinery To Carry Out Briand's Suggestion Offered by American Foundation.

New York, May 28.—(AP)—A draft treaty to provide the machinery under which could be carried out the suggestion made last month to the American people by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, that "France would be willing to enter into an engagement with America mutually outlawing war," was made public today by the American foundation. The foundation maintains the American peace award, founded by Edward Bok.

The treaty form, offered as a practical application of M. Briand's suggestion which was made through The Associated Press on April 6, the tenth anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the world war, seeks to outlaw war, not by fiat, but by substituting binding methods of solving all disputes.

Binds Signatories.

Its main point is that it binds its signatories, in any dispute of whatever character, to use one or another of possible methods of peaceful settlement. Aside from the normal processes of diplomacy and mediation, the draft treaty offers (1) conciliation; (2) arbitration, by special tribunals for the Hague court of arbitration, and (3) judicial settlement, by the permanent court of international justice, more generally known as the world court.

If conciliation should fail, the treaty binds the signatories to submit their dispute either to arbitration or judicial settlement. The conciliation commission's findings would not be final, but the arbitration or judicial awards would be.

Under the proposed treaty the signatories would agree not to invade each other's territory and to refrain from concentration of arms, from mobilization, from fighting and from any hostile act whatever, except in actual defense or to repel aggression.

Draft Treaty Explained.

In making public the draft treaty, the American foundation says:

"The treaty now proposed assumes that every dispute of whatever nature, that was not yielded to the usual possibilities of diplomatic adjustment can be settled in any one of the three ways offered. Without prescribing any one of these in any given case, or even for any given class of questions, the treaty obligates its signatories merely to pursue the peaceful method of their choice."

The statement says that the only machinery set up by the treaty is the conciliation commission, which, however, is not a permanent organization. In connection with the use of the permanent court of international justice as one of the methods of settling disputes, the statement declares that adherance to the world court by the United States would be a logical necessity.

The proposed treaty, the statement added, would mean one fundamental change in the policy of the United states, that of admitting that every dispute is susceptible of some kind of peaceful settlement. This means the omission of the clause, hitherto always insisted on by the United States in its arbitration treaties, exempting all questions affecting the "vital interests, independence or national honor" of the United States.

The draft treaty has been sent to prominent Americans in political life, universities and industrial heads throughout the United States. Included with it is a draft of a proposed joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives, requesting the president of the United States to consider the expediency of proposing the treaty to the nations of the world.

Girl Helped Banish Sister

:: DESCRIBES WEDDINGS DURING WAR TIMES ::

From Colony of King Ben

St. Joseph, Mich., May 28.—(AP)—Testimony that she assisted in banishing her own sister from the colony, and later when she fell into disfavor with Benjamin Purnell was herself virtually "drummed out," was given today by Mrs. Esther Johnson Hansel, in the state's dissolution suit against the House of David Colony.

Mrs. Hansel, one-time secretary to Purnell, was still on the stand when court adjourned this afternoon until Tuesday morning. Just before adjournment, counsel for the state started to question her as to the colony's belief in celibacy, only to be halted by Judge Louis H. Fead. Judge Fead declared that so far as he knew no statute or public policy prohibited celibacy. He directed counsel to prepare arguments on the admissibility of such arguments.

Further reference to enforced marriages was made today when Mrs. Hansel charged that during the world war, Benjamin arranged marriages for men drafted for military service in order that the colony might collect dependency compensation. She also charged that married women of the colony were encouraged to adopt children so the compensation would be larger.

Describing the banishment of her sister, Mrs. Hansel said that Purnell had directed her to "take care of Lena" after the sister had made accusations against the colony leader. She induced her sister to sign a statement averring the accusations against Benjamin were false, Mrs. Hansel said, and then sent her from the colony with a railroad ticket and $12.

Her own removal followed some time later, she said, when she refused to "spy around" after another ministerial member of the colony threatened trouble. With her, she said, went the family of John Hansel, who lated sued the colony and obtained a judgment of $24,000. Trivial charges, she asserted, were trumped up against the Hansels and herself and read to them at midnight in Shiloh House, the colony administration building, in the presence of John J. Sterling, then county prosecutor.

Hardman Expects Business Methods To Govern State

PLAN STATE DRIVE TO RAISE $100,000 FOR ASSOCIATION

H. M. Atkinson, General Chairman, Issues Statement Showing Need for Work To Aid Agriculture

A state-wide campaign for $100,000 a year for the Georgia association to be used chiefly in advertising and land settlement work, was announced Saturday by officials of the association. The effort will be under the direction of H. M. Atkinson, of the Georgia Power company, as general chairman, and leading business men throughout the state will take part. H. G. Hastings is president of the association.

In a statement announcing the campaign and analyzing agricultural conditions in Georgia, Mr. Atkinson declared it seems plain "that the business interests of Georgia cannot hope to continue to prosper while the farms are affected as all of us know them to be affected."

"It is inevitable," he declared, "that the conditions which prevail in our basic industry will be reflected in every other business in the state."

Abandoned Farms.

The statement pointed out that 61,623 farms had been abandoned in Georgia between 1920 and 1925 and declared that "such a wholesale abandonment can only mean that discouraging conditions prevail on the farms."

The campaign will be assisted by the American city bureau which recently raised $1,000,000 in Atlanta for an dvertising fund and has just completed a campaign in Virginia for $300,000 to finance a Virginia institution doing work similar to that of the Georgia association.

"If I may be permitted," the Atkinson statement read, "I want to discuss very earnestly with the people of Georgia the agricultural situation of the state. Some time ago I made a survey of farm conditions. Accurate information was obtained from men who were fully aware of the facts. The discovery was made, to my mind, that there were but two organizations, chiefly, at grips with the state-wide problems of our farmers, the State College of Agriculture and the Georgia association. The college is financed with tax funds from the state treasury and is doing wonderful work; the Georgia assosiation is a flexible organization which appeals directly to far-sighted Georgians for monetary support and is able to meet special situations practically as they arise, being directly of and by the people of Georgia. The work of both is highly necessary and each is helping the other.

Record of Accomplishment.

"We found that the Georgia association, of which I desire to speak particularly here, had never been adequately financed; yet it had a record of very real accomplishment. With a little money, it had succeeded in various places in the state in helping to inaugurate practically saner methods of agriculture, as taught at the State College of Agriculture, in advertising our state's possibilities and locating approximately 1,000 new farmers of the most desirable type, in making the livestock industry possible by helping the passage of a tick eradication measure—in doing numerous and varied practical things which in the aggregate, are operating today to the betterment of agricultural conditions.

"For these reasons I have accepted the general chairmanship of a state-wide campaign to raise $100,000 as a fund (which I hope will become a permanent annual budget) for the con-

Will Be No "Political Factions" in Assembly, From His Viewpoint, Says Governor-Elect.

NO WHIMS, ISMS TO BE INVOLVED

New Governor Reiterates Stand Which He Took When Campaigning for Office.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Commerce, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) When the Georgia legislature convenes after the inauguration of Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, as governor to succeed Governor Clifford Walker, there will be no administration and anti-administration forces in that body as far as the governor-elect is concerned. He made that plain to a Constitution representative here today.

"The only division that I know that can happen in the legislature is for a business and anti-business line to be drawn," Dr. Hardman said. "As far as I am concerned, and as far as my association with the legislature is concerned, I shall stand unequivocally where I stood when I was running before the people of Georgia, and that is for straight-out business operation of this state. The people who want to oppose this policy might as well make up their minds to be classed as "anti-business' instead of 'anti-administration.' As far as I am concerned, the "administration' and 'business' will be synonymous."

As he prepares to assume the reins of government as the chief executive of Georgia Dr. Hardman is possessed of but one consuming desire, and that is to give this state a business administration from top to bottom of all departments, up and down and through the middle.

"Business" Is Word.

"Business," is the one catchword, the one keynote of the governor, and he is shaping all his plans and all his influence to put the state departments, as far as he is able, through his influence and authority, in position to make "business" a word that means something in government in this state.

"I have no isms or whims of a personal nature that I want to see placed in operation," he said. "I have been a business man all my life. I believe I am able to make some suggestions in a business way which will be of value to the state and I feel that if there ever was a time in the history of the state that the government should be organized on a business basis, now is that time."

Dr. Hardman says he does not care a snap of his finger for politics, political intrigue or political aggrandizement, and that people simply will waste their time and his talking such things.

"I don't care whether the plans I shall suggest are good politically or not," he said. "If these plans don't meet the approval of this, that or the other politician, I simply can't help it, as every move I shall make will be for what I believe to be the good of the entire state."

Reforms Planned.

Specifically Dr. Hardman said he would recommend reorganization of the state highway department and the state agricultural department along almost revolutionary lines; that he would recommend that all moneys collected by the state from all sources be handled by one central treasury department, and that he would make some early specific recommendations for revolutionary changes to be made in the manner of handling insane patients in the state institutions.

"These will be my first recommendations and I have in mind just what I intend to recommend. After I begin to serve as governor I shall cooperate as much as possible with the legislature and with state officials in

Hays Weeps When Honored

:: RAISED $15,000,000 FOR MINISTERS ::

By Presbyterian Assembly

San Francisco, May 28.—(AP)—Will S. Hays, chairman of the Presbyterian laymen's committee, which raised the $15,000,000 pension fund for aged and disabled ministers, wept today when presented a gold watch by the committee of ministerial relief and sustenation in appreciation of his work. The presentation was made before the Presbyterian general assembly.

Mr. Hays was similarly affected on conclusion of his speech detailing the work of his committee. He was frequently interrupted during the speech by assembly acclamation and on one occasion the commissioners arose and without organ accompaniment, sang a doxology.

These signs of emotion were in strange contrast to the fighting interest shown during the earlier part of the assembly when the Princeton Theological seminary report was debated. The assembly approved, with amendments, the investigating committee's recommendations that there be a reorganization of the seminary control as a means of terminating existing managerial and doctrinal differences.

Dr. Rockwell Brank, of New York, declared he did not believe dissension within the seminary lay in its dual control. He also offered a substitute motion—that the committee of eleven proposed to reorganize the Princeton control under one head should defer such definite action for one year.

Dr. John B. Laird, vice president of the seminary and chairman of the board of seminary directors, declared that there should be a dual control because there were two paths along which the seminary must be managed, the practical or financial, handled by the trustees, and details of the curriculum and faculty, handled by the board of directors. He said it would be illogical to attempt placing financial matters in the hands of ministers who knew nothing of finance.

Dr. Laird made charges of "flagrant inaccuracies" against the investigating committee.

"It's a faculty row," he said. "I am saddened and humiliated that the matter has been thrown to the world. Neither the board of trustees nor the board of directors has anything to do with it, and you're wrong if you think you're putting your hand on the sore spot by substituting single control.

"Other schools have been swept from their moorings by fundamentalism and modernism. I don't even know what that means, but in any case it has nothing to do with the boards heading Princeton seminary."

"Baby-Faced Devil" Found

:: HER PARAMOUR-SUICIDE'S STATEMENT IS TRUE ::

With Bullet in Her Head

Chicago, May 28.—(AP)—Two bullets, fired at close range, ended the life of Sarah Rapp, described by Werner C. Martin, in a suicide note, as "a devil with a baby face." The body of the woman Martin declared lured him from his wife and flaunted his affections was found today as he said it would be found.

Beside it was a note, written by Martin, detailing the faithlessness he had charged against her.

Martin's body was found in a Milwaukee hotel two days ago. There also was a note in which he said he had killed a girl in Chicago because she had been untrue to him. He did not mention a name or address, and until today's discovery, police had regarded his actions as the result of hallucinations.

The girl, the note found today said, was Sarah Rapp. It outlined that he had married her "because she had gotten in trouble," and wanted a certificate to show her mother and sister. It related of marriage to her on March 21, at the Holy Name Cathedral and records in the county building substantiated the claim. A license had been issued to W. C. Martin, 25, and Sarah Rapp, 19.

He said he had met the girl at a downtown hotel last January. In February, employees of the hotel said a man and the girl had taken quarters there. He signed the register as W. W. Milton and wife.

The wife, whom he confessed having been unfaithful to, now is in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where she went three months ago to be with her mother when her baby was born. The child, a son, was born several weeks ago.

The mother has said her husband was attentive and faithful and she did not know of another woman in his life. They had been married a year.

A picture of Martin in newspapers, recognized by the hotel clerk as resembling that of the man who had lived there, led to the discovery of the body. A sign on the door, "silence—do not disturb," had prevented maids from entering since last Wednesday when Martin and the girl were last seen by hotel attendants.

In tense short sentences today's note revealed the tale of illicit love and disappointment which the Milwaukee note had only scantily alluded to, but nowhere was there a hint of regret for desertion of the wife in Cedar Rapids.

HARDMAN FAMILY JUST PLAIN 'FOLKS' REPORTER FINDS

Simplicity of Governor-elect and Grace and Charm of "First Lady" Prove Inspiring.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

When Dr. L. G. Hardman sits down in the governor's chair of Georgia on June 25 and takes the reins of government from the hands of the retiring governor, Clifford Walker, the state of Georgia will be the first one in the union that has a governor with the given name of "Lamartine" and it also will have a governor who in many respects is as odd and unusual a personality as that odd and unique first name.

For one thing the governor will bring some ideas not possessed by the usual successful politician. He will bring a bright and youthful family directed by a gracious and charming wife; he will bring a policy of real Jeffersonian simplicity to the governor's mansion and will throw open the doors of the mansion to the people of Georgia just as he has kept the doors of his own hospitable home open to people of his home town of Commerce for 20 years.

"The House by the Side of the Road" is the name under which the governor's mansion will go after the arrival of the Hardmans and it will take up the open-heartedness and simple welcome that have graced "The House by the Side of the Road" at Commerce in which the governor and his family have lived for a score of years.

Man of Plain People.

Dr. Hardman is assuredly a man of the plain people, a typical Georgia citizen who, in spite of a big fortune amassed in business activities covering half a century, and in spite of his new laurels as governor, continues to be just plain "Doc" Hardman to his neighbors, friends and acquaintances in his home town.

A day spent by a Constitution representative with the Hardmans brought many close and interesting glimpses of the family which will become Georgia's "first family" after June 25. The people of Georgia are certainly going to like these Hardmans if the impression received on this visit is accurate. They are clean-minded, cordial, gracious and cultured "folks." They are human to the core, and old-fashioned in their ways. They are church workers but not of the militant variety. They take keen interest in the serious things of life, yet enjoy as keenly the wholesome, lighter side. They are enthusiastic for the common weal and are hard workers in any cause they undertake to support.

The children honor and respect their parents and obey them. They are courteous and polite and free from any symptoms of snobbery. And the entire family from the governor-elect to the baby are looking forward with whetted anticipation to the days they will live for a time as citizens of Georgia's capital city.

Mrs. Hardman, Georgia's new "first lady," will preside as hostess at the governor's mansion. With her will come the rest of the family which is composed of Lamartine G. Hardman, Jr., 18, now a freshman at the University of Georgia; Miss Josephine Hardman, 16, a pretty and graceful girl who has just graduated from high school; Sue Colquitt Hardman, 14, just entering high school, and baby Emma Griffin Hardman, age 7.

Romance and Marriage.

Dr. and Mrs. Hardman were married 20 years ago. As she says, she is "his only wife." Dr. Hardman waited until he was well into bachelordom before he was married and the romance began a little over 20 years ago at a Baptist convention in Valdosta, the home at that time of pretty Emma Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Griffin, of that place.

For 20 years she has lived in Commerce and has helped her husband in his manifold activities as a business man. She has led a busy life because she married a busy man. Dr. Hardman runs and owns the Harmony Grove cotton mill valued at $1,000,000; operates six huge farms in Jefferson, Hall, Habersham, White and Lowndes counties; owns two banks; man of the board of trustees of the Georgia state college of agriculture and helps run that great institution; serves occasionally as an active physician; heads the board of education in his home town and found time during all these activities to run a successful race for governor of Georgia. So the wife of such a man has little time for idling.

"We have adopted no general plan for our stay in the governor's mansion," Mrs. Hardman said. "We always have kept open house to our friends here in Commerce and we expect to follow the same policy when we get to Atlanta. I am sure I shall enjoy the club work, the church work and other social activities there. I am interested in the future good of Georgia and expect to take part in movements which I think will contribute to the upbuilding and progress of the state."

Free From Hobbies.

Mrs. Hardman is singularly free from hobbies. She likes flowers of all kinds and cultivates them. She supervises the kitchen and sees to it that the governor-elect gets all his favorite dishes. She said it would be hard to pick out a favorite dish of the governor-elect as he likes all kinds of food grown on the place. Vegetables of all kinds, milk and butter and home-grown meats form the chief foods of the Hardman table. In the Hardman [illegible] rooms are found great hams and shoulders produced by Berkshire hogs raised on the Hardman farms. Barrels of apple juice, bins of pecans, potatoes, apples; barrels of vinegar and even packages of home-made soap are found in the storehouse. Shelves are lined with cans of syrup made from cane grown on the Hardman farms. In the icebox can be found pure cream and pure yellow butter—yellow without artificial coloring. This storehouse will be duplicated in the governor's mansion under the direction of Mrs. Hardman.

"We even expect to take one of our prize cows to Atlanta if the city ordinances permit one to keep a cow at the governor's mansion," she said.

Mrs. Hardman will bring with her two of the servants who have worked with the family for years in Commerce. One is the cook, Delia Cochran, and the other is Tom Sanders, gardener for 15 years. She has not yet decided what other servants she will bring along.

Dr. Hardman is more than three score years old and because of Mrs. Hardman's youthful appearance many people fall into the error of thinking Mrs. Hardman is the second wife of the governor-elect.

"First and Only Wife."

"I am his first and only wife," she said with a laugh. "We first met at a Baptist convention when it met at Valdosta. We were entertaining about 20 guests in our home during the convention and one of these guests brought Dr. Hardman to our home. The next time the Baptist convention met in Valdosta we were married. The third time it met there Dr. Hardman had been elected governor."

Mrs. Hardman's father lives at Valdosta. Her mother was Miss Josephine Staten prior to her marriage to Mr. Griffin. James W. Staten, grandfather of Mrs. Hardman, served in the Georgia legislature and introduced a bill creating Echols county. Later he gave the county the site of the county seat, Statenville, which was named in his honor.

Mrs. Hardman's grandfather, Joshua Griffin, was one of the pioneer settlers of Lowndes county and with a few other men laid the foundation of the present city of Valdosta.

Lamartine Hardman, Jr., is the oldest child. He is an up and going youngster, full of life and energy. He is free from any "high hattiness," is friendly and open. He likes outdoor sports of all kinds but is particularly fond of tennis and golf. He plays golf as often as he can on a course located near Commerce, and also plays at the University of Georgia where he is a student. He obtained his early education in the school at Commerce and later went to the Georgia Military academy at College Park.

Son of a millionaire governor of Georgia and possessed of nearly everything that in some cases would turn the head of a youngster, this Hardman boy is absolutely unaffected. He is respectful to his parents and to his elders; apparently has no desire to take part in any scape grace affairs which sometimes appeal to youths of his age and appears to be a mighty clean, loyal young man. He likes business affairs that take him out of doors but has not yet decided on what profession he will enter.

Miss Josephine Hardman is the oldest girl. She is an attractive girl of 16, somewhat reserved in manner. She likes to read and sew more than anything else. She probably will enter Shorter college at Rome this fall. All members of the Hardman family like to read and at night they can be found in the library poring over various volumes. Dr. Hardman himself is a "daylight worker." When night comes he is at home with the family. He said he would give his time during the day to the state of Georgia as governor but at night he expects to stay at home.

Sue Colquitt Hardman, 14, and Emma Griffin Hardman, 7 years old, are the younger children. Both are bright and animated and will keep the governor's mansion lively during the hours they are there, according to all indications.

Dr. Hardman Is Active.

Dr. Hardman does not tell his exact age. He is nearly 70 years old, but looks 50, has the activity of a man of 40 and the enthusiasm of a man of 20. Dr. Hardman's father was Dr. W. B. J. Hardman, and his mother, prior to her marriage, Miss Susan Elizabeth Colquitt. His grandfather was Elbert Hardman and his grandmother prior to her marriage was Miss Lottie Barnett. Both parents and grandparents lived in Crawford county, a few miles from Commerce.

Dr. W. B. J. Hardman moved to Commerce before the birth of the governor-elect. He lived for a short time in the little village of Commerce where Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman was born. When the baby was two years old, Dr. W. B. J. Hardman moved to a farm he owned near Commerce, which is now the property of one of his daughters. It was here that the future governor of Georgia was reared, went to school and grew up to manhood. His father had a small frame office and in this office, which is still standing, the young Lamartine studied medicine. He was named after a distinguished French physician. The elder Hardman was a contemporary and close personal friend of Dr. Crawford W. Long, who first used ether as an anesthetic. Dr. Long lived in the town of Jefferson, located in the same county as Commerce.

When Dr. Hardman was 20 years old he moved to Commerce and began his work as a physician. He practiced medicine continuously except for periods he spent in medical schools in New York and Baltimore, and in hospital work. He built the first drug store in Commerce and for more than 50 years has operated a drug store there.

Started Medicine Practice.

The old building Dr. Hardman first used as an office is now located on his home place.

"I used the front room for a drug store and slept in the back room," he said. "I had an old mule I used to drive and I began my career with this little store and this mule."

Dr. Hardman saved the money he made and from time to time made small investments, mainly in land. He bought his present home place and planted a grove of trees on it which have grown to magnificent proportions. One huge mountain oak was planted more than 40 years ago and spreads its branches now for more than 60 feet in all directions.

"I learned very early that there are always as many bargains in the future for a man who has the ready cash as there were in the past," he said. "I followed this policy of saving money and having the cash ready when I wanted to buy anything and it has been successful. Today I don't owe a dollar to any man in the world."

When Dr. Hardman had acquired a considerable amount of land he formed the opinion that all-cotton farming was not as successful as diversified farming.

"I was practicing diversified farming 20 years before it began to be preached over the state," he said. "I told my tenants that they could farm me way and if they did not succeed I would give them the land, but if they farmed their way and did not succeed they would have to take the consequences. This policy has enabled me to get the most out of my lands and to add to land holdings until they have reached the present proportions."

The present proportions aggregate some 10,000 or 12,000 acres located in five counties on which are growing more than 40,000 fruit trees and crops of every kind that can be grown successfully in Georgia.

From farming Dr. Hardman branched into the cotton mill business in 1903. The first mill was organized with $100,000 capital. It has tripled in size and now affords employment to nearly 400 workers. They live in a model village, are contented and happy and are 100 per cent loyal to Dr. Hardman and his policies. The cotton mill is now worth approximately $1,000,000 and has no debt of any kind. Dr. Hardman today supervises the buying of all supplies and the sale of all manufactured products of this mill.

The cotton mill and office are located on the site of the old Harmony Grove academy, the first institution established in Georgia for the exclusive teaching of women. It was not the first college but was the first institution of its character for women, it is said.

Dr. Hardman's children attend the same school provided for the children of his mill operatives. The school is one of the best in the state. He is chairman of the board of education and supervises operation of the school. He does not permit any teacher to smoke and allows no smoking in the mill village.

"I don't try to have anything to do with other people's habits," he said. "I simply do not want teachers in our school whipping children for smoking and then going out and smoking themselves. I simply say these are our rules, if you want to abide by them we want you with us but if you do not then you are at liberty to do as you please but we can't use you here."

Believes in Openness.

On one of his vast peach orchards located south of Commerce, Dr. Hardman has a large shipping station and does not lock its doors.

"If people want to steal anything they will break in anyway," he said. "I tell them that if they want anything to come to me and I'll help them. I had a spring on one of my farms and some people kept on taking the dippers. I finally put a sign up which read, 'If you want a dipper come to me and I'll give you one but let this one stay here at the spring.' This plan worked as I lost no more dippers."

On his place at Commerce Dr. Hardman has set out nearly every known kind of tree. He has mountain oaks, pecans, peaches, apples, figs, China berry, cherry and English walnuts. He has a willow tree which was brought to him as a cutting from a tree growing near Napoleon Bonaparte's tomb in France.

Dr. Hardman loves the natural beauties of Georgia's hills and is particularly fond of the Nacoochee valley. He has a large tapestry across the mantel of his library showing a view on his farm in this valley while around it is a verse taken from Sidney Lanier's "Song of the Chattahoochee."

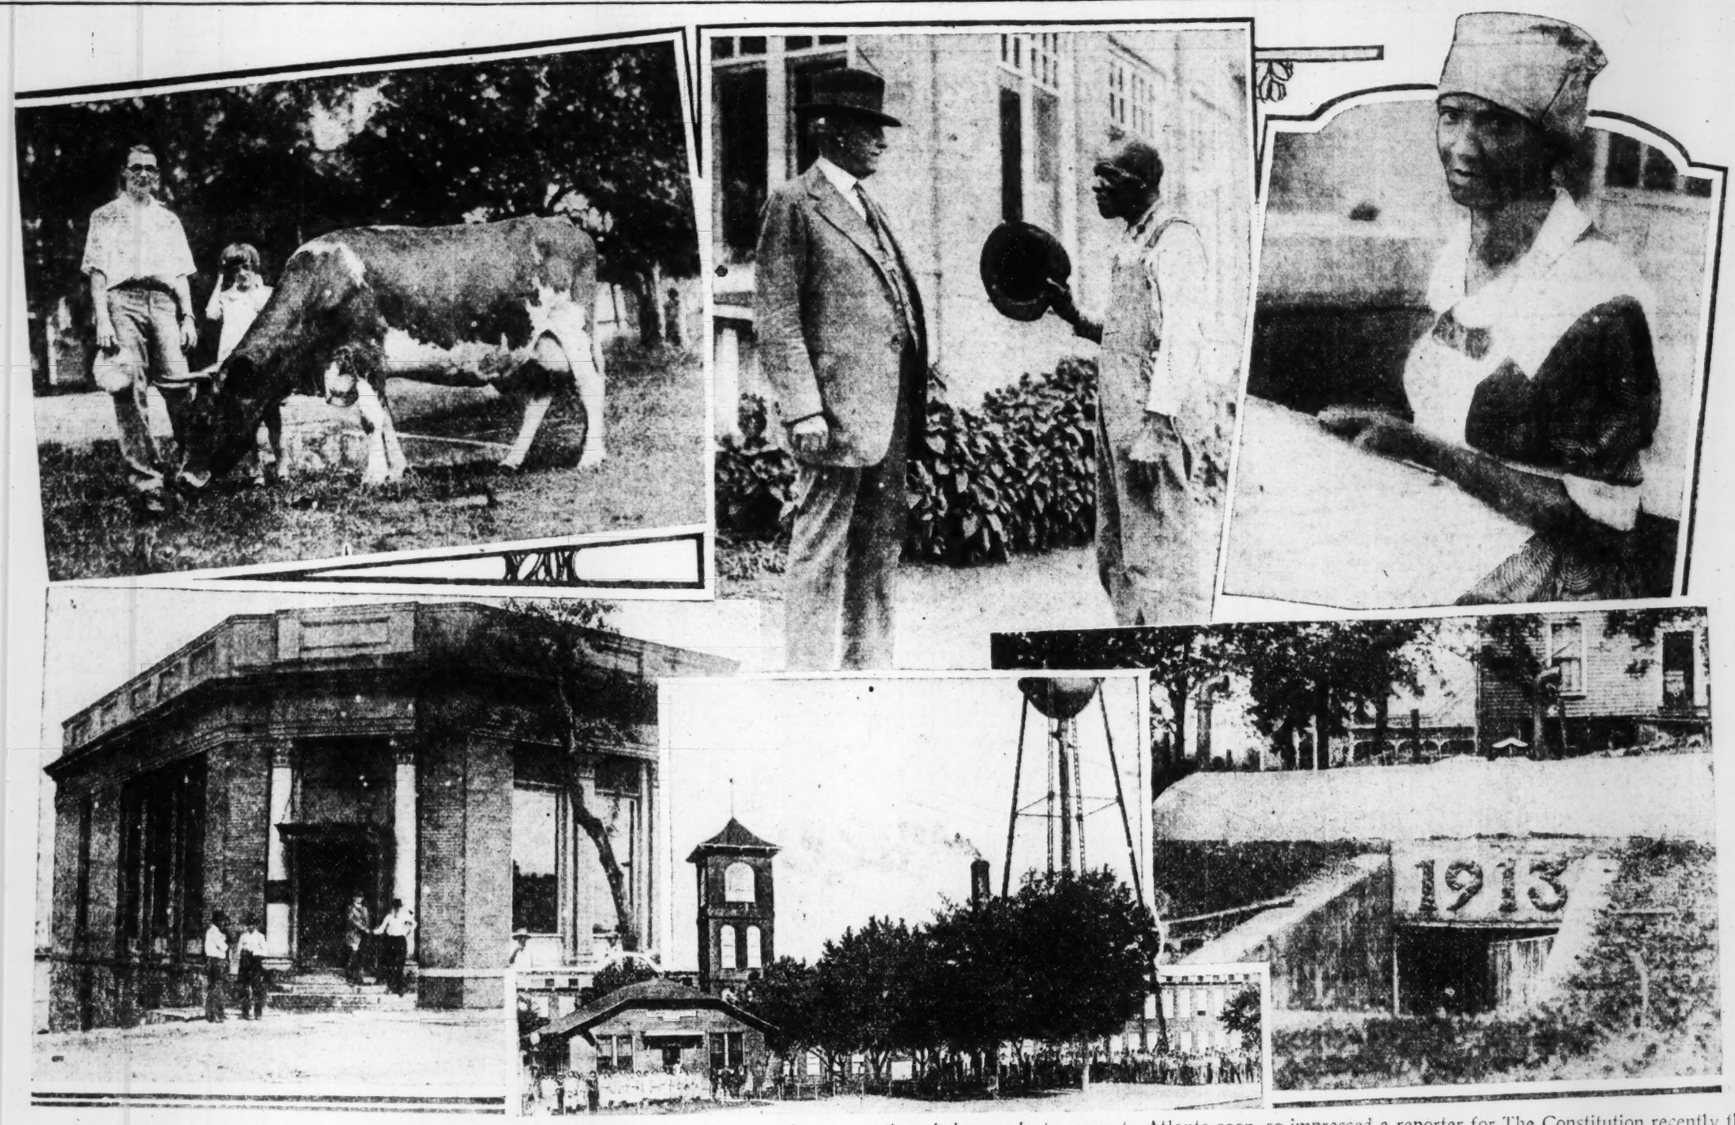

Photographs, mementos of all kinds and relics he has collected during his life are preserved in the Hardman home. He has photographic records of all members of his family. He keeps his diplomas and the diplomas of his children framed on the walls.

Dr. Hardman occupies a small office in a building he erected as a sanatorium, the first building of this kind ever erected in the state, outside of Atlanta. He has all his old medical and surgical instruments in this room, but uses them now only on rare occasions. This office is in the charge of Mrs. H. C. Carrington, known in all this section as "Miss Mattie."

Mrs. Carrington has served as Dr. Hardman's secretary for more than twenty-five years and will move to Atlanta to serve in his office as secretary to the governor. She took a leading part in the management of his campaign and knows every detail of all his business affairs.

On the streets of Commerce Dr. Hardman is just plain "Doc," and he'll be this to all his friends all the time he is governor.

Interesting Scenes During Visit to Governor-Elect's Home

The Jeffersonian simplicity of the family of Dr. L. G. Hardman, governor-elect, and the preparations being made to come to Atlanta soon, so impressed a reporter for The Constitution recently that he brought back not only the story of the interesting family of the governor-elect but a number of photographs which go a long way in telling the interest of the trip. If city ordinances of Atlanta permit there will be a prize cow installed in the barns of the governor's mansion in Atlanta when the governor-elect moves in June. The cow is shown at upper left in the meadow of the Hardman home-place in Commerce. Lamartine Hardman, Jr., and Emma Griffin Hardman are standing by the cow. Old family servants of the Hardman family will be brought to Atlanta, too. The gardener, Tom Sanders, is shown above, in center, getting some instructions from the governor-elect. Tom has been with the family for more than 15 years. Fried chicken and hot corn sticks will grace the table of Georgia's governor, because Delia Cochran, chief cook for the Hardman family, will come to Atlanta and prepare the new governor's favorite dishes for him. She is shown at right, above. Besides running a cotton mill, half a dozen farms and serving as a physician, Dr. Hardman finds time to operate a couple of banks. He is president of the Northeastern Banking company, of Commerce, Ga., and is seen standing on the front steps of this institution, shaking hands with one of the bank's oldest customers, below at left. The photograph in the center below shows the Harmony Grove mills, a model mill, operated under modern conditions for workers. Foresight has been one of the agencies which brought success to Dr. Hardman. One example of this foresight is a storm pit built near his residence for use if a cyclone or tornado strikes his part of the state. If any squalls develop politically during his administration he will be supplied with a safe place of refuge.

HARDMAN WILL USE BUSINESS METHODS

carrying out the changes I feel must be made."

Road construction in Georgia has grown to be one of the biggest individual businesses in which the state is engaged and Dr. Hardman believes that the present State highway department should be reorganized along an entirely new plan. This plan he will outline to the legislature in one of his first messages.

The state department of agriculture which expends more than $500,000 a year, is another department that needs thorough reorganization, he says, and Dr. Hardman expressed a desire to cooperate with Eugene Talmadge, commissioner-elect of agriculture, and with the members of the legislature in putting that department on a business basis.

"Business" is a word which Dr. Hardman thinks should be particularly applied to these two departments.

Surprise Promised.

It is certain that the changes Dr. Hardman will recommend for caring for insane patients and also for handling state prisoners will cause much surprise. He said he would not make public his plan in this line until he becomes governor, but indicated broadly that he does not favor a centralization of the prisons and asylums at any one point in the state.

Dr. Hardman will visit Atlanta this week to visit the heads of all state departments in the capital to discuss with them various changes he feels should be made and to get the ideas of these officials as to the needs of the departments.

For several months Dr. Hardman has been studying the system of government used in other southern states.

Work With Assembly.

"In some of these states I have found that they are handling some situations much better than we are handling them," he said. "At the same time I found that Georgia is ahead of some of these states in many things. But the good things that are done in other states which I think can be done in Georgia I shall discuss with the state department heads and with members of the legislature."

Dr. Hardman is going to enter the governor's office convinced of the fact that he must work cordially with the state legislature to bring about the improvements he wants to see made and convinced that the work must be done during this session of that body.

"If the changes are not authorized at the present session of the legislature, then we will lose just two years," he said. "If authority for the changes can be obtained at this session then we can work out and put into effect many big changes in our governmental system, but changes which will improve things for a certainty and changes which have been deferred so long that they are absolutely necessary now."

tinued and enlarged operation of the association.

"It is a worthy and altogether heartening experience to help in the liberation of a people, no matter what that liberation may take. It is especially inspiring to assist in a movement which liberates all classes from a type of economic bondage which rests principally upon an outworn tradition. An opportunity so to serve their fellow Georgians is presented today to the more far-sighted and well-disposed people of our state. This campaign gives an opportunity specifically to support the Georgia association and its efforts to assist in establishing agriculture on a firm and profitable basis. Bankers and business men must play a large part in this.

Hits "One-Crop" Plan.

"I suppose everyone in Georgia knows something about the Georgia association. The association realizes that the all-cotton system developed in the last 75 years has in these modern times brought disaster to those following it, as any one-crop system will. It is proposing diversified farming and live stock growing, including dairying, as a substitute for all-cotton or any one-crop production, leaving cotton or tobacco to be raised as a genuine surplus crop. While this is the most important and the ultimate consideration, the emphasis at this time is being placed on the advertising of Georgia's soil and climate to farmers in other states already experienced in diversified farming and on bringing in these highly desirable settlers for our idle farms.

"So successful have been the efforts already put forth in behalf of the local change-over from cotton that only yesterday Dr. J. Phil Campbell, of the State College of Agriculture, declared that the demand for milk cows in Georgia was greater at the moment than could be supplied readily, so that the price of cows was advancing. The results of the 'cow-hog-hen' campaign have been satisfactory for the moment. I think, in these circumstances, it is well to concentrate all of the forces of the Georgia association on land settlement work which requires the preparation of ready-to-go farms so necessary to any successful and permanent settlement plan.

"Such work, involving as it does the principles of advertising, demands financing on a somewhat extensive scale. The whole history of the Georgia association during the eight years of its existence has been one of a struggle to keep afloat financially; I think the time is here when a work so important to the welfare of the state should be given proper support by the large business interests. This burden quite naturally falls upon these interests, if for no other reason, because there is no other source in Georgia from which money can come. Although the situation has changed materially since 1920, I think it is still well to keep firmly in mind the fact that the last census showed 74.9 per cent of our people were rural population. When we consider that the 1925 census reveals 61,623 farms in Georgia were abandoned between 1920 and 1925 it is perfectly clear that we cannot look to agriculture for the funds with which to sustain the work of the Georgia association. Such a wholesale abandonment can only mean that discouraging conditions prevail on the farms.

Fund Necessary.

"It seems to me equally plain that the business interests of Georgia can no hope to continue to prosper while the farms are affected as all of us know them to be affected. It is inevitable that the conditions which prevail in our basic industry will be reflected in every other business in the state.

"The Georgia association has enlisted a number of Georgia business men and in the opinion of these men it is necessary to raise $100,000 as a fund to undertake the work of land settlement and the rehabilitation of our farms. The sum seems a modest one in contrast with the great volume of work that must be done and the truly tremendous economic improvement which will follow such work, if properly done. This communication is intended as a direct appeal to the business men of Georgia to supply this money. Adequate safeguards will surround the spending of every dollar of it and it will be employed along a definite line which will be determined by the ablest business counsel we can summon.

"The Atlanta city bureau will assist us in the campaign throughout the state for this money. The bureau has had notable success. It had charge of the two movements which raised, respectively, $250,000 and $1,000,000 in Atlanta for advertising the city's advantages. Its forces have but just completed a campaign in Virginia similar in purpose to the one now proposed in behalf of the Georgia association, and its efforts were entirely successful.

Work Must Go On.

"I feel that the more ordinary forms of business foresight will show to the business men of Georgia, and the business interests operating in part in Georgia, that this money must be raised and that this work must go on. The burden hitherto has been borne by a few interests and their financial assistance has been, while generous, necessarily inadequate to the present task with its magnitude. This is a state movement, which affects every phase of the life of Georgia. It should and must be supported and encouraged and cooperated with by every business institution in the state.

"We believe that the emergency is fully known to all of our people and that this opportunity to do real farm reorganization work will be responded to most generously by our aggressive and unselfish leaders."

SEASON TICKETS WILL BE OFFERED

Broadway. Two members of the Atlanta company were principals in the original company.

Gilbert and Sullivan's ever popular and fascinating "Pinafore" and two of the best, though entirely different, Victor Herbert works are included in the repertoire this year. His "Serenade," sung many years by the Famous Bostonians and "The Red Mill," in which the marvelous team, Montgomery and Stone, made such a hit, will be presented with especially selected casts of first class singers and actors. "The Count of Luxembourg," by Lehar, the composer of "The Merry Widow," will charm with its delightful waltzes and "Blue Paradise," by Romberg, one of the foremost composers of musical comedy, with its elaborate settings and splendid book, will be a joy to all.

Company Carefully Selected.

The company of 11 principals has been carefully selected for ability to sing and fitness for the several parts each is expected to play. Two visits by the management to New York and one to Chicago for numerous hearings were necessary before the ones finally chosen were contracted with. No proper expense of time or money has been spared in an endeavor to provide the best available talent.

The productions will be in charge of Lewis J. Morton, the splendid stage director of the past two seasons, and will be under the baton of Charles Ferton, the musical director of last season who endeared himself to everyone with whom he came in contact.

The scenery will be designed and built after models of the original productions in Atlanta studios by capable artists and builders; the costumes will be new, exactly portraying the spirit and historical setting of each play. The orchestra will be selected from local musicians.

The selection of operas is not altogether the work of those who have the particular work in charge. The manager inaugurated a policy which will be followed in the future, that of soliciting from patrons a suggestion as to the repertoire for the ensuing year. With the exception of "Dearest Enemy," which has never before been seen out of New York, the list of operas to be given represents the popular choice of last season.

The scale of prices is as follows:

Orchestra (first 18 rows)	$2.00
Balance	1.50
Mezzanine	2.00
Balcony (first four rows)	1.50
Next four rows	1.00
Balance	.75
Gallery (entire)	.50

The large capacity and admirable design of the Erlanger will provide a large number of very choice seats. The abnormal demand for season tickets, however, undoubtedly makes it advisable for patrons to secure reservations in advance.

PEACH CROP HIT BY WINDSTORM

Macon, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Violent electrical storms over Georgia this afternoon brought the heaviest rain of the month. It was especially heavy around Barnesville and Goggins, according to reports here.

Between Box Springs and Upatoi there was high wind and many trees were blown down. Whether there was any other damage there has not been determined.

Hail and wind accompanying the rain caused heavy losses to many peach growers.

The storm swept through the orchards in Taylor, Macon, Peach, Lamar, Monroe and Bibb counties and estimates of losses to the crop are from five to 25 per cent.

In the orchards surrounding Reynolds, the growers state that the crop had been injured 25 per cent. The loss is heavy from injury to the fruit from hail and much damage also occurred from the high winds blowing the fruit to the ground. Last year this section of the belt shipped around 350 cars.

The Macon county section of the belt is another region that also suffered heavy damage. Losses totaling between 125 to 150 cars are estimated. Besides heavy damage to the fruit in this section many of the trees in the orchards were uprooted and broken, besides several homes being blown down and many windows broken. No injuries, however, have been reported.

According to reports from Fort Valley, the injury to the fruit there is estimated at 5 per cent, with practically all of the damage confined to the Hileys and Early Rose variety.

Due to the fact that telephone communications have been torn down, growers in other sections of the belt have not reported the extent of the damage their orchards suffered.

SMALL HURRICANE STRIKES SAVANNAH AREA.

Savannah, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Striking Savannah at 7:30 o'clock tonight a local storm of limited area gathered force until it reached Tybee Island where it became a small hurricane. In half an hour's time all vestige of the storm had disappeared, except the five or six thousand dollars in the damage which it is estimated was the result of its visit at the seaside resort.

Sharp lightning accompanied the blow in Savannah, which came from the northwest. Much rain fell in a few minutes and its cessation was equally brief. The blow passed the Thunderbolt and Isle of Hope, picking up momentum at each outlying spot. A couple of small craft at Isle of Hope were blown from their mooring and sent drifting away. At Tybee one home was unroofed, a hotel kitchen and garage demolished and some private dwellings and stores somewhat damaged. No lives lost or injuries were reported. Some trees were blown down.

After the storm a peculiar and very yellow glow settled over the whole of the county, making an exceptionally beautiful appearance. There were two rainbows noticed after the storm.

FIERCE WIND AT HAWKINSVILLE.

Hawkinsville, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—A fierce windstorm of funnel shape formation and with almost cyclonic velocity, swept through Hawkinsville and this immediate section at 4 o'clock this afternoon, doing considerable damage to buildings, uprooting huge trees and felling wires. Business was practically suspended during the greater part of the afternoon. Debris of various kinds was seen flying in all directions but no reports of any casualties have reached here.

The deed was committed with an old rusty .32 pistol, which contained one cartridge. He leaves his wife and two small children, a boy and a girl. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Battle, vice presidents; Miss Julia Mae Fillingim, secretary; Mrs. L. V. Ware, treasurer, and Mrs. Arthur McGuigan, parliamentarian.

Features of the musical program included vocal solos by Solon Dreikemiller, accompanied at the piano by Alton O'Steen, and a piano solo by Miss Ruth Marchman.

MOSELEY ENTERS HOTEL BUSINESS

Creation of a public relations department and appointment of L. O. Moseley, Atlanta newspaperman as director, was announced Saturday by Carling L. Dinkler, president of Dinkler Hotels, Inc.

Publicity and advertising duties and general contact will be combined in the one department and under one direction as a further step toward better service to the public and as furthering the splendid relations between the general public and hotels of the system throughout the south.

The new public relations director will assume his duties on June 1, with offices at the Ansley hotel. For the most part, it is said, the work of the department will be handled from general offices of the Dinkler Hotels, Inc., in the Ansley hotel, with regular visits to other cities where hotels of the chain are operated.

"It has been the policy and will continue to be the policy of the Dinkler Hotels, Inc., to afford the greatest possible service to the public using hotels. The proper functioning of the public relations offices will be to further that policy," officials explained. "To that end we have selected one of the best known and most capable young newspapermen in the south to take charge of that important work."

Mr. Moseley joins the Dinkler system after nearly five years in various capacities in the editorial department of The Constitution, going to his new work from the city desk of the paper. Prior to coming to Atlanta he was a newspaperman in Dublin, Ga., following the war. Before entering the world war, serving in France for two years where he was cited for "exceptionally meritorious and conspicuous service," Mr. Moseley was private secretary to Congressman W. W. Larsen, of the twelfth district. After the war he joined in the management of Congressman Larsen's successful campaign for reelection. During the three years following the war he was in the newspaper business in Dublin and served as secretary of the Dublin Country club and secretary of the Kiwanis club of that city.

Mr. Moseley attended Emory college, at Oxford, where was a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. As a member of The Constitution's "family," Mr. Moseley has handled various assignments and for a year was director of The Constitution's powerful broadcasting station, WGM, where he became widely popular as an announcer. Since organization of the 122d infantry, national guard, three years ago, he has been a captain and assigned the duties of plans and training officer.

In joining the Dinkler hotel system, Mr. Moseley identifies himself with one of the strongest hotel chains in the country and one of the most rapidly growing and healthy corporations in the United States. His experience with the public and the contacts he has established in newspaper work are expected to aid him no little in his new work.

FORD THANKS VOTERS WHO SUPPORTED HIM

Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth ward, who was defeated for renomination Wednesday in the city democratic primary by a margin of 210 votes, Saturday issued a statement thanking his friends for their support.

"I want to thank every one of you for the loyal and unstinted support you gave me in my race for reelection," Mr. Ford said. "Our defeat by a small majority I attribute to overconfidence on our part. We did not even conduct an active campaign, nor send out a letter. We held only two political meetings. I was more interested in the defeat of the proposed city manager charter for Atlanta than in my own race, and devoted much of my time to campaigning against it.

"My home ward, the tenth, gave me a majority of 2 to 1 and the home precinct where both Mr. Everett Millican and I live, piled up a vote of 3 to 1 in my favor despite the fact that I did not solicit a single vote in the tenth ward.

"I have about seven months of my term yet to serve, and will do my utmost to accomplish even more for my ward and the city than in the past. I hope to complete the work I have consistently sponsored and reconstruct and relocate Battle Hill sanitarium, widen Whitehall and extend Broad street and acquire for the city a municipally owned and operated cemetery. I love Atlanta and will continue to serve her to the best of my ability, whether as an official or a layman. I congratulate my successor and offer him by most hearty cooperation."

GEO. B. LYLE THANKS SUPPORTERS IN RACE

George B. Lyle, newly nominated councilman from the eleventh ward, Saturday issued a statement thanking his supporters for their loyalty during his campaign, and praising Earl Carmain and O. P. Walton, his opponents, for the clean race they ran against him.

"I shall try to deserve the confidence and trust reposed in me, and wish to thank those who supported me so loyally," Mr. Lyle said. "I have nothing but praise for my opponents who conducted clean, manly campaigns against me. My only solicitation is that all sections of the ward unite with me for a greater and better Atlanta."

AWAKENING OPENS ON MONDAY NIGHT

The last rehearsal is over, the cast of more than 500 Atlantans has been whipped into shape, the special lights and scenery have been installed and everything is ready for the opening performance Monday night of "The Awakening," to be staged at the Atlanta theater all this week by the John B. Gordon Camp, No. 46, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

It is hoped that, through proceeds from the extravaganza, sufficient funds will be raised to send members of the United Confederate Veterans to this year's reunion and to bring to Atlanta the 1929 convention, probably the last gathering which ever will be held by the ever-diminishing ranks of the defenders of the Confederacy.

"The Awakening" presents in picturesque style the pathetic struggles of the south during the days following the war between the states, and depicts many scenes of the old plantation days. The dramatic scenes are modeled closely after "The Birth of a Nation."

In addition to the dramatic acts will be presented 15 specialty numbers, featuring virtually all of Atlanta's best known amateur entertainers. The response of the city's talent to the call to aid the veterans was great, and Director James H. Hull's task was not to find performers, but to select the best from the many available. Every kind of vaudeville entertainment, Charleston and black bottom acts, opera selections, specialty song and dance acts and acrobatic acts—will be included in the program.

Every member of the cast, and it includes more than 500 people, are Atlantans with the exception of Director Hull. The spectacle includes 26 acts, and the program is so arranged that there is not a lull in the entertainment, the feature numbers being on the stage while scenes are being changed for the dramatic acts.

The costumes are said to be the most gorgeous ever shown in Atlanta. Thirty-eight sets of costumes, valued at more than $100,000, are used, and costumes for one act alone are said to have cost $25,000.

The ticket sale for "The Awakening" has been reported brisk during the three days the box office has been open, and it is hoped that through sale of tickets at the box office and by members of the Sons of Confederate Veterans the net profit will amount to several thousand dollars.

The spectacle will be presented every night this week, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. The box office will be open every day and mail orders will be accepted.

EXCAVATORS HIT BED-ROCK FOR CONSTITUTION'S MODEL HOME

PROGRESS IS MADE DESPITE WEATHER

Only Nationally Standardized Equipment Will Be Used in Building Modern Dwelling.

A foundation in rock—

That is the newest element to enter into construction of the model demonstration home being erected through The Constitution in Avondale Estates.

Rock was struck in the subsoil on Lakeshore drive, where excavating work is under way for the foundation of the model home to be constructed of the best materials and proven brands, it was revealed in the account of construction during the past week.

That the initial demonstration house, being erected under auspices of The Constitution to prove in its campaign for better homes the ultimate economy of building with nationally-standardized materials, should unintentionally have its foundation set in sturdy rock, is a pleasing quip of fate. Originally planned to be constructed from ground to gable only of the most durable substances, it now develops the residence will be situated on the unscrolled support of rock, an element added by fortune's design and fully in keeping with the high quality of the architect's specifications.

In spite of intermittent rains and the unexpected conditions met with in excavation stages, progress on the model dwelling has been pushed forward unretarded and no deviation from the present plans are anticipated by the builder, Hoke N. Smith, whose experience as a residential contractor, enables him to cope with the varying conditions. The period allotted for construction of the model demonstration house is set at 12 weeks. Specifications call for the exclusive use of standard, nationally-known construction materials and equipment. The layout of the home, designed by Raymond C. Snow, supervising architect for The Constitution and the Home Owners' Service Institute, with which this paper is cooperating in the national campaign for better homes, is ideal and specially fitted to the surroundings. That all these provisions will be carried out as planned is assured through regular inspection of the supervising architect, an expert in the small home problem.

Well Organized.

Behind the erection of the dwelling, serving as a demonstration to our readers in proper construction with standard materials and to be put on public exhibition for four weeks when completed, is a wealth of organization and preparation. The Home Owners' Service institute is pledged to encourage better residence construction throughout the country. Its national program for 1927 includes building of demonstration model houses in 28 "key" cities from coast to coast. Atlanta is one of the 28 cities and The Constitution is sponsoring the work here as a foundation for making Atlanta a city of carefully planned and well built homes.

The site at 36 Lakeshore drive in Avondale Estates was selected as the ideal spot for The Constitution's first model demonstration dwelling. The plans were designed with exacting care by Mr. Snow, who will supervise the architectural features through to completion. Mr. Smith, erecting the home has been provided with specifications calling for nationally-tested, standard materials as the only constituents entering the residence. During the entire process of construction the proper building methods and correct selection of materials will afford visitors to the Lakeshore drive site a practical lesson in home erection. Readers of this page will be furnished with detailed description of the actual problems confronted in building the model home. When completed, furnished and ready for exhibition, the home will provide an example of residential building with maximum efficiency from expert design, insuring minimum waste space, with full conveniences and comforts.

The principal feature of the demonstration building undertaking lies in using all standard, nationally-advertised materials and equipment to secure durability and beauty in a small home at the lowest ultimate cost. Home-builders and home-buyers are entitled to know what lies between the interior and exterior surfaces of the finished residence. In other words, of what is their home built? That can be ascertained only if each construction component is known. If the individual ingredients bear names known throughout the home-building world for their integrity and the excellence of quality and workmanship in their products, the home in question will be a known quantity. The buyer or person for whom it was built can have confidence in his possession.

Tested Methods.

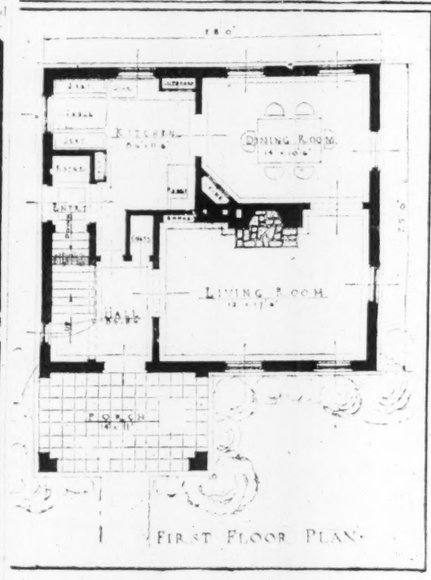

Only when the elements entering into a home are known and evaluated in terms of proven adaptability is the investment safe. Upkeep, another important feature to be considered in home ownership, can be apportioned with accuracy when standard equipment and building materials compose the domicile. Home-building is an old and well-established trade and one in which time and experience have proven the best methods and materials to be used. The more homes built here in accordance with these tested methods and with materials stamped with the names signifying the standard of perfection, the quicker will Atlanta be a city of residential prosperity.

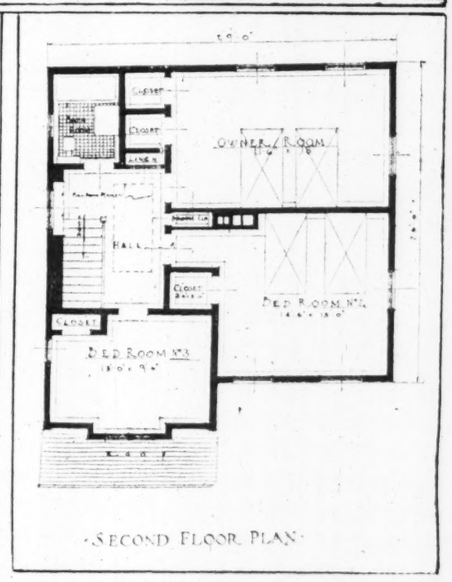

Construction work on The Constitution's model home, entering on the third week of its inauguration, will provide examples of the materials and methods to be used for the best results. It will demonstrate the economy of their use for low cost of building and upkeep. It will interest home-seekers by its provisions for comfort, convenience, beauty and economy. And as a result of the national campaign, being sponsored in Atlanta by The Constitution, construction of the model demonstration home is expected to create a desire for the best dwellings obtainable, that at the same time are available to families of moderate circumstances.

Watch the erection of the Lakeshore drive home, go to inspect the work, follow the progress of the building on the new Model Home page in The Constitution and be sure to visit the house when it is completed. You will learn the right way to build a home. If you have no thought of home-buying or building, inspect the home anyway. It may surprise you to see how charming a small house of reasonable cost can be.

Comfort and Coziness Stressed in Today's Plan

PLANS FROM HOMEOWNERS' SERVICE INSTITUTE, INC., (C) 1927.

Plan No. 259-S shows cottage designed in the correct English rural style by R. Alex Willson, prominent Pittsburgh architect. Complete blueprints and specifications for this plan, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost.

Houses Should Be Built To Last Generations

The kind of a house we like is one of quiet repose, many comfy corners, plenty of room to live in; a house that will maintain strength and beauty even for generations to come.

Too often nowadays houses are built for the time only—and too often are we Americans coming to change houses just as we do our automobiles.

Strict Adherence to English Type Shown in Today's Plan

Cottage Gains Spaciousness by Use of Built-In Equipment; Architecture Designed to Impart Air of Coziness.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President Home Owners' Institute, Inc.

We are offering the home builder today, as plan No. 259-S, another cottage designed in the correct English style. The plan is from R. Alex Willson, the well-known Pittsburgh architect, and has proved unusually popular with admirers of the picturesque thatched type of small house.

The exterior of the cottage is of common brick on the lower floor, and stucco and half timbers on the upper floor. The dormer effect on one side adds a decorative touch, as do the brick columns and unusual central location of the chimney.

The roof lends itself to a multicolor effect and might be of slate, slate-surfaced, copper-clad or cedar shingles. The oak door, with its iron hinges, and the long casement windows are attractive features.

The interior is arranged with an unusual number of built-in conveniences. From the porch one enters a hall which is sufficiently large to deserve the title of foyer. At the right is the spacious living room, which has a brick fireplace and built-in bookshelves. The dining room, directly behind it, has a built-in china cabinet, and the large kitchen at the left has one end arranged as a breakfast nook with a table and built-in seat.

On the second floor are three bedrooms, a bath and six closets. The bedroom in the rear extends almost the entire width of the house; the other two rooms are also of rather large dimensions and one of them has the cozy window seat which always adds so much to the hominess of a rooms, a bath and six closets. The terior of the little house fairly breathe coziness and comfort, and at the same time the design runs strictly true to type.

According to the estimates of Arthur Bates Lincoln, consulting architect of Home Owners' Institute, the house contains 23,000 cubic feet and may be erected in the vicinity of New York for approximately $13,000. Outline of recommended specifications follows.

Masonry—Concrete floorings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be concrete block or poured concrete made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Exterior walls of common brick as shown on drawings. Chimney of common brick, all walls lined or constructed with interlocking chimney brick. Fireplace of selected brick; provide ash dump with clean out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage or trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. California white pine for exterior mill work and interior trim; oak floors. Steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior opening to be of brass or bronze.

Stucco Work—Exterior walls finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco on metal lath, as shown on drawings. Finish coat colored and textured as directed.

Casement Windows—Steel or wood casement windows may be used at owner's option.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or even wood lath. We suggest you obtain alternate bids on metal lath and wood lath. Insulating lumber or plaster board may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, leaders, down spouts and flashing to be 16-ounce copper on No. 11 gauge zinc.

Roofing—Roof of variegated slate, slate surfaced or copper-clad shingles, to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions. Color as selected. Asbestos cement or cedar shingles at owner's option.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready mixed paint, shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from metal to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot water heater. If sewage connections are not avgilable use of reinforced concrete septic tank is recommended.

Tile Work—Tile work and waincote on bathroom with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam or hot water boiler, coal, oil or gas fired. Hot air at owner's option.

Temperature Control—Heat regulators with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating board (or insulating quilt if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Good Screen Frames Pay.

Supplemental to wooden frame, and providing particular advantage, is the screen frame of enameled pressed steel. Its graceful slenderness harmonizes perfectly with the light members of the metal casement. Of course the bronze frame is even more beautiful and never rusts out; but its cost is about double that of steel.

Remember the Old Red Brick Schoolhouse?

An echo from the days of yesterday—when we youngsters just knew there wasn't anything as magnificent and imposing as our little old red brick schoolhouse.

A schoolhouse was to be built recently—up in Pennsylvania. Twelve bids were received, on frame and on common brick with hollow tile back-up.

Burnt Clay Products won out! Figures showed that brick and tile would cost only 4.63% more than frame. And the school board knew, of course, that burnt clay products are going to save in maintenance at least 25% of the total investment over a 10-year period!

Ask your building material dealer to show you the beauty and economy that can be obtained with dependable, permanent burnt clay products manufactured by the members of this Association.

Avondale Chosen as Model Home-Site
National Organization Announces Decision
In conjunction with the Home Owners Institute national program of Model Homes, The Atlanta Constitution is erecting at Avondale the first of a series of ideal homes. These model homes are intended to inspire a greater appreciation of the benefits of home-owning, and it is supremely fitting that the first of them should be in Avondale.
Avondale is the most complete residential development in the South. It is so acclaimed by prominent executives whose work has taken them over the country, and who have lived in the finest sections of cities in the East and Mid-West.
These men, coming to Atlanta, have searched the city over for ideal home-sites, and have chosen Avondale, as have so many Atlantans. They found here out-of-doors life at its uttermost. Golf, tennis, swimming, boating, fishing, riding and many other sports almost at their front doors. They found modern, fully-equipped playgrounds for their children. They found paved streets, complete shopping facilities, schools and all other advantages they wanted in this perfect community.
And so they bought in Avondale, as you will buy in Avondale—for the pleasures of a life away from the noise and dirt and dangers of the city, yet close to the heart of things in minutes.

Georgia's Cotton Products Show Big Gain in Valuation, Commerce Report Shows

Although cotton prices were lower in 1926 than the previous year the value of the manufactured cotton products of Georgia in 1926 exceed that of 1925 by $5,875,174, according to figures made public Saturday by Hal M. Stanley, head of the state department of commerce and labor, in his annual report which has been sent to the printer. The total value of cotton products manufactured in Georgia by 203 textile mills was $247,897,961 in 1926, according to the report.

This industry alone offered employment to 64,603 Georgians and its pay roll for the year amounted to $35,686,347 in wages, and $5,335,410 in salaries to officers and clerks, the report said.

With a combined capital of $196,179,249, Georgia's textile mills consisted of 161 cotton and silk mills, three woolen mills, eight mills that knit and spin, and 31 mills that knit, the commissioner said. Their products included various kinds of cloth, such as sheetings, ducks, drills, denims, khaki, towels, tickings, laprobes, rugs, bedspreads, tire fabrics, hose, knit underwear, twine, sash cords, rope, thread, and many kinds of woolen goods. Incorporated in the commissioner's report is a summary for 1925 26 of the operations of 22 different classes of manufacturing industries in the state, or 2,430 industrial plants.

The number of plants under each classification, the combined value of their products, and the number of persons employed were given as follows:

Threat of Blue Sunday Is Hurled As Result of Fight Over Ponies

The menacing shadow of blue laws hovered over Atlanta Saturday and threatened to close tight every recreation resort in the city on the heels of a warning of a group of citizens in the vicinity of Grant park that they will seek an injunction to prevent the newly acquired Shetland ponies from traversing the track at the play center on Sunday afternoons.

Directly after John A. White, chairman of the parks committee of city council, was presented a copy of the letter, he retaliated by threatening to close swimming pools, golf and tennis courses and all other concessions at the parks on Sunday if the appeal were taken into the courts.

In addition to closing municipally owned and operated recreation centers, Mr. White and other members of the parks committee declared Saturday that they would "institute proceedings designed to close filling stations, soda fountains, golf courses, tennis courts and every other form of business or pleasure which is not absolutely necessary unless the children of Atlanta are permitted to use the wholesome recreation facilities we have labored so hard to provide."

Would Lock City.

If this threat is carried out, Atlanta would be locked tight on Sundays with the possible single exception of restaurants and prescription counters. All forms of amusement, recreation and merchandise would be taboo with the clamping of the lid tightly against these activities.

Grant park residents in close proximity to the pony track have complained that confusion incident to operation of the resort has annoyed them and several days ago asked Mr. White to move the track. He stated at the time, according to his announcement Saturday, that a survey of the available locations had disclosed the fact that the track could not be moved advantageously.

Saturday morning he received a letter from a committee, composed of J. H. Ewing, chairman; W. A. DeLamar, P. P. Jackson and C. H. Brundidge, threatening court procedure unless activities of the track are suspended on Sunday afternoon.

Issues Ultimatum.

Mr. White immediately issued the following ultimatum:

"If the city is enjoined from allowing the children of Atlanta to enjoy themselves on the Sabbath through the innocent amusement of riding a Shetland pony, then every single concession in all Atlanta parks, including swimming pools, golf courses, tennis courts, the cyclorama and everything else will be closed down. Sundays will be truly blue if the complainants carry their fight to success.

"Under the rule laid down by the committee the track was to be barred from use Sunday morning during the hours for Sunday school and church. Swimming pools and other park concessions likewise have been suspended during church hours. But the manner in which the children of Atlanta have been attracted by the ponies on Sunday afternoons, both at Grant and Piedmont parks, has been evidenced by the increasing number of patrons.

"You must remember that golf, tennis, swimming and other park concessions are allowed on Sundays, and if you stop one you will stop all the wheels; but that is your privilege, and if you desire to enjoin us that will be all right, because we cannot move the ponies or the track except by orders of the courts."

Commenting on the outgrowth of the citizens' meeting, J. H. Ewing stated Saturday night that there is no intention on the part of the complainants to abolish the ponies or any other form of recreation, but merely to have the track moved to a point where the noise and dust for which it is blamed will not be objectionable to residents across from the park.

"My interest in the affair was elicited through inconveniences experienced by my invalid mother-in-law, who lives on Park avenue opposite the pony track," Mr. Ewing stated. "While I did not anticipate the 'blue Sunday' turn to the incident, I am determined to resort to any honorable means of eliminating the present nuisance if need be." Another meeting of the Park avenue residents will be held Monday or Tuesday night, Mr. Ewing announced.

Emory Community To Seek Bond Issue For School Building

Emory University, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—The Emory community will seek to erect a new school building with a bond issue, it was decided tonight when a committee was authorized to seek signatures to a petition calling the election at a meeting held here. It will require the signatures of 10 per cent of the voters in the school district to call the election, it was stated. Dr. Harvey W. Cox presided over the meeting.

Dr. J. Sam Guy was named chairman of the bond committee, which will also ascertain the sentiment as to increasing the tax rate to pay off the bonds.

Slight mention was made tonight of the formation of a separate township or of being incorporated into Atlanta, the main question at issue being the need of a school building.

State Must Assure Public Health, Declares Walker

The question of public health in Georgia and the necessity of providing adequate funds to maintain public health work are discussed by Governor Clifford Walker in a statement issued Saturday. The governor is issuing a series of statements in which he discusses various governmental problems of the state, each being devoted to some specific branch of the state government.

Following is his statement on public health work: :

"A new type of army is necessary today to secure to every citizen the 'right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.' When the bewigged writers of the declaration of independence made 'the right to life' the first of their hold trio of fundamentals they felt that actual physical life could be assured to the citizens of the new republic by maintaining a standing army and a police force. Death stalked unchecked in the pioneer community. Disease was attributed to natural forces, and the protection of society from its fearful attacks, more damaging than any ever wrought by a human enemy, was not then considered a responsibility of government.

"But in recent years medical science has conquered one disease after another until today thousands of premature deaths are preventable. 'The right to life' has attained a new meaning as something which the state may give to its citizens, or withheld from them. If the state has within its power the means to assure to its citizens the right to life but withholds it, thousands of them have little opportunity to enjoy either liberty or the pursuit of happiness. They are deprived of all three of the fundamental rights guaranteed them in the constitution.

"If the state persists in refusing the right to life to these thousands; if it will not add to the standing army and the police force a health army capable of protecting every citizen in his right to live; if there is to continue an unmitigated struggle to exist on the part of some of our citizens; then these citizens have the democratic right since they are taxed to maintain a military army and a police force to demand of the government the full protection of life from preventable disease.

"In spite of the attainments of preventive medicine the majority of the people of Georgia and a large percentage of the people of the United States, are little better as to health conditions today than they were thirty years ago. Certain sanitary and isolation laws are the only health measures which affect every member of a given community. Other health measures such as work with mal-nourished children, maternity care and even tuberculosis clinics are sporadic, affect only a limited clientele and however extensive, do not reach all the people who are entitled to them.

"A state government which cannot bear to have a child grow up an illiterate but which still can bear to see him needlessly become an invalid or die, is a rather curious guardian of its people. Yet within the five years ending January 1, 1925, 30,512 people died in Georgia as the result of diseases that are unquestianably preventable. These diseases cannot be prevented by the individual's own efforts nor by his physician, but can only be prevented by organized public health measures. Typhoid fever killed 3,820, malaria 2,922, smallpox 74, diphtheria 1,971, measles, scarlet fever and whooping cough 2,725, pellagra 2,252, tuberculosis 12,840, dysentery and diarhea under 2 years 6,160. At least five times this many people suffered from these diseases during the period, though not fatally, and in many instances will bear the marks to an early grave. One-third of the people are handicapped by disease, two-thirds of which is easily preventable.

Economic Loss.

"The economic loss to the state incident to the illness and premature death of these thousands is incalculable. Even the monetary loss to Georgia has been estimated to reach the appalling sum of $21,407,820 annually.

"That the right to life can be protected has already been fully proven here in Georgia. In counties like Bartow, Mitchell, Clarke and Walker, where the typhoid death rate in 1922 ranged from 17.11 to 46.89, the establishment of a public health unit has practically abolished typhoid, while the rate for Georgia as a whole still remains above 26. Georgia has one-forty-second of the population of the United States and one-tenth of all the cases of typhoid fever in the United States occur in Georgia.

"The cities of Macon, and Athens have not had a death from diphtheria in more than twelve months as the result of a campaign of immunization through the use of toxin-antitoxin.

"The improved standards of living, lowered incidence of important communicable diseases, and increased longevity which has accompanied the spread of public health organization during the past decade is proof enough of its effectiveness when applied to a part of the population. Thus far in Georgia it has reached only 25 of our richer counties, while more than 75 per cent of our population is without official health service.

Must Take Up War.

"This failure to finance an adequate army of public health cannot be attributed to povery. As long as we spend $21 per capita for tobacco, $3 for patent medicines, $1.25 for cosmetics, 50 cents for chewing gum, we can certainly afford to spend more than 3 cents per capital for health. Other states with no more wealth spend 15 to 25 cents. Many counties in Georgia are financially unable to maintain an adequate health service but the state government is the acknowledged guarantor of the citizen's right to life.

"The time has come when Georgia must make up this war against the dread but easily conquered enemies of mankind. If a foreign enemy were slaughtering 30,000 of our people an emergency would be declared, the governor would have the constitutional right to bond the state if necessary, millions would be raised to drive the enemy from our shores.

"There is the nucleus of an army of public health. Our state department of health with meager equipment and thin, but determined lines has fought in the face of overwhelming odds, purifying our muinicapl water systems, campaigning for sanitation and immunization against diseases, training midwives and mothers, examining thousands of children and correcting physical defects, carrying the gospel of health in out of the way places through the healthmobile. It has kept up the fight with bravery that should shame the rest of us.

"We love the old veterans, and rightfully spend millions from the state treasury each year to protect them in their last days. Do we love the children less? We spent through the state board of health this year only $96,431 to protect the children in their 'right to life.' Let the legislature answer."

TWO HURT WHEN AUTOS AND MILK WAGON COLLIDE

Two persons were slightly injured late Saturday afternoon in a collision involving two automobiles and a milk wagon on Hilliard street near Tanner.

A touring car driven by W. H. Spratling, of 1004 Williams Mill road, and a milk wagon driven by J. C. Askew, of 838 Windsor street, were approaching each other from opposite directions, when a touring car driven by Bobbie Lee Green, negress, attempted to pass between them and caused the accident, according to the report of Call Officers Eugene Head and W. J. Anderson.

H. O. Askew, father of the milk-wagon driver, and Charlie Timms, of 290 Hendrix avenue, an occupant of the milk wagon, received slight injuries. The Green woman escaped after the accident, according to police, but was later arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

J. L. Welch, of the Southern Railway, was treated at Davis-Fischer sanitarium for injuries of the foot received when he slipped and fell in the path of a truck driven by Perry McClain, negro, according to a report by Officer C. L. Hamilton. No case was made against McClain, who was not to blame for the accident, police said.

ATLANTAN IN CAR THAT KILLS NEGRO NEAR AMERICUS

Americus, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) Helen Black, six-year-old negro girl, was struck by an automobile near here today and almost instantly killed. The car was driven by H. M. Stoney, of Jacksonville, and Myron Faulk, of Atlanta, was traveling with him, the two returning from Florida to Atlanta at the time of the occurrence. The accident occurred three miles south of Ellaville, on the Ellaville-Americus highway, and was witnessed by Paul White and J. D. Moore, white residents of that vicinity.

The Stoney car was traveling at moderate speed and the accident was declared by witnesses to have been unavoidable, no charges being made against either Stoney or his companion.

CALLES' WIFE RESTING WELL AFTER OPERATION

Los Angeles, Cal., May 28.—United News.)—Senora Natalia Calles, wife of the president of Mexico, tonight was reported resting comfortably after an operation at California Lutheran hospital. The operation was designed to relieve an intestinal disorder.

IRISH ELECTIONS NEXT WEDNESDAY

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 28.—(AP)—"We cut your tails, we drew your fangs, you curs," roared Kevin O'Higgins, minister of justice of the Free State, to hecklers at a political meeting in County Monaghan this week. He was making one of his final speeches in the hotly-contested campaign which will terminate in general election nominations next Wednesday.

Mr. O'Higgins' impassioned retort was made to quell lusty opponents of the Free State during one of the wildest political gatherings ever held in the border county of Monaghan. It rivalled the rough-and-tumble political clashes recorded in American frontier days.

"Murderer," shouted the hecklers at Mr. O'Higgins when reference was made to the executions carried out during the existence of the Free State.

"If necessary," he shouted back, "we will execute 77 more."

The general elections will be held June 8 and the new Dail Eireann will meet June 23. Seven or eight contesting factions are bidding for votes and picking the winner is an absorbing and almost uncertain a task as picking that of next Wednesday's English derby.

NAVAL LIMITATION PLANS COMPLETE

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—A specific naval arms limitation plan has been worked out here at conferences between Secretary Kellogg and Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium and head of the American delegation to the three-power conference to be held at Geneva.

Details of the plan will not be announced, however, until the opening session of the conference between representatives of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, June 20. It is expected that the agenda will be shaped up sufficiently for Mr. Gibson to take it with him when he sails from New York next Saturday.

Secretary Kellogg declined today to discuss possible additions to the American delegation, reiterating that the question was in the hands of President Coolidge. There had been suggestions that some outstanding man from private life might be appointed, and in some quarters it had been thought that Mr. Gibson, who has not yet conferred with the president, might ask to be relieved of the assignment, to permit him to take up his duties at Brussels. He has been in daily conferences, however, with state department officials and naval experts preparing details of the Geneva meeting.

Mr. Gibson will be accompanied to Geneva by part of the delegation, the others being expected to sail a week later.

The secretary generalship of the three-power conference will be held by Hugh R. Wilson, recently appointed minister to Switzerland.

COAL OPERATORS SEE AGREEMENT

Philadelphia, May 28.—(AP)—Despite the failure of the joint conference of bituminous coal operators and union miners of the central Pennsylvania field to negotiate a new wage contract after a five days' session, operators predicted today that an agreement would be reached when the conference reconvenes next month.

Under the temporary arrangement the mines will continue in operation with wages based on the Jacksonville agreement which expired March 31 and which the operators seek to deduce. Unless a new scale is negotiated at the conclusion of the next conference the owners announced that this arrangement would be terminated.

The conference adjourned yesterday to reconvene here June 15.

FEDERAL ROAD FUND INCREASE TO BE SOUGHT

Savannah, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) Savannah is to be the scene of one of the most interesting good roads gatherings that has ever assembled in the south, on the occasion of the meeting of the United States Good Roads association and the Bankhead National Highway association, during the week of June 6-11, officials here state.

Nationwide interest has been attracted to this convention by the publicity of more than 500 dailies each week, and 1,000 weekly papers and magazines throughout the country, as well as the broadcasting of speeches and news over broadcasting stations. It is estimated that more than a million people have listened over the radios and more than two million people have read about the convention.

The convention will be composed of delegates from more than 40 states in the union. These delegates are coming from all walks of life, men and women who are interested in road building from a practical and business standpoint.

The positive acceptances to attend the convention have been received from seven governors, four United States senators, sixteen congressmen and other national, state, county and city officials from all over the country. The meeting, dealing, as it will, with highway legislation, financing, construction and maintenance, will be most important and far-reaching. History-making resolutions and platforms will be adopted, and a campaign will be started to have congress enact them into laws when it meets next December, it is stated.

The business sessions will be devoted to national, state and local good roads policies. Entertainments by the people of Savannah will intermingle each day's session of the convention. The primary object of the meeting of the United States Good Roads association in Savannah, announces Director General J. A. SPOTS AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, May 28.—Spot cotton closed steady, 26 points up; sales, 3,368; low middling, 14.48; middling, 16.48; good middling, 17.43.

New Orleans, May 28.—(AP)—All deliveries soared to new highs in today's cotton market on the dry weather and hot winds in Texas and official forecast for continued dry weather in the state over Sunday. The market was on the upgrade most of the day, despite lower Liverpool cables and the holiday in New York. The high points were reached right at the end and the market closed steady at net advances of 28 to 32.

Although Liverpool cables were 3 to 6 penny points lower than due the market here opened 2 to 9 points up and continued on the advance until by the end of the first hour July traded at 16.55, October 16.98 and December 17.20, 20 to 22 points above the previous close.

After a recession of a few points on realizing and week-end liquidation the market started on the upgrade in the later trading and near the end July reached 16.74, October 17.07 and December 17.32, 29 to 34 points net up. These levels attracted some selling and the market eased off a few points but closed steady near the top.

The first new Texas bale was reported ginned at San Juan, Texas, Friday and is the earliest ginned in that state since 1921 when the first ginning occurred May 26.

Exports for the day totaled 26,743 bales.

COTTONSEED OIL.

New Orleans, May 28.—(AP)—The market for cottonseed oil futures was firmer today in sympathy with higher lard and corn and because of the drouth in west Texas. Prime summer yellow oil closed at 8.65, up 5 points and prime crude closed at 7.87 1-2 cents. Future closed steady: June 8.79; July 8.85; September 9.10; October 9.10; December 9.15.

Price of Cotton Reflects Conditions, Says Amorous

The cotton planter of Georgia must get a profitable price for his cotton if the prosperity of the state as a whole is to be general is the opinion of Martin Amorous, state agricultural economist, in a statement made public Saturday. "It declared that 1,000 cotton mills could be brought to this state and set their wheels to spinning but that prosperity would not come unless the farmer received a profitable price for the cotton produced.

"Everybody," he said, "will have a better chance to get a dollar if the farmers get 20 cents for cotton than if they get only 10 cents, as the federal reserve bank will 'float' into circulation for use of the people, twice as much money at 20 cents a pound for cotton than at 10 cents for cotton as sold by the farmer. After the cotton leaves the farmer's hands, although the price may advance, there is no increase in money issued from the banks.

"The sole basis of issue is the price or value of cotton in the farmers' hands. All of us know when money is plentiful, we all get some. There is no reason for 'tight money' at any time except for a famine in farmers' crops or a 'raid of speculators' to 'rob' the farmer of the true value of his harvest.

"The means of living is the dollar. The farmer by his products alone multiplies the dollar. Hence all of our earnings and income start with the farmer. Fifty farmers in any county will produce more and contribute more to the living of the people in that county than a 'million dollar bank.' The banks only collect a share of what they produce and do not themselves produce a dollar to add to the tools of commerce of the county."

The sole source of issue of money is the federal reserve bank, Mr. Amorous said. "They have plenty and are ready and willing to turn it over to the people—but they limit it to the volume of cotton crop and the 'market' price for cotton. "Cotton, he said, is the ultimate collateral for all loans due to southern banks although they hold notes of factory, merchant, farmer, house builder, fertilizer manufacturer, or packing company. These notes, however, cannot be paid, he said, unless the cotton farmer receives a profitable price for his cotton.

Army Chemists Declare Weevil Is Toughest Enemy

BUG DEFEATS GAS, OTHER POISONOUS DOSES

BY ALFRED P. PECK.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, May 28.—The boll weevil, scourge of the southland and nightmare of cotton planters throughout the world, is the toughest thing that walks, crawls or flies, according to H. W. Walker and J. E. Mills, of the chemical warfare service, U. S. army.

These two chemists used 1,000 different poisons and poisonous mixtures on 150,000 boll weevils, collected for experimental work, and not one was found which irritated the insects sufficient even to make them move.

Poisonous gases, such as were used by both allied and German armies during the world war, caused not the slightest discomfiture to the enemy of the cotton plant. And the aristocratic weevil selects his food as well as poisons with the taste of a connoisseur, the chemists reported to the American Chemical society.

The finest of arsenic mixtures failed to tempt the palate of the weevil unless it was compounded with special chemicals more pleasing to the insect's taste and so weak with arsenates that they were ineffective, the experimenters found.

A few of the poisons which the chemists thought might kill the weevil were found to be definitely harmful to the cotton plant.

"When the most powerful irritants known to man were tried against the weevil in the hope they might make it fly, they showed practically no irritating or exciting effects on the insect," the chemists' report stated.

"While some few other substances less irritating to man did seem to increase the weevil's activity under conditions of the test, in no case was the increased activity sufficient to be considered of economic importance. None of the substances tested was successful in making the weevil fly.

"Weevils seemed to stand concentration of gas entirely out of line with the known poisonous effect of the gas used," the report explained. "Suspecting that this was due to the ability of the weevil to live without breathing the gas, weevils were found to survive after about 17 hours' exposure in pure carbon dioxide and hydrogen, and four out of the seven weevils recovered after being submerged in water for 17 hours.

"This confirmed the belief that the insects can live some time without breathing oxygen, and therefore low concentrations of gas were used in an endeavor to poison the weevil without causing it to suspend animation or to stop breathing. It was found that the boll weevil could only be killed by a relatively small concentration of poisonous gas on longer exposures.

"In the field it would be practically impossible to maintain low concentrations of volatile gas for long periods of time, and there is no hope of killing the weevil by this method."

The experimenters, in spite of their failure to find means of exterminating the insect pest, discovered that poisons must be discovered which will kill the weevil by inhalation or drinking.

They found that a single healthy specimen—and they all seemed to be healthy—breathes one-third of a cubic centimeter of air an hour and drinks two-tenths of a centimeter of water daily.

But they can eat twice their weight —15 milligrams—in cotton plants, even those flavored with arsenic, each day without even the slightest discomfiture.

Dry Goods.

New York, May 28.—Primary dry goods markets generally were closed today on account of the holiday. Cotton goods sales of the week ran ahead of production on print cloths, sheetings and some other lines. Improved weather quickened the inquiry for finished goods. Raw silk was unchanged. Burlaps slightly firmer. Fall underwear lines are being advanced.

Richmond Radiator company has acquired the "Heatomat" gas boiler, formerly manufactured by the United Utilities & Engineering corporation, of Philadelphia. The boiler will be manufactured at the Richmond Radiator company's plant at Uniontown, Pa., and will be distributed with the company's coal boilers, radiators and sanitary ware.

Business of Remington Rand, Inc., both in the United States and abroad, is improving, Chairman Winchell said on his departure for Europe. The business outlook was very good, and the country should enjoy a good last half of the year.

BY WHITNER CARY.

On Monday morning around the hour of 9 o'clock you who live on or near Peachtree road and have good hearing may come to the conclusion that the late lamented Custer and his band have decided to return and give Sitting Bull and his boy friends a return bout. But on closer inspection you will find that the terrific bombardment is caused by the trusty fowling pieces of some 70 expert trap shots from Atlanta and the south who have gathered at the Peachtree Gun club for two days to break targets, win prizes and have a rip-roaring good time.

Just about a year ago some of the enthusiastic trap shooters of this city got together and organized this club. So this shoot, the first big affair ever to be held at this club, is known as the first anniversary shoot. A good enough name and one that augurs well for many more of its kind in the future.

It would seem that the boys who sent out the invitations to this first registered shoot have opened the blue book of "Who's Who" in trap shooting in the south. For in the list of those expected to burn powder are no less than four present state champions and many others who have had, and will have, titles after their names before they break their last clay.

From Augusta comes W. H. Lanier, the stocky young man that caused such heartache a short time ago among Georgia gun artists when he waltzed away with the Georgia singles championship at the shoot held at the Atlanta Gun club. Alabama will be represented by its state champion, Walton Hill, and will send another sterling clay buster in the person of Ed Flynn, who writes both Mobile and doubles champion of Alabama after his name.

Florida will be represented by W. R. Beckwith, who at the present time holds the handicap championship of that state.

From Dawson, Ga., will come that most beloved of all the shooters in this section—Uncle Andy Hill. Uncle Andy, it will be recalled, walked off with the handicap event at the recent Georgia state meet and he is sure to give considerable trouble before the last clay is powdered.

Another state champion who will blaze away is W. H. White, who hails from Spartanburg, and is king of the Palmetto state gunners.

Women Entrants.

Both local clubs, the Peachtree and Atlanta, will assemble their best talent to withstand this invasion and with one exception, all the good Atlanta trigger-pullers will answer "pull" at the first target. The lone absentee is Mrs. W. P. Andrews. Mrs. Andrews is on a trip to New York and will therefore be unable to compete. The local feminine ranks will be upheld in splendid fashion, however, as Mrs. J. C. Wright, that other star Gate City entry, is ready to take her place at the first trap.

Harold McKenzie, who won so many titles at the recent Georgia championships that it is hard to remember them all, is on deck and is sure to give considerable trouble to the entire field when the pace gets warm.

Dr. H. N. Alford, president of the Atlanta Gun club and one of the crack shots in this section, will also yell "pull" and that means another strong candidate for championship honors.

Homer Freeman, he whom you trapshooting fans will recall came so close to taking the singles title from Lanier at the recent championship, is another entry from the Atlanta Gun club who will make the going hard for the other brethren. When Freeman is in form there is little left but dust when his gun speaks.

Among other good shooters from the Atlanta Gun club will be J. C. Wright, J. H. Fuller, Harold Hentz, W. J. Timms, Brad Timms and R. C. Miller.

The Peachtree delegation will find among those present James B. Scales, M. LeRoux, Jack Avery, Dr. C. C. Howard, O. B. Keeler, Dick Gray, W. E. Yankey, Sam DuBose, R. M. Smith, R. S. Tringle, Dr. T. C. Davison, George Nicholson and J. S. Jones, Jr.

Full Program.

The program of events states that the first day, which is Monday, will be given over to a class championship of 200 targets and the first 25 pair of the doubles.

The class championship is to be run in four classes—A, B, C, and D, and the entries are arranged in the various classes according to their previous records at registered meets. This gives the affair a highly sporting outlook as the competition will be keen in every class and no entry will be above his head.

Tuesday will see the completion of the doubles, a 100 free-for-all and a 100 handicap with distances from 16 to 23 yards. All single and double targets, save in the handicap, will be from the 16-yard range.

Handsome prizes and trophies will be given the winner of each event and in addition a trophy will be given the entry scoring highest in all the events.

Pirates Win 10th Straight By 6-4 Score

Meadows Hurls Pittsburgh To Victory Over Cardinals.

Pittsburgh, May 28.—Lee Meadows pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to their tenth consecutive victory today, defeating St. Louis 6 to 4. It was Meadows' seventh triumph of the season. He has yet to suffer defeat.

Pittsburgh's two-run rally in the seventh decided the issue. The Cards filled the bases in the ninth but could score only one run, Traynor starting a double play that halted the rally. Wright hit a home run in the fifth.

Kiki Cuyler, Pirate center fielder, was injured sliding into third base in the seventh and retired from the game.

PHILS BRAVE DIVIDE PAIR.

Philadelphia, May 28.—The Phillies divided a double bill with Boston today, the Braves taking the first, 1 to 0, in a pitchers' battle between Genewich and Ferguson, while the home team won the second, 8 to 3, by good hitting.

In the first game Bancroft's strategy probably saved the day. He substituted Mogridge in the eighth when Genewich passed Ferguson, the first man up. The game was won on Gautreau's triple and Richbourg's sacrifice fly.

In the second game, Hearn replaced Wertz

EVERYBODY'S ALL WET

Photos by Kenneth Rogers and George Cornett.

At the upper left is a bird's-eye view of the opening of the Piedmont Driving club pool Saturday afternoon. It would seem that everyone had a splashin' good time. Keep at the top and going over to the right, you see Helen Candler executing a jackknife off the lowboard.

And in the lower lefthand corner, Miss Candler bobbed into the picture again, this time just about to take off with Martha Candler. Next is a group preparatory to the starting of one of the races which featured the opening day program. The swimmers are—yes, yes, left to right—H. Duckworth, Jim Franklin, Bill Thornton and Charlie Holcomb.

Reggie McNamara has won 13 six-day bicycle races. He won the New York city test six times, the Chicago grind four times and has won once in Sydney, Berlin and Paris. McNamara will return to this country after a short visit to Ireland and compete at the New York and Newark velodromes.

Palatial Building

The New York A. C. a few days ago submitted plans to the Manhattan bureau of buildings for its new 22-story home to be built on the block on the east side of Seventh avenue, between West Fifty-eighth street and Central Park, South. It will cost $7,000,000. Needless to say, it will be a modern and up-to-date structure, one of the most magnificent in the world.

Crackers Win Third Game From Barons To Lead League

Ray Francis Hurls Fine Brand of Ball

BY BOB PHILLIPS.
Special Correspondent.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 28.—A league leading collection of Atlanta Crackers pulled out of Birmingham Saturday evening headed for Chattanooga, league leading by virtue of having thoroughly beaten the Baronial leaders that were, at Rickwood Saturday afternoon in the last game of the "crucial series." The score was 8 to 2 and the victory gave the Crackers two of the three games not to mention earning for them an even break at three all for the season's play.

If one should inquire who was chiefly responsible for the blow that felled the Barons?

The southpaw who sometimes is good and sometimes is bad, was at his best yesterday, and that's the answer!

Although one might also add that Dr. Clayton Van Alystyne, the Baron's premier pitcher, wasn't exactly in form. The two facts put together easily produced a victory for the visitors and shunted the home team from the topmost position in the league that it had clung to tenaciously since May 8.

Van Alstyne pitched eight of the innings, going out for a pinch hitter and giving way to Ned Porter, the latest recruit, in the ninth. Although all 15 of the Cracker hits were garnered off Van's serving, only five of the runs were chargeable to him, and five runs have been known to fall several short, more than once, of beating the Barons.

Francis' Battle.

But not Saturday. It was Francis' fight all the way and it wouldn't be far from wrong to suggest that the second and last Baron run would not have been scored in the ninth had it been of any value to the home guard. After two hits had produced a first run for the Dobbers in the opening inning, there was no seeing Francis' offerings until the ninth, when a short-lived rally put over one additional Baron counter.

Van Alstyne was the target of Atlanta base hitters from the very beginning almost, for the assault started immediately after Frankie Zoeller had begun the game with a roller to Van for the first out. Cueto singled and scored in short order with the first Atlanta run when Rhiel tripled to right. A second triple of "Mule" Haas' put Rhiel in, and then the Baron chunker stuck on Gilbert and Welch flied out to left to retire the side.

A lone hit in the Cracker second went for naught, but four in the third after two were out, sent two more runners across the last station. Haas began the rally by singling over short, the ball bounding high just as Gillis was ready to take it. A second single past short by this one by Gilbert, moved Haas to second and the "Mule" moved on home after Welch's one-baser to left. Harry Schwab caught the habit and lifted one into left also, sending Gilbert home.

Held in Check.

Although the Crackers continued to get at least one hit in each inning, no further runs were made until the seventh, when two singles and a sacrifice counted for the fifth and last tally off Van Alstyne. Niehoff, who had gone to second when Rhiel took short after Cueto was banished from the game by Umpire Shannon for throwing at the umps during pre-ining practice, singled past third and was sacrificed to second by Rhiel. From second, he came in on Gilbert's second timely single.

That was all of the Baron ace, but it was left for Porter to put on one of the strangest, oddest innings ever experienced by any pitcher. Red headed Ned was wearing the Baronical livery as a member of the squad for the first time, Palmero's release to Toledo making it possible for him to join the squad until Toledo exchanges arrive.

Van left the game for a pinch hitter and Porter went to the rubber to start the ninth. When he walked Zoeller, first up, it was just attributed to a little nervousness. But when he struck out Niehoff, second up, fans began to take notice. And then Rhiel and Haas drew passes in succession to fill the bases.

Gilbert came up and was hit with the first ball pitched, forcing in Zoeller. Then a wild pitch put Rhiel home and a fourth base on balls filled the bases once more. Schwab getting the free ticket to first. To make it still weirder, Porter proceeded to strike out Johnny Brock, a good hitter, and then passed Pitcher Francis and forced in Haas. And there was nothing left undone when Frankie Zoeller, up for the second time, struck out again to retire the side.

Five Free Passes.

Five passes on balls, a hit batsman, a wild pitch and three strike outs. Evidently, Ned, the red head, either had everything on the ball or nothing on it.

The Barons got their first run off Francis on an error and a pair of singles. Gillis singled to start the game for the home side and went to second when Welch let the ball trickle through. Bigelow singled two batters later to score Gillis although Jourdan, who had walked, went out trying to take third after the single.

During the second, third and fourth, only 12 batters faced Francis. He walked a man in the third, but a double play but him out of the running. In the fifth, Van Alstyne singled, but got no farther than first. Likewise an error by Rhiel put an extra Baron on base in the seventh, but he was stranded there.

Bigelow singled to open the ninth and started the flurry that brought a second and last Baron run. Rhiel dropped a throw at second that would have forced out Bigelow on Yaryan's grounder and would have been the beginning of a double play. That put men on first and second and after Rosie flied out to left, Baird doubled to send Bigelow home. And that was all, for Barnes popped up to first and Cooper, hitting for Porter, pulled to Schwab, who tossed to Niehoff covering first, for the twenty-seventh put out.

Cracker-Baron Averages

The Crackers outslugged the Barons in the three-game series that resulted in the locals taking the league lead by the slim margin of one-half game.

On the other hand, the Barons outfielded the Crackers. The Crackers, collectively, turned in a mace-work performance of .345 while Cueto and company fielded only .952.

The Barons could only collect enough hits per at bat to give them a .286 average and with only three errors for the entire three games turned in a fielding card of .973.

The pitching, as is always to be expected when two so evenly matched teams connect, was the balance. Francis, Fowler, Rogers, Markle and Martin, five of the six Crax hurlers, turned loose a total of 30 hits for 19 runs.

Van Alstyne, Cunningham, Morrell, Palmero, Mitchell and Porter, six Baron hurlers, were smashed for 38 hits and 20 runs.

Therefore, despite the debacle of the first game of the series, the Spillerites apparently outtwirled the Dobbsmen, for the six Cracker errors were responsible for several of the Baronial runs.

Rain Halts Final Richmond Match

Richmond, Va., May 28.—(AP)—Herbert Bowman, New York, was leading Percy Kynaston, also of New York, two sets to one when rain halted their match for the men's singles championship in the old dominion tennis tournament at the country club of Virginia here this afternoon. The match will be resumed tomorrow afternoon.

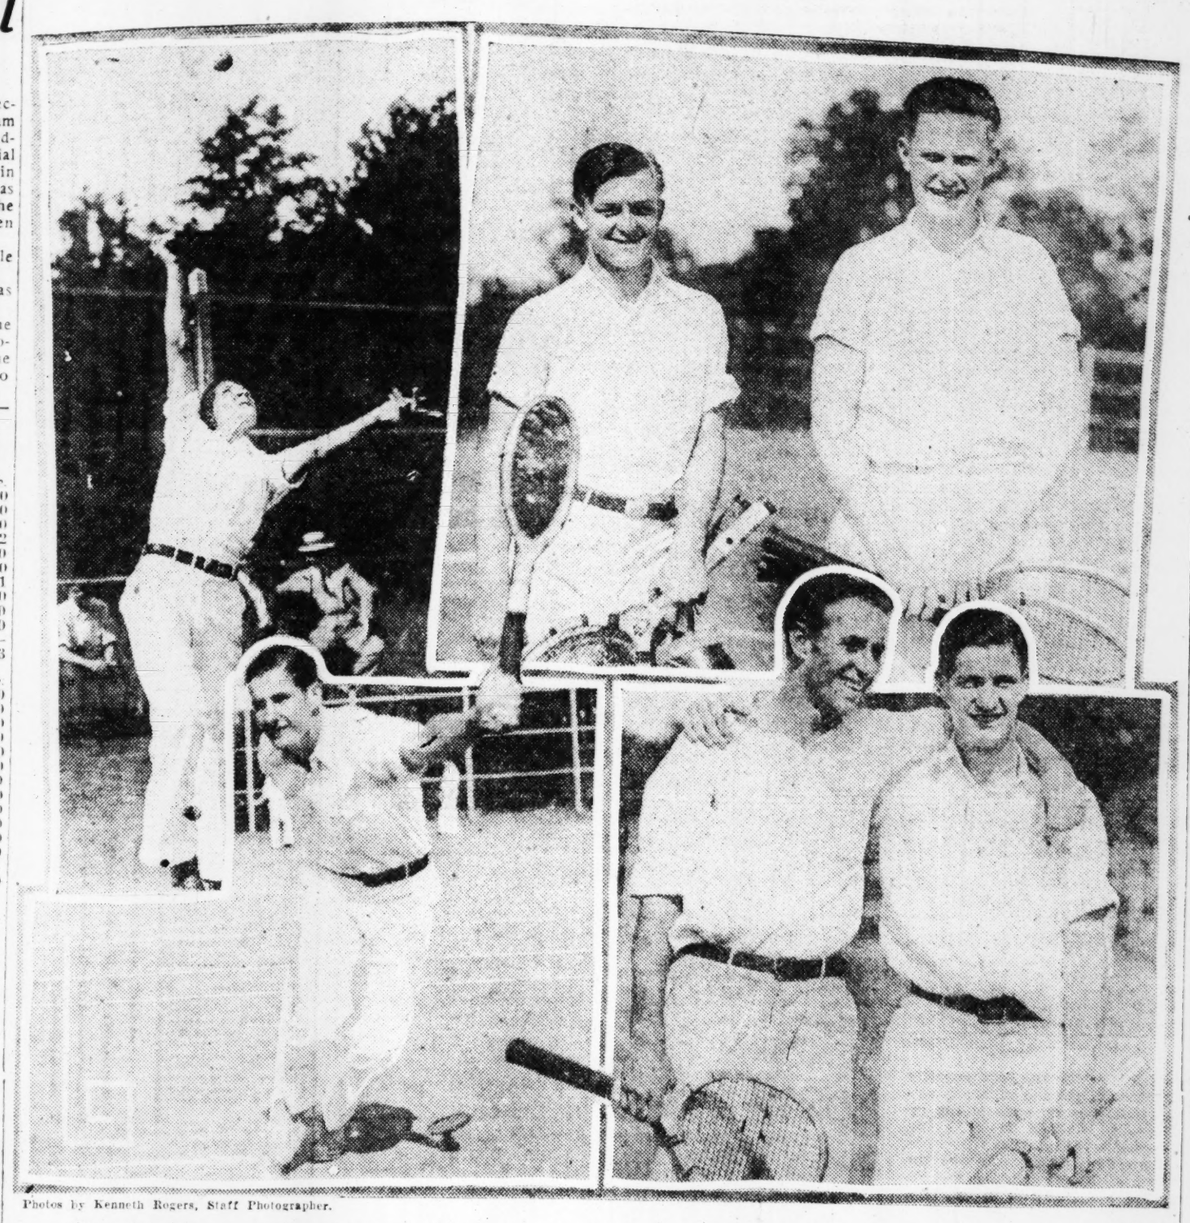

Bowman won the first two sets, 6-3 and 7-5, and Kynaston the third, 6-4.

Final matches in the men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles were all postponed until tomorrow on account of the rain.

Army Beats Navy.

West Point, N. Y., May 28.—(AP)—Army swamped Navy in the annual service track and field meet here today, the cadets winning by a score of 103 1-2 to 31 1-2.

FINALISTS---ALL OF THEM

The World's Worst Golfer Is Wanted--- Do You Know Him?

Wanted: The world's worst golfer.

That's the appeal of the junior chamber of commerce. This civic organization of young business men doesn't want the prize club in order to instruct him in the mysteries of the ancient Scottish game, nor does it seek him to heap ridicule upon his head.

The reverse is true.

The rottenest of all golfers—provided he is a member of the junior chamber, with membership open to all young business men—will be given a prize in the golf tournament which the "Jaycees" will conduct for four days beginning next Monday at Brookhaven Country club.

The prize is a big, elaborately finished flashlight, worth $5, and the winner may feel free to use it in practicing his shots long after the sun has called it a day and the last "fore" has echoed down the fairways.

Junior chamber members are rapidly enrolling for the tourney. Entrance fee is $2, and prizes have been contributed by scores of leading business concerns.

"A man's got to be mighty careful not to win a prize in this tourney," was the way Ed Robertson, of the committee, styled it as he looked over the wide assortment of trophies on display in the windows of the Florsheim Shoe company on Peachtree street.

Fincher Heads Epworth Union

S. Edwin Fincher was elected as president of the Atlanta Epworth League Union Athletic association at the business meeting. Fincher is a member of Grace Epworth league and has served in an official capacity in the association for the past two years, first as treasurer and last year as vice president.

Other officers elected were vice president, Alton Martin, of Park Street, and also a member of the Epworth All-Stars; second vice president, Miss Martha Hightower, of Park Street; secretary, Miss Catherine Hopkins former corresponding secretary and member of St. Paul; treasurer, Charlie Coleman, of Druid Hills, relected. Members of the governing board are Wilmer H. Kimberly, chairman; Herman Fulton, Dr. P. O. Holtzendorf, P. J. Stilwell, S. Edwin Fincher and Stephen Styron.

Few important changes were made in the basketball rules for next year, with the exception of rule 14, which reads: "Epworth League players shall not be allowed to play with any other organized basketball team, except school teams playing only interclass games within their school." This rule was presented after long consideration by officials of the association.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

Another Big Season.

The municipal swimming pools of Atlanta are open for the 1927 season and this year the opening of the pools bears a greater significance than ever before.

Always the first dive of the season is significant because it marks the beginning of another year of wholesome recreation for the youth of Atlanta. But this year there is a greater meaning attached to the opening.

At Piedmont park across the lake from the diving towers and slides is a perfectly constructed swimming course built by the parks department for the use of municipal pool swimmers who wish to develop natural talents.

The Constitution, with the cooperation of the parks department staged a swimming meet last year on Labor day and that seed is blooming into a full grown tree with the opening of the pools.

This year there will be weekly meets featuring one or two events each week and from these contestants the life guards of the various pools will be able to select their teams to be entered in the finals on Labor day.

The plan this year is to make the main event in the fall a registered A. A. U. meet with valuable trophies for the winners and suitable medals and ribbons for the other place winners.

The parks department deserves great credit for the condition of the pools and also for their part in this movement to develop swimmers by means of weekly meets. The rules for these meets will be found in another place in this paper.

The Constitution, in lending its aid to the parks department, has but one aim in view—the development of Dixie swimmers with the hope that somewhere in the municipal pools of Atlanta there may be a future Johnny Weismuller or another Gertrude Ederle. And it is also realized that in searching for some embryonic star the youth of Atlanta is reaping the benefit of clean sport.

Cracker Stock Rises.

Today there are a number of Baronial ball sluggers who have learned a sad lesson to wit: It is not safe to bait the Crackers of Atlanta. Thursday, 'mid riots of fans and a deluge of base hits, the Barons rubbed the Crackers in the mud to the tune of a 15-2 rout and the Crackers lost control of their emotions.

Friday they reversed the tables and ground the Baronial plumes in the dust of Rick Woodward's new park to set the series in a dead heat with one lap to run.

And then came Saturday. Ray Francis, keeper of white mice and port-sided flinger of parts, took the mound for the underlings of John Albert Niehoff, while Johnny Dobbs sent his ace, Clayton Van Alsytne, to the hilltop for the defenders.

By now the outcome of that hurling duel is history. Atlanta is in first place and headed for Chattanooga to take revenge for the rough treatment sustained at the hands of Jimmy Johnston's nine recently in Atlanta. Mr. Niehoff went to the Birmingham lair in second place and came forth on the top of the snarling heap. Cracker stock has taken a sudden jump and well it should.

Sunday Golfers MustLugOwnBags, According to Law

Americus, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Golfers who play on Sunday in Sumter county must carry their clubs and find their own balls if they wish to avoid citation for violating Georgia's "blue laws."

This was the edict today of Sheriff W. P. McArthur, who tomorrow will begin enforcement of the statute prohibiting gainful occupations on the Sabbath on instructions from the county grand jury.

The playing of golf will not fall under the ban, he said, but employment of caddies will be taboo, indicating at the same time that "hire for pay" in any other Sunday sports likewise would be considered an offense.

Any violations of the law discovered by officers will be reported to the grand jury next Thursday, when it reconvenes.

BRIT AMATEUR CROWN WON BY TWEDDELL

Hoylake, England, May 28.—(AP)—Dr. William Tweddell, of Stourbridge, won the British amateur golf championship here today. He defeated D. E. Landale, of the Royal Liverpool club, in the 36 hole final match by 7 up and 6 to play.

Dr. Tweddell, who succeeds to the title which Jess Sweetser, American golfing ace, won last year but did not defend, is 30 years old. He learned most of his golf in Scotland.

Although never before achieving outstanding prominence among British amateurs, he twice previously reached the last sixteen survivors in amateur championships and won the Cruden Bay tournament in 1919. He is spoken of as "the golfer who never has been known to hurry."

Tech Stars Entered In National Events

BY BEN COTHRAN.

During the month of June, when all college athletes are supposedly working at some sort of manual labor to keep in shape, Tech representatives in three sports will be competing under Yellow Jacket colors in national meets—golf, tennis and track.

Just to start off, Watts Gunn, southern conference golf champion, will be striving mightily in the national open at Oakmont beginning June 16. When that tourney is over he will go on to the national intercollegiate tournament, to be held at Garden City, N. Y., on June 28.

It's going to be a busy month for Watts.

But that isn't all. Ed Hamm, the nearest approach Tech has ever had to a kangaroo, will be busy at the national collegiate meet in Chicago June 10-11 attempting to establish a new record in the broad jump.

Hamm will be accompanied to the Windy City by two of his teammates, Ernest Kontz and Papa Hood. Kontz will try for laurels in the 440, his specialty. The large Mr. Hood will heave the shot and fling the discus in a try for more points to go with the five that Hamm is sure to score in the broad jump.

Hamm, who holds more records in the broad jump than he can count at one time, should be a point winner at the collegiate. He holds the national interscholastic, made while in high school, the southern relay, southern conference, the Georgia state and southeastern A. A. U. records. Hamm also won the broad jump at the Penn relays in April of this year, and most of his competition at the national collegiate will be the same as at the Penn games. Hemm's best distance in the jump is 24 feet 11 3-4 inches, made at the Southern conference meet this year.

Berry Grant and Pee Wee Merry compose the other Tech team to travel north for intercollegiate competition. The duo will go to Philadelphia on June 28 for the intercollegiate tennis tournament. Grant and his partner hold the Southern conference title in doubles, won at the tournament at Chapel Hill recently. Grant is also holder of the Georgia state collegiate title in singles.

Altogether it's a busy month for Tech's spring athletes and they all stand a good chance to bring more glory and championships to the school.

Baseball Captain.

Hampden Sidney, Va., May 28.—(AP)—Henry "Simmy" Simmerman, of Max Meadows, Va., was today elected to captain the 1928 Hampden Sidney baseball team. The new leader has seen mound duty on Death Valley field for three years and will conclude his athletic career in college next spring.

HUNTER DROPS FROM RUNNING AT ST. CLOUD

St. Cloud, France, May 28.—(AP)—All the outstanding favorites survived the first week's play in the international hard court tennis championships with "Big Bill" Tilden still the popular choice to win the men's singles. Even the French experts pick Tilden, although Borotra, LaCoste and Cochet, France's Big Three, remain in the tournament.

Tilden is the only American left in the singles' competition. Francis T. Hunter was eliminated today, losing a hard five-set match to P. D. E. Spence, South Africa, 3-6, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Tilden put Charles Aeschlimann, Swiss champion, out today in straight sets. He won, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, by an unceasing series of hard drives. Aeschlimann thought so highly of his conqueror's game that he offered to bet $1,000 that Tilden goes through both the St. Cloud and Wimbledon tournaments undefeated.

"Big Bill" also figured in a victory in the mixed doubles today. Paired with Senorita d'Alvarez, of Spain, he helped greatly in eliminating Mlle. Rosenbaum and M. Guillemot, of France, 6-2, 6-3.

In the women's singles, the playing of Fraulein Cecilie Aussem, 18-year-old German, has been the week's principal feature.

Thirty-Three Drivers Ready For Annual Speed Classic

Indianapolis Again Draws Racing Cream

Indianapolis, May 28.—(AP)—The return of Tommy Milton to automobile racing was made certain late tonight when he qualified an eight-cylinder car of his own design for the annual 500-mile race to be held next Monday at the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Milton, the thirty-first driver to qualify his car, negotiated 10 miles of the dangerous brick course at an average of 108.7 miles an hour. His return to the sport after 18 months' retirement followed the sudden illness of Cliff Durant, millionaire sportsman, who had been nominated to pilot the car.

The veteran, who is the only living driver ever to win the local race twice, hurled his speedster around the track only fast enough to make certain of a place in the starting line. Thirty-three machines will be permitted to start. A total of 39 are trying for those places. Milton's time was several miles an hour faster than a half dozen others, making certain his position.

Ten Qualify Saturday.

Ten drivers qualified their cars today, the other 21 having taken their turns Thursday when Frank Lockhart established a record of 120 miles an hour. Jules Ellingboe, Memphis, Tenn., drove the fastest 10 miles today, his average being 113.2 miles an hour.

Fred Lecklider, Dave Evans, Al Cotey, Tony Gulotna, Wade Morton and Louis Schneider, a former Indianapolis motorcycle policeman, were among those who bettered the minimum qualifying average of 90 miles an hour today. Eight others will be given a final opportunity to make the grade tomorrow.

Thousands of speed fans swept into Indianapolis from all directions today. The annual lineup at the speedway gates began shortly after sun-up when Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reese and Robert Sutton, of Chicago, parked their car at the head of the line. Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Tipplet, who came all the way from Tucson, Ariz., to see the contest, followed a few hours later. Both cars were equipped for camping and the occupants said they intended to "stand by" until 6 o'clock Monday morning when the gates will be opened.

Uses Airplane.

An airplane was pressed into service today by Pete de Paolo, winner of the 1925 race here, to overcome ill fortune in the form of broken parts. He found out late yesterday that he would have to replace a train of gears for his supercharger and that they could only be obtained in Los Angeles. Arrangements were made to send them by air mail to Chicago. They will be picked up in Chicago by an Indianapolis aviator early tomorrow morning and will be delivered to de Paolo by 9 o'clock. Without the supercharger de Paolo's car would be too slow to be a serious contender.

Barons Lead In Southern Loop Batting

Atlanta Is Second in Team Hitting; Lookouts Are Third.

Memphis, Tenn., May 28.—(AP) Birmingham was again the league's leading hitting aggregation in the Southern association, after games Thursday, figures compiled by Charles H. Miller, official statistician, showed, while the Atlanta Crackers lost their tie, held one day with the leaders.

Chattanooga held third place among the sluggers as a team, with the Travelers from Little Rock the other first division club, the figures showed. Memphis, Nashville, New Orleans and Mobile finished in the second division in the order named.

There was no change in the respective clubs' standings in fielding after games of Thursday, New Orleans leading and being followed by Nashville, Atlanta, Memphis, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Little Rock and Mobile.

Ganzel, stellar Birmingham outfielder, topped all the players in the league in individual batting with a percentage of .416, 33 percentage points ahead of his nearest rival, Rhiel, Atlanta second sacker.

Rhiel Among Leaders.

McLarry, Nashville, first baseman, was the third top hitter in the association, with an average of .380, three points behind Rhiel. Other leading hitters included Grimes, Little Rock, first baseman, .376; D. Carroll, Chattanooga, outfielder, .375; D. Anderson, Chattanooga catcher, .374; Lewis, Chattanooga outfielder, .368; Davis, Pelican first baseman, .365; Yaryan, Birmingham catcher, .363; Zoeller, Atlanta outfielder, .356, and P. Fowler, Atlanta pitcher, with .364 in 13 games. Knode, Mobile's new first baseman, who has played in 10 games, had an average of .353.

Washburn, who plays Little Rock's keystone sack, was still at the head of the home run hitters after games of Thursday, with a total of six, while Davis, of New Orleans; Yaryan, of Birmingham; Haas, of Atlanta; Taylor of Memphis, and Chapman of Chattanooga, each had five.

Cunningham, of Birmingham, and Hutton, his teammate, were the league's leading pitchers in the percentage column, with two wins and no losses each. Van Alstyne, of Birmingham, with seven wins and one loss, had .875.

In one of the fastest games of the day Beck & Gregg defeated the I. C. H. N. club by the score of 7 to 4. Holcomb, the pitching ace of the hardware team, was the big star of the game. He struck out eight of the men to face him and also had a good day with the willow, hitting a circuit wallop and a triple out of three times at the plate, which accounts for four of the victors' runs. Kane pitched a nice game for the losers, but his team made errors to the punches, costing them the game. Both teams ran up a total of six hits, three being of the extra base variety.

Texas Oil Company won from Seckinger Bros. 8 to 2, in a game full of errors Saturday. The others scored four in the first frame and did not allow the Seckingers the score until the final inning, when they scored their two. The heavy hitting and all-around playing of the Texas team accounted for the victory. Martin hit a home run and two singles out of four times up.

General Class Crews To Clash

Lexington, Va., May 28.—The golden anniversary of the rivalry between the Harry Lee and Albert Sidney boat clubs, intramural organizations of Washington and Lee, will be celebrated on Norin river here Monday afternoon, June 6, when the varsity crews of the two clubs will dash for the tape in new shells. Elaborate plans are being made by local athletic authorities for the event, and a formal christening will be held for the new boats, which replace their 20-year-old predecessors.

The Harry Lee four has been victorious in the past three races, but expert dopesters state that the blue jerseys of Albert Sidney are due for a win this year if preliminary workouts can be taken as an index. The Blues are relying on the work of Captain Junkin, their only veteran, and their 1926 second crew intact to do the work, while the Reds, far from disheartened, point to Captain Varney and Letcher as veterans fully able to form the nucleus of a strong combination.

HOME OF THE CLASSIC

Here is where the boys annually burn tons of gas and rubber in setting thousands on edge in the Indianapolis 500-mile motor event, the premier of America's dust-pan and goggle activities. In the top exposure, labeled No. 1, the recruits are whoopin' it up, silently, along the rubber-burnt brick alley of the mercuries of science. Nowadays folks travel to the races in autos that are capable of making much more speed than used to be made by the racers themselves and the acres of variegated hacks in No. 2 is symbolic. The stretch, the scene of many a mile-burning buggy spurt, is the feature of No. 3. The 1926 running, won by Harry Lockhart, is being paced the first lap in photo No. 4, and in the little oval at the bottom is one of the contenders for the laurels and top money in this year's events. It is Peter DePaolo in the Miller Special with which he burnt up the boards Thursday in the elimination trials.

PI K. A. COPS TECHBASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Pi K. A.'s gang of pastimers won the Greek baseball championship of Tech Saturday afternoon by defeating the Phi Gamma Delta outfit, 6-5 in a close game.

The Pi K. A.'s got off to a three-run lead in the first inning and the Phi Gam crew was never able to catch up with them. Bill Simmons did slab duty for the winning nine, and kept his hits well scattered, allowing the Phi Gams only five safeties.

Simmons aided considerably in his team's victory by hitting two out of three times. One of these was a triple, and scored Camp to put his team out in front.

Stumpy Thomason was on the mount for the losers, and although he has held the other nines to face him in the Pan-Hellenic council's tourney, the Pi. K. A.'s touched him for nine hits. Each team made three errors.

The Pi K. A.'s had previously defeated the S. P. E.'s, the Pi Kappa Phi's, the Theta Chi's, and the Delta Tau Delta's, scoring 45 runs in these four games leading up to the finals. The members of this team are Gordon Holtsinger, Camp, Simmons, McGregor, Leigh, Campbell, Alexander, Backus, Saunders.

Tilden Pleased With Europeans

St. Cloud, France, May 28.—(AP)—William T. Tilden, America's premier tennis ace, is enthusiastic in his praise of the treatment which he and his partner, Francis T. Hunter, have received on their European invasion.

"What's all this talk about anti-American feeling in Europe?" Tilden asked the correspondent while watching the international hard court championships. "We had been led to believe that Americans were as popular as smallpox on the continent. I must say that since Hunter and I landed early in May we have been received with the greatest courtesy, many times amounting to enthusiasm, and I take my hat off to the European tennis fans and the general public."

Showing of Sharkey Eliminates Dempsey

BY FRANK GETTY.

(Copyright, 1927, by United News.)

New York, May 28.—When Jack Sharkey swung a hefty right hand to the jaw of bewildered James Maloney in the fifth round of their recent shindig up at Yankee stadium, he eliminated something besides the roly-poly Irishman from the present heavyweight imbroglio.

The blow that flattened Maloney disposed with equal effectiveness of William Harrison Dempsey.

There no longer is need for confusing fabrications concerning the return of the former champion to fighting form. Sharkey knocked out Maloney and disposed of the Dempsey myth with the same punch.

It is no secret that Gene Tunney went away from Yankee stadium that night and began to make plans for a training campaign in preparation for a championship bout with Sharkey.

Tunney knew, and Tex Rickard knew, that they had found the man for whom they had been scanning the fistic horizon, peering up strange alleys of the Hinterland and listening eagerly for the sound of trumpets from foreign lands ever since the rainy night in Philadelphia when Jack Dempsey passed definitely out of the heavyweight picture.

Sharkey may not be a man of destiny, but he is the man of the million—the million dollars which Tunney and Tex hope to divide as a result of their next title venture.

Ever since Dempsey's defeat at Philadelphia, it was apparent that he was through as a champion. But there was such a crying need for a fighter of his popularity and personality that men shut their eyes to the self-evident facts and talked about his return to the ring.

The wish was father to the thought, but the task of remodeling the "Manassa Mauler" was one at which nature rebelled.

"Nevermore."

"As far as I'm concerned, Dempsey's still heavyweight cham." many a fight fan has said. But mother nature, who gave Jack the greatest fighting machine of all time for his corporal home, shook her head sadly and quoth: "Nevermore."

Such have been the facts for a long time, but because of the requirements of the joint professions of promoting and prize fighting, there were many who denied them.

Now everything is changed. Jack Sharkey fooled us as much by his remarkably good fight against Maloney as Jack Dempsey did by his distressingly poor one against Tunney.

Sharkey, in the opinion of those who saw him whip his fellow Bostonian, would annihilate Dempsey more thoroughly than did Tunney in winning the championship. Instead of standing out as the most colorful heavyweight from the public's point of view, Dempsey has been relegated to third place.

Opinions Divided.

Opinion is divided as to Sharkey's chances with Tunney. Everyone agrees it would make a great match. This is all Tex Rickard wants to hear. The chances of the contestants interests him but little.

There are always two winners to every heavyweight championship bout. The boxer whose hand is raised in triumph and the quiet, steel-eyed gentleman who is around checking up at the box offices about the fourth round.

Gene Tunney has been out of the ring for a long time, but he should be able to retain his title against the Lithuanian. One cannot picture the champion rushing Sharkey, and Jack is not at his best against a straight puncher who stands away and boxes.

But this is a matter of opinion. It is conceded that Sharkey showed enough fighting ability against Maloney Friday night to justify the blare of the loud bassoon as the ballyhoo for the next world's heavyweight championship match gets under way.

Newcomers.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 28.—Henry Kohlert, who runs a garage in St. Charles, Ill., when he is not wheeling racing automobiles on dirt tracks, is making his debut at the Indianapolis motor speedway when the 15th international 500-mile race will be held Monday, May 30.

He will drive an Elgin piston pin special.

CHICKS SWAMP BEARS.

Mobile, Ala., May 28.—Memphis hit the ball hard today and defeated Mobile, 12 to 4, it being the second straight victory of the series. Bonnelly started for the Chicks and went wild in the seventh, was taken out and Lloyd Brown was sent in and stopped the Bears. Settlemire was hit hard for seven innings, while Hinton, the relief pitcher, was also found for numerous base hits. Pitcher Kelly, substitute right fielder, continued his slugging today with a triple, double and single out of four times up.

LOOKOUTS ARE VICTORIOUS.

Nashville, Tenn., May 28.—Coumbe pitched a brand of ball which entitled him to a shutout today but he was loosely supported and the Lookouts were barely able to win the last game of the series, 3 to 2. Chapman hit a home run over the left field fence, a distance of 325 feet and the drive proved to be the margin of victory. Turner's double sent in two in the fifth.

Hundreds Turn Out For Opening of Swimming Pools

OH, SKINNAY! COME ON IN, THE WATER'S FINE!

Photos by Kenneth Rogers and George Connett, staff photographers.

Many Atlanta Stars In Southern Amateur

Charlotte, N. C., May 28.—(AP)—Preparations for caring for about 250 golfers from 83 southern country clubs in such a manner that they will long remember their reception in Charlotte are being made by the Charlotte Country club. The club will stage the annual southern amateur championships on its 6,320-yard course June 21 to 25.

With Bobby Jones, king pin of the golfing world, out of it both because of the press of studies and it is currently reported—because his presence would make the victor known in advance, the keenest sort of competition for the 1927 title is expected. Watts Gunn, Walker cup player; Perry Adair, former southern champion and Bobby Jones' boyhood playmate; Gene Cook, Chick Ridley, Charlie Black and Milt Dargen are coming from the southern golf capital.

Bob Baugh, Bob Mudder and Giddy Scibles, of Birmingham, are expected as are Ewing Watkins and Pallock Boyd, Chattanooga; Louis Jacoby, Dallas, Texas; Al Ulmer, Tom Aycock, Fred Eansor and Paul Cushman, Jacksonville; Tom White, Frank Dyer and Nelson Giddens, of Memphis.

These and many others whose names are known to golf fans and newspaper readers throughout the south are expected.

Watts Gunn is still attending Georgia Tech but school will be out and he will not have to hurry back. But he will not be without keen competition from Glenn Crismon of the University of Alabama, and Fred Lamprech, of Tulane.

The Charlotte course has a par of 37-35—72, but it isn't as easy shooting as it might appear. There are plenty of traps and some neatly arranged rough spots to "make 'em shoot 'em straight."

Mrs. Mallory Loses In London Tourney

London, May 28.—(AP)—Miss Elizabeth Ryan, formerly of California, won the women's singles championship in the Middlesex tennis tournament today. She defeated Miss Joan Fry of England, 6-0, 4-6, 6-2.

Mrs. Molla Mallory, of New York, was eliminated by Miss Fry in the semi-finals this morning, 6-4, 6-0. Miss Ryan came through the semi-finals by defeating the 15-year-old Betty Nuthall, 6-3, 6-2.

Bailey, pitching for Orchard Knob, struck out ten men when he and his teammates handed the F. E. F. class an overwhelming defeat, winning by the one-sided score of 12 to 1. He also starred with the stick work, together with King and Patton. Moon, pitching for the losers, was hit by batted ball, being forced to retire. Millican relieved him. Seven errors were made by the F. E. F. team which helped account for the one sided score.

Dickerson, hurling for Antioch, proved a sensation, striking out 12 men and giving up only five hits against Oakland City, in one-sided game won by Antioch, 14 to 3. Not satisfied with this, Dickerson got busy with the stick and knocked two home runs and a double out of five trips to the bat. His teammate Strickland added to the downfall of the Oakland boys by contributing another home run for his team.

Opening Of City Pools Big Day in Atlanta

Atlanta went wet Saturday.

In order that those of a Volstead yearning may not be unduly alarmed let it be quickly added that the above referred to swimming pools and not the prohibition question.

For Saturday, at the hour of 1 o'clock, the swimming pools of this city were opened for the coming summer. Judging from the number of splashes that were recorded at that time and from the aspect of the waters, the 1927 opening came fully up to expectations. They were all there. The little kids who can just paddle about were in evidence. The boys and girls who have just learned to swim were getting their first taste of the season. The flappers, arrayed in all kinds, sizes and condition of servitude of bathing suits added color to the natural beauty of the various pools. The old boys, those of a vintage that now list the jackknife among the impossible, were also among those present, while here and there was aged representatives of the feminine gender to whom a swan dive was just a memory.

But they all were having a good time. True, the hour of opening saw the lowering clouds running a counter moisture attraction. But what care swimmers for a little rain? And then, too, it only lasted a short time, as the ardor of the swimmers was so keen that the leaden visitors from above evidently decided competition was too strong and went away.

Out at Piedmont park the municipal band, comfortably sheltered under the grandstand, enlivened the occasion with stirring music.

All the pools were in good condition. All had been newly cleaned and filled with pure water. In a great many instances a new coat of paint had been added to the surroundings of the pool. New slides had been installed at Piedmont park.

The 110-yard race course at Piedmont, over which the weekly races will be held during the summer under the auspices of the Playground association and The Constitution, has now been made a permanent asset to the lake. New posts set in concrete mark the boundary of this splendid course.

Everything was free on opening day. While swimming, because it marked the opening of the season, was by far the most popular sport, the others had plenty of followers. The Shetland ponies found many a fearless young rider. The golf courses at both Piedmont park and James L. Key courses were crowded with players, while the crack of bat and the echo of ball meeting glove wandered out from the large baseball grounds of Piedmont, showing that the grand old national game was not being deserted.

All in all it was a big occasion and one that argues well for the amusement life of Atlanta, for from now until the touch of autumn gives the first message of cold weather the pools will welcome the swimmers. And judging from the way in which the lovers of water turned out Saturday the 1927 aquatic season is going to eclipse any of the former years.

Pryor Street Presbyterian vs. Stewart Avenue Methodist at Mozley park at 2:15 p. m. Double-header. Umpire, Weatherly.

Woodward Avenue Baptist vs. Capitol Avenue Baptist at Henry Grady field at 3 p. m. Umpire, Albright.

Edgewood Baptist turned over the dope bucket when they handed Capitol Avenue Baptist a pasting to the tune of 19 to 10, in a slugfest. Something radically wrong must have been the matter with Capitol Avenue for the boys made 11 errors, and this together with the loose pitching of Corrie was responsible for the downfall.

Three Evils

Coach Dean Cromwell, of University of Southern California, intercollegiate track champion, says there are three evils to be shunned by every runner—evils only so far as the track man is concerned, namely, first, swimming; second, dancing; third, horseback riding. Cromwell says swimming deadens a man's running muscles, dancing takes the life and spring out of them and riding stiffens the thigh muscles.

World's Pole Vault Record Smashed by Sabin Carr

Stanford Team Wins Annual Track Meet

BY ALAN J. GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 28.—(AP)—A small but powerful band of twelve athletes swept Leland Stanford to its first I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championship today, but it remained for an agile young man from Dubuque, Iowa, to supply the chief thrills of one of the most spectacular meets the east has ever seen.

Sabin Carr, of Yale, as well as Dubuque, lifted himself to international fame by clearing 14 feet in the pole vault and smashing the world's record held by the slim Norwegian, Charley Hoff, who is now a professional. It was only by a scant margin that Carr eclipsed Hoff's figures of 13 feet 14 15-16 inches, set in Finland two years ago, but it was enough to clinch his rank as the world's greatest vaulter. The Yale youth also holds the indoor record of 13 feet, 9 1-2 inches.

Carr needed to outdo himself to successfully defend his inter-collegiate title as well as accomplish what has been the goal of all vaulters for years, for he was extended all the way by Lee Barnes, of Southern California, the Olympic champion. Leaving Carr's former I. C. A. A. A. A. record of 13 feet 2 inches far behind, Barnes kept pace with the Yale ace up to 13 feet 9 1-2 inches but that was his limit.

Four Records Fall.

Four records fell altogether as Stanford's squad, in workmanlike fashion, went about the task of piling up their winning total of 36 1-2 points, enough to decisively outstrip all rivals and displace Southern California as the holder of the team trophy.

Carr's was the only world's record but inter-collegiate marks were shattered in the javelin by Greth Hines, of Georgetown, with 205 feet, 7 5-8 inches, by Alfred Bates, of Penn State, in the broad jump with 24 feet, 8 1-2 inches and by Charley Borah, Southern California flash, who ran the 220-yard dash in 20 9-10 seconds to complete a sweep of the sprints, the only double triumph of the finals.

Stanford, though providing few of the individual fireworks, had the balanced strength in the field events and though the Cardinals captured only one first place, that by "Biff" Hoffman in the discus throw, they scored heavily in seven other events—mile run, high hurdles, pole vault, javelin, broad jump, high jump and shot put—to reach their total of 36 1-2 points, the highest winning mark since 1923.

Penn State Second.

Penn State's sturdy squad, leading the eastern defense, captured three firsts and was runner-up to Stanford with 27 points. Yale, scoring in seven events, amassed 23 1-2 points, just enough to nose out the two-time champion, Southern California, which finished fourth with 23.

These four stood out well above the rest of the field of 21 colleges that got into the point scoring column, Dartmouth finished fifth with 16 points, and Georgetown sixth with 11 points, leadin such others as California with 10 1-2, Syracuse with 10, Cornell and Penn with 8 each.

Stanford's victory marked the sixth time in seven years that the far west has romped off with the championship.

New Gallery.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 28.—Conrad M. Jennings, athletic director at Marquette university, does not refer to the Marquette gymnasium as an athletic institute, but the walls of that edifice daily become more like a picture gallery as photos of Marquette teams, athletic stars and events are hung there. Coach Jennings is securing all possible pictures of Marquette athletic activities, and is having framed panels erected in the gym.

The Gordon Street Presbyterian-Central Presbyterian game was called off on account of the heavy deluge that fell over the city, which made the diamond at Morley park unplayable.

What was billed as the feature game of the American S. S. A. A. was called off on account of the unplayable condition of the diamond at Piedmont park. Both Druid Hills Presbyterian and Grace Methodist, the two teams scheduled to have played, decided best not to take any chances with the slippery footing and called their battle off until some later date. However, both managers have decided to play this game off Monday, at Piedmont park at 4 o'clock.

Derby Day Wednesday.

London, May 28.—(AP)—Twenty-six three-year-old colts and fillies have been named probable starters in the derby, to be run at Epsom next Wednesday afternoon over the historic mile and a half course. Nineteen ran last year.

Lord Derby's veteran jockey, Weston, will ride Sickle, the favorite.

Atlanta Parks Dept.'s Weekly Swimming Meets To Begin at Piedmont Park June 4

The Piedmont park course over which natators will splash in the weekly swimming meets, beginning June 4.

The first of the weekly swimming meets, sponsored by the Atlanta parks department aided and abetted by The Constitution, will be staged at Piedmont park next Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

Two events are scheduled, A 110, the length of the course, and a 220—both free style dashes. The entrants will be restricted to boys between the ages of 14 and 21.

Under the plans drawn up for these meets, there will be alternate Saturdays for men and women. The first will be a men's event and the second, a women's, and so through the summer schedule of 15 meets leading up to the registered A. A. U. city championship sponsored by The Constitution to be staged on Labor day.

A system of medals and ribbons, with various business concerns of Atlanta providing the funds for the purchase of the trophies has been arranged.

Winner Gets Medal.

First place in each event will be presented with a medal, emblematic of the meet. Second and third places will get ribbons and pins.

The rules specify that no entrant in any one Saturday's events will be allowed to participate in any of the other weekly meets. This was done to provide a larger number of swimmers through the summer, and to give coaches and others much more opportunity to study available material for teams from the various city pools which will compete in the city championships in September.

Registration for the meet must be made in the office of the city parks department, city hall, before noon of the Friday preceding the Saturday event. Twelve entrants will be permitted in each Saturday's events, and those entering one meet have the privilege of entering both.

However, in order to regulate the entrants, the first registrations will compete in the first meet, and the registrations will be accepted until the entry event is full.

Rules of Meets.

Following is a copy of the rules as drawn up to govern the weekly meets:

1—A series of swimming meets for men and women of Atlanta will be held at Piedmont park, beginning Saturday, June 4, and continuing through 15 Saturdays.

2—Men and women will not compete in the same events. The men and women's events will be on alternate Saturdays and the first will be a men's event, June 4.

3—Registration for these events must be made with the Atlanta parks department, city hall, by noon on the Friday preceding the match. Twelve entrants will be accepted for each event, and the first to register each week will close the registrations for that swim.

4—There will be two events to each weekly meet. The men will compete in 110 and 220-yard free style. The women in 50 and 110-yard free style. Any entrant may register for both events, but may register for only one if so desired. However, no person participating on any one of the meets will be eligible for any other of the meets during the weekly season.

5—The time will be 2:30 o'clock. The age limit will be between the ages of 14 and 21 for both men and women.

6—First place in each event will receive a medal award. Second and third places will be awarded ribbons.

7—Each of the meets will be governed by A. A. U. rules, and each entrant must be a bona fide amateur.

SHARKEY'S NO LINDBERGH; BUT HE IS A GOOD FIGHTER

PEGLER BELIEVES IT WILL BE SHARKEY VS. TUNNEY

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, May 28.—In view of young Captain Lindbergh's flight to Paris, it has become fashionable in the papers hereabouts to preface all pieces about prize fighters with an observation that nothing they may say or do can possibly matter a d——, which is true, no doubt, but no truer now than at any other time.

But it seems a little snobbish and unfair to make the earnest stumblebums stand a comparison of that sort inasmuch as Babe Ruth never did anything but cudgel a baseball with a custom-made whiffle tree and William T. Tilden, the second, is what he is solely because he has spent the last 10 or 12 years fanning a tennis ball with a weapon as big as a frying pan. For that matter there are very few Lindberghs at the ringside or in the bleachers.

It is true that the prize fighters converse much and fight no more than they have to, but if there must be comparisons in the matter of gameness the stumblers might cite the case of Andy Thomas, an ignorant slum kid from the bend of Mulberry street who boiled himself down a dozen pounds in a few days in order to have his manager's weight forfeit and went into a ring in Brooklyn to fight until he dropped dead from punishment and exhaustion. They had to put their hands under Andy's arms and push him off the stool to answer the last bell but he shuffled out, too weak to raise his arms, and pitched on his face at the next punch.

Then little Frank Jerome, called the Bronx Spider, with a wife and baby at home, although he was no more than 20 himself, fought to the death against Bud Taylor in the old Garden and the same sort of customers who are now demanding Lindbergh's in the ring were standing on their chairs, wild-eyed and roaring at the sport when the skinny little body fell to the canvas and lay there twitching and dying.

Now Jack Sharkey is no Lindbergh but if it is ever permissible to occupy space on good white paper to tell something about a prize fighter this is the time to remark that Sharkey is a very good one and almost certain to be seen in the opposite corner the next time Gene Tunney steps into the ring next fall.

In knocking out Jimmy Maloney last Friday night Sharkey boxed as well as Tunney ever did and moreover he was more aggressive than Tunney ever was. He is only 25 years old, about 7 years younger than Gene, and in height and weight they are about alike, just over six feet and just over 190 pounds.

HERE'S A CREDO FOR LOCAL FIGHT PROMOTERS TO STUDY

Soldier Jones—Who Soldiered at the Wheel of a Truck

BY TOM THOMPSON.

The season is again open for boxing promoters!

And, if the sentiments of some of the Atlanta sportsmen reflect the general opinion, then it is high time somebody began the business in earnest. There is no sport so eminently looking up as boxing is in America today.

And there is no reason that Atlanta should be without its quota of lively and entertaining matches—except:

The promoter that undertakes to revive boxing in Atlanta should enter the business with his hands full of dirty dinero, and be ready to lose plenty before he begins to collect.

He should look at the business with an eye toward the entertainment and evenness of the matches to be offered.

He should match only boys whom he believes will fight—fight well and fight earnestly.

His chief concern, in the first matches at least, will not be how much he can realize on his show, but how much the show will do to revive the long lost faith of Atlanta's sporting public.

These tenets are set forth from a standpoint of an observer. They are not infallible, but they are honest, and almost obvious. It might be added that Atlantans will pay plenty for their entertainment, but they demand a high grade of entertainment when they do pay for it.

That's the Trouble.

Frankly, that is the trouble with the game in Atlanta today.

Remember the Egg Crate Wallop?

It was way back in the days when cinemas were movies and Charles Ray was a regular working guy. He played in that vehicle, as the press agents say, and he played it well.

The general theme of the celluloid wes how this crate shifter developed a potent punch by virtue of being a crate shifter. It was a pretty good picture and it pictured a pretty good fight, if memory serves us well.

Anyway, a complaint that has been recently filed with the Atlanta boxing commission indicates that a recent fight in Atlanta was an inverted reproduction of the Egg Crate Wallop. This time, however, the alleged crate shifter didn't have a punch, and all his crate shifting had produced nothing more than a lot of crust.

The bout referred to is that of Soldier George Jones and Tiger Flowers. The latter is the ex-middleweight king of fistiana, and a good king. Tiger knows his hooks and no mistake.

No Fighter.

But Soldier Jones, the complaint alleges, was not Soldier Jones, nor Brown, nor Smith or any other kind of a warrior. Those that saw the fight are convinced long ere this about the warrior part of that statement. He was picked up somewhere along Auburn avenue because he looked husky and speedy. His knowledge of boxing was mostly of crates, for the complaint says that the nearest he ever came to boxing anything was when he boxed up side bacon and slung white meat in the pursuit of his regular duties with a local packing company—where he drives a truck.

And that's a sample, maybe an exceptionally bad one, but a sample nevertheless, of what promoters have been trying to put over on the Atlanta public. Maybe it's good business, maybe it ain't. The promoters are sure of one thing, Atlanta is dead. But the boys are wrong, Atlanta is not dead. It is merely dormant. All that is needed is some good scraps. And if it is dead, whose fault?

Anyway this Soldier Jones scandal(?) has only recently been uncovered. Burt Miller, who promoted the Soldier Jones-Tiger Flowers scrap, produced a record for his misnomer that didn't read at all bad.

Miller maintains that it is impossible to book good fights for Atlanta, inasmuch as the houses run up to $1,000 every once in a while. Investigation of Miller's claims revealed that once a Soldier Jones had fought several good boys.

The Atlanta boxing commission, which is now investigating the complaint, also investigated these claims of Burt Miller. In most part they could not be substantiated, but nobody came forth to deny them, and so they almost had to let the bout go through.

And, in view of the sanction of the commish, the thing was taken at face value.

Bouts of that sort are at an end, as far as the commission is concerned. Only those boys that have, on record or in bouts staged in or around Atlanta proven that they can produce a good fight will be allowed to go on in the future. That statement comes from Al Martin, secretary of the commission, who, fans may be assured, is doing all on earth possible to further the best interests of the game in Atlanta. But Al Martin is only one man, and Atlanta is at least a fair sized country village, so all that he or the commission can do must be fostered by a better brand of fighting than that offered in the past.

Girl To Attempt A 12-Mile Swim

Baltimore, Md., May 28.—(AP)—Planning to swim the Chesapeake Bay again Ruth Kitchin, 15, Annapolis high school student, who last August spanned the waters from Annapolis to Bloody Point, Kent Island, on the eastern shore, will start training tomorrow at Cape Henry. The girl will attempt to swim the bay at its mouth between Cape Henry and Cape Charles, a distance of about 12 1-2 miles. The former swim was over a distance of about nine miles, but currents caused Miss Kitchin to swim actually 17 miles.

Chink Track Man

Joe Choing, who hails from China, is a prominent distance runner at Creighton university, Omaha. His home is in Foo Chow, China. His form is somewhat different from the American style. He will specialize in the half-mile, mile and two-mile races.

PERSHING'S NARROW ESCAPE TOLD ON ANNIVERSARY

General Staff Is Recalled

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—Ten years ago Saturday some 200 men, clothed as civilians but distinguished by an ineffaceable military bearing, began a memorable movement out of New York city.

They constituted the general staff of the American expeditionary force, with its retinue of assistants and clerks. They formed the spearhead of an American army of nearly 3,000,000 men, which was to turn the tide of battle in France, and at their head was General John J. Pershing.

Supposedly secure secrecy guarded the departure of the group by the tugboat and ferry and by various routes they converged upon Governor's island. A dark morning and wind-blown rain seemed to add their cloaks of obscurity to the movement, but members of the party recalled Saturday how two important slips set at naught the whole machinery of secrecy.

Baggage of some of the officers was piled at a pier end awaiting a tug. It resembled any other casual luggage until suddenly there arrived several pieces boldly stenciled with the name of a high ranking officer and the information, "in care of General Pershing's headquarters, American expeditionary forces, Paris."

The secret was definitely out a few moments later when a young officer arrived in uniform in violation of the injunction to wear civilian garb.

The fact of the staff's departure never was published by American newspapers, but the war department, fearing a repetition of the sinking of Lord Kitchener's ship in the Irish sea, explained the situation to Pershing by wireless, suggesting a change of ships at Halifax, but leaving the matter to his own judgment.

Pershing's judgment was to continue on, stopping at Halifax only long enough to pick up a British naval escort.

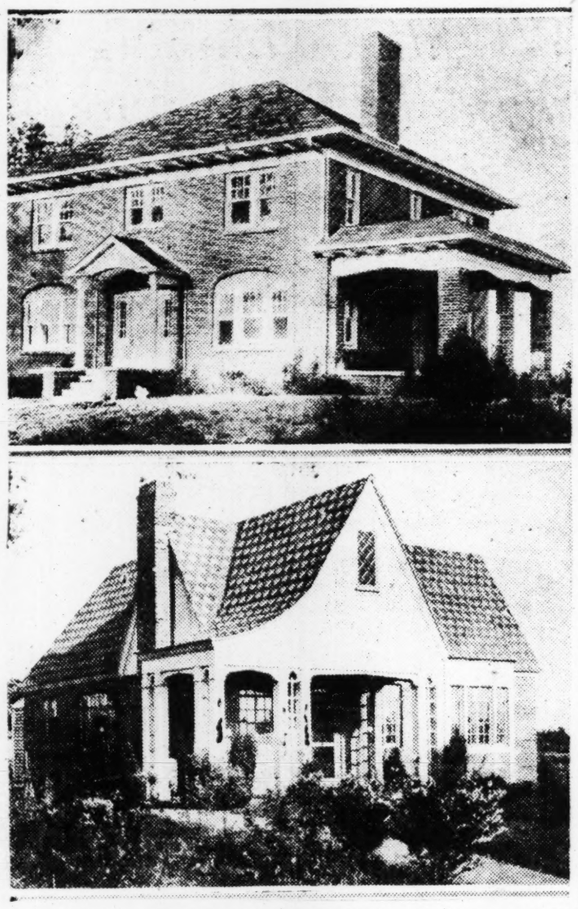

The voyage was without incident, but it was made generally known Saturday for perhaps the first time, that for the space of a split second the life of General Pershing hung by a thread before he ever boarded his ship off Governor's island. His own quick thinking and agility at that moment saved him.

Pershing's tug had arrived off the island to await a larger boat to take his party to the steamer. When the second tug arrived it could come no closer than three or four feet because of the rough water. To change boats the party had to climb to the rail of the first tug and jump into the other through an opening in its hull, about the size of a small doorway, directly opposite.

Leading the way, Pershing balanced himself on the rail and made the leap. As he did so his tug rose on a wave crest and the other dropped into the trough. The general, in mid-air, drew up his legs and ducked his head. He landed asprawl squarely in the doorway, but its descending top missed his head by only a fraction of an inch.

The ship that carried the Pershing staff to France was the S. S. Baltic, which has given its name to the Baltic society, founded by members of the party. Its membership roll disregards rank, being arranged alphabetically, with Pershing far down the list. At its top is Captain George E. Adamson, secretary to Pershing then and now.

Avondale Open Air Theater Increases Seating Capacity

Top, home at 54 Clarendon avenue built by T. L. Freeman, who is erecting a number of residences at Avondale Estates. Below, 26 Clarendon avenue, purchased by H. W. Jordan, national distributor of the Brandimist company.

Popular response to its charm of setting and elaborate entertainment has made necessary, according to announcement Saturday, an increase in the seating capacity of the open air motion picture theater at Avondale Estates to accommodate 2,000 persons.

This theater, joining other facilities for recreation and sport in the new suburban city and thus providing entertainment in every field, was established for presentation of free programs to residents and property owners of Avondale Estates and their guests at 8 o'clock every Tuesday and Friday night, admission being by card of invitation.

The Avondale theater sits in a sheltered glade of virgin elms and sycamores, filled with woodland odors and breezes that promise a continual sanctuary from the heat of summer. It overlooks the thickly-wooded park of the swimming pool and the playground.

The motion picture programs, consisting of big feature films, travelogues, first-run comedies and news reels, are presented under direction of O. P. Hall, a resident of Avondale Estates who has a record of wide experience in the motion picture field in the United States and abroad, both as producer and distributor.

Musical programs accompany the picture presentations, and effort being made in this respect to interpret in music the poetic charm of the woodland setting and at the same time the robust community spirit of the new suburb. The musical programs are under direction of William Snell, an entertainer of national fame.

The Avondale theater, with a substantial stage and a projection room that includes the most highly approved devices, possesses also every facility for the comfort of the spectators, with an equipment of benches made according to a special design and a thick carpet of sand which aids relaxation.

The theater is added to the swimming pool, the lake for boating and fishing, the golf course, tennis courts, playgrounds, riding stables, parks, and the attractive Avondale Community club as rounding out the arrangements for recreation at disposal of dwellers in Avondale Estates.

Chamber of Commerce At Decatur Starts Fund Campaign Monday

Decatur, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Definite plans have been made for the actual start of the Greater Decatur Chamber of Commerce campaign next Monday night. All workers will assemble at the Elite Tea room at 7 o'clock, when prospect cards for several hundred Decatur citizens will be distributed. The campaign will continue, it was announced, until every dollar has been subscribed.

Preliminary work on the campaign has been going on for two weeks. The executive committee, composed of 25 prominent citizens, has held several meetings preparatory to the campaign, and all details are expected to be in shape by the end of this week.

"To get the amount we need in this campaign," said General Chairman J. Howell Green, "we must not have less than 400 subscribers at $25 each. With a total population of 12,500 people, at least, we should have no trouble in finding more than 400 citizens of the city who are sufficiently interested in Decatur's future to invest $25 in development work the organization expects to undertake."

The intensive solicitation organization will be divided into four divisions. Division A will be commanded by Walter D. Parris; division B, Leon O'Neal; division C, E. B. Sutton, and division D, George Woods.

SPIRITUAL DECLINE OF YOUTH FEARED

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—Warning of the danger of a spiritual decline among American youth as exemplified by religious liberalism and atheistic clubs in colleges was issued today by the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church in session here.

In its report to the assembly, the committee on the state of religion expresses alarm over the decline of converts during the last year and laid part of the blame on the abandonment of family prayer and devotion to religious service.

"We also note," the report said, "the baneful influence of religious liberalism in many schools and that atheistic clubs are being formed in many colleges and universities. There is grave danger that young people may be led away from the fundamental realities of the Gospel."

The business sessions of the assembly was adjourned after adoption of a policy of retrenchment in its foreign missionary activities.

LINDBERGH DRIVE WANTED AS NAME FOR MAYSON AVE.

A petition seeking to change the name of Mayson avenue, between Peachtree and Piedmont roads to Lindbergh drive, in honor of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, youthful conqueror of the trans-Atlantic non-stop flight to Paris, has been received by the Fulton commission.

The petition is signed by residents along the road who pointed out that while the motive was primarily to honor the young hero that there was another Mayson avenue within the boundaries of Atlanta and thus much confusion had been caused by the similarity of street names.

by July 1, it is announced by Mr. Roosevelt. A five-mile motor road has been built to connect the views on Pine mountain and a 5,000-acre hunting preserve is to be stocked with game. The resort is reached by two excellent highways from Atlanta by Newnan or Griffin, in two and one-half ho[urs].

Plot To Destroy U. S. Navy Depot Charged to Reds

BY WALTER WILGUST.

(Copyright 1927 for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Manila, May 28.—The Communist radical committee in Shanghai has been in correspondence with the Philippine labor union, Legionarios del Trabajo, seeking to obtain the latter's assistance in blowing up the United States navy ammunition depot inside the Cavite navy yard, six miles across the bay from Manila, according to reports received here.

At a recent secret meeting of the Cavite lodge of Legionarios, the plan was discussed. Legionarios having the erroneous belief that this would prevent the supply of ammunition from reaching American ships in Chinese waters.

The navy yard authorities refused to comment on the information. It is known, however, that a strict watch and precautions were taken to prevent the attempt.

Such an explosion would wipe out the entire town of Cavite, with a population of 15,000, and also cause serious damage and loss of life in Manila.

Legionarios is a semi-bolshevik organization with a membership of thousands in Manila and the nearby provinces. President Domingo Ponce was a delegate to the Canton labor congress a year ago.

SHIP THAT SEARCHED FOR AIRMEN RETURNS

Curling, N. F., May 28.—(AP)—The steamer Sagona returned today after an unsuccessful search for Captains Nungesser and Coli, missing French aviators, lost during their attempted trans-Atlantic flight from Paris to New York. The steamer searched the Straits of Belle Isle and along the Labrador coast as far as Battle Harbor without finding any trace of the missing airmen.

Retail Druggists Pass Resolution Condemning Unfair Tobacco Taxes

Move Started at Athens Convention To Seek Drastic Revision of Rates in Coming Legislature.

That retail druggists throughout the state are being subjected to discriminatory taxes on cigars and tobacco was the burden of a resolution adopted by the Georgia Pharmaceutical association which closed at Athens last Tuesday. Pointing out that the discrimination has placed an unfair burden on the retailer, thereby encouraging evasions and depriving the state of its legal revenue, the assembly went on record favoring every effort to have drastic revisions of the law passed at the coming session of the legislature.

Resolution.

"Whereas, the drug business in Georgia is subjected to thirty-seven (37) varieties of discriminatory burdens of license, taxes and similar requirements not applicable to other branches of business in this state; and

"Whereas, all drug stores in Georgia carry as part of their business a department for supplying their customers with cigars, cigarettes, etc., except those druggists who have been compelled to abandon this department on account of the burdens imposed by the stamp tax act, which does not apply to other commodities; and

"Whereas, the operation of this discriminatory tax has not only imposed unnecessary burdens upon the subjects of the tax, but has encouraged evasions of the law, and has deprived the state of its legitimate revenues; and

Whereas, these burdens upon dealers and consumers will be relieved by a substitute system of license taxation that would result in a much greater net revenue to the state of Georgia:

Seek New Law.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Georgia Pharmaceutical association, in convention assembled, that an effort be made in behalf of its members, the consuming public and the state, to have the general assembly of Georgia enact at its 1927 session, a bill substituting for the stamp tax act a fair system of license taxation that will relieve the dealers from the burdens they have suffered under the stamp tax act, and will bring into the state of Georgia a greater net revenue than has been derived under the stamp tax act.

"Be it further resolved, that the legislative committee of the Georgia Pharmaceutical association be authorized and instructed to prepare a bill for the purpose of substituting for the stamp tax act a license tax for the sale of all manufactured tobacco products, the amount of license to be such amount as will be fair to the respective dealers in such commodities, and as will insure to the state of Georgia a greater net revenue than is derived under the stamp tax act, the legislative committee to be authorized and empowered to appoint such other committees as they may desire to cooperate with them in the enactment of such bill into law."

Rifle in Hand Of Every Red Soldier Urged

Moscow, May 28.—(AP)—"A rifle in the hand of every red soldier—a state bond in the hand of every worker," is the new watchword for the defense of the soviet union in face of the break yesterday with Great Britain.

Mobilization of the union's interior resources now has become its most important defense, says Nicholas Brukhanoff, commissar of finance. He declares that every conscientious citizen must realize that his interest is tied up with that of the union and come forward with individual aid for the country's finances. He appeals particularly for the people to turn their hidden savings into the country's coffers. These hoardings, which profit nothing now either to their owners or to the state, he declares, can be collected and handed over to the state banks to prove a national financial bulwark, assuring continuance of the country's economic progress.

$450,000 HOTEL IS TO BE BUILT NEAR BRUNSWICK

Brunswick, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Construction of a $450,000 hotel on Glyn isle, the work to begin at an early date, is announced here today through the Howard Coffin interests.

The hotel is to be built with the assistance of local capital. A mass meeting of local citizens will be held next week, at which plans for the subscribing of $75,000 in stock will be discussed. Local interest is very favorable for the subscribing of this amount. The hotel was discussed yesterday at a meeting of the Young Men's club.

"Peachtree Gardens," New Supper Club, Set Pace for Fashionable Atlanta

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT.

To be swanky, quite up to the moment and that sort of thing, Atlanta henceforth must suffer a break in its regular routine of bridge and coffee and sandwiches.

Peachtree Gardens, the city's new supper club out Wieuca road, calls those who hanker after popular attention. To maintain a reputation for being blase and fashionably daring, one must go there.

Several hundreds in common male business suits and tuxedos and sport clothes, and in female tub silks, evening gowns, shawles and street coats, honked their way out the north side route Friday night for the busy opening of the club, and Saturday night witnessed another big attendance despite the intermittent showers.

On both occasions they found the dance floor an excellent one that fitted shuffling feet to a nicety. They discovered that "Peachtree Gardens" boasts a chef with a soul and a cuisine that isn't afraid to tackle anything. Results in the food line were heart-warming, and the ale fizzes with the same carbonated zest to be encountered in the most svelte drug stores.

The music stacks up on a par with the food. Charles Dornberger and his orchestra are there. They play awhile, and sing awhile and do comedy stunts awhile, and then play and sing and clow all over again. They do them all well. When Dornberger's battery of moaning saxophones unlimbers, feet won't stay on pine boards. (The dance floor is of polished oak).

Now for the cabaret acts. They're keen enough, too. Rarely has Atlanta seen a dancing team more talented than Renee and Fohl. They specialize in that slinky sort of Spanish crawl and they go over big.

The Moore Sisters, young and shapely and equipped with colored wigs to fit any mood of the evening wear well in the glare of the overhead spotlight. Leatrice Wood and MaBelle Boyer sing croony popular ballads rather well, and Harry Moon, "master of ceremonies," works himself into willing perspiration to summon up sufficient pep and personality to put himself and the acts across.

The present bill is here to stay for a season of gay nights and chatting crowds. All Atlanta should go to see the performers and whilom shake a wicked hoof and eat filet mignon and other good American dishes with foreign titles.

There's no need to issue the same invitation to out-of-towners. They'll be there anyway.

1 KILLED, 4 SAFE IN PLANE CRASH

Columbus, O., May 28.—(AP)—Falling a thousand feet when its propeller broke, the big army bombing plane, XLC-5, of Langley Field, Va., crashed today near here, carrying one soldier to his death after his four comrades had leaped to safety from the hurtling machine in parachutes.

Private Leroy D. Yeager, unable to leave the plane with his companions, fell with it. As a crowd gathered the two gasoline tanks exploded, throwing flames in all directions and incinerating the body of the trapped flier. It is not known whether Yeager was killed in the crash or whether he was burned to death.

Lieutenant Bernard M. Bridges, pilot, unsuccessful in steering his parachute to open ground, was caught in telephone wires and hurtled to the ground. He suffered a badly bruised leg and possible internal injuries. He was removed to a hospital here where it was said his injuries did not appear serious.

Major L. H. Brereton, in charge of the plane; Staff Sergeant Fred P. Miller and Master Sergeant Clyde M. Taylor made successful landings and were uninjured. All five men were members of the twentieth night bombing squadron at Langley Field and had been at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas, to participate in the air-land maneuvers recently concluded. They were returning to Langley Field and had stopped shortly before at Norton Field, here, for refueling.

ATLANTA BOND SALE PREPARATION PUSHED

Preparations to sell $1,968,000 worth of city hall and viaduct bonds, the complete allocation for these purposes carried in the $8,000,000 bond issue, were pushed Saturday when B. Graham West, city comptroller, advertised the sale for June 15, and the bonds for delivery July 1.

In posting the circular of the sale Mr. West explained that every possible means of expediting the sale and administration of the funds in accordance with the wish of the people as expressed at the polls March 24, 1924, is being made.

Meanwhile preparations are being rushed by the school department so that administration of the school allocation of $3,500,000 may be begun as soon as funds are available. Tentative plans for carrying out a program of administration of the $2,000,000 sewer improvements contemplated under the issue already have been completed and will be definitely settled upon within a few days, it was announced Saturday night.

The waterworks department will carry to completion several new main projects started under the old bond issue with the $500,000 fund for that purpose, according to officials of that department.

Officer Killed When He Halts Traffic Violator

Birmingham, Ala., May 28.—(AP)—Policeman A. A. Manley was shot to death here tonight by the occupants of an automobile which he attempted to halt in the traffic of a downtown corner.

Failing to halt at his command, Officer Manley jumped to the running board of another car, ordering the driver in pursuit of the fleeing machine. As his car drew alongside the first automobile, the occupants opened fire and Manley fell to the street fatally wounded.

It was believed the policeman ordered the car to stop because of a minor traffic violation.

The World's Greatest Tire

GOODYEAR

All-Weather Tread Supertwist Balloon

Above you see the Goodyear Tire that is speeding Goodyear sales all over the country.

This is the product of the great experience obtained in building millions upon millions of passenger car tires.

It is the new-type All-Weather Tread Goodyear Supertwist Balloon!

Until this new type Goodyear you never saw a quiet, smooth-running balloon tire with equal traction. Safe, surefooted, skidless, this tire has in its tread's center sharp-edged diamond-shaped blocks which seize, grip, and hang-on.

Until the coming of SUPERTWIST cords, casing fatigue and shoulder-break were the arch-foes of balloon tire performance. Since Goodyear developed this amazingly elastic and durable material these troubles have virtually disappeared.

Until now "cupping" and "pot holes" were characteristic of tread wear in balloons. The specially-designed new-type All-Weather Tread meets this issue squarely and insures long, slow, even wear.

Atlanta Meets 'Brighten-Up'

You've probably seen this automobile about Atlanta bearing the sign of "Brighten-Up," new soap product manufactured by the Poland Soap Works at Anniston, Ala. This new soap is coming to Atlanta to make a bid for popularity among housewives and officials of the concern are busily lining up an intensive selling campaign.

SEVEN CHURCH BODIES EMERGED

Omaha, Neb., May 28.—(AP)—Hailed by laymen and clergymen as the biggest step ever taken in the Congregational church of the United States, the merger of the seven big incorporate bodies of the church was completed today at the meeting of the national council.

One board of directors, composed of 36 persons, lay and clergy being represented, was unanimously elected by each of the groups involved in the consolidation. Each society will retain its own financial status, and each will have its own officers. These, however, will work under direct supervision of the officers and directors of the home board—the name of the incorporated branches.

Those societies merged are the Home Missionary society, Church Building society, Sunday School Extension society, American Missionary society, Education society and the Congregational Publishing society.

The Rev. William Horace Day, of Bridgeport, Conn., was elected president of the home board; Frank J. Harwood, retiring moderator, of Appleton, Wis., vice president, and the Rev. M. R. Boynton, of Chicago, recording secretary. The other big job in the home board is the secretary of promotion, which was given to the Rev. Charles C. Merrill, of Chicago.

Emory To Build Unit To House Married Students

Emory University, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Miss Mary E. Anderson, of Augusta, Ga., has made it possible by a donation to Emory university to have a dormitory provided for married theological students. A $15,000 brick structure, to be known as the L. C. Hayne memorial dormitory, will be built on faculty row, near the campus this summer as the first unit of these buildings. It will be ready for occupation by the beginning of the fall semester.

Many of the students in the school of theology have graduated from college, and are already married, or are considering doing so. Thus the donor saw a real need for this kind of a dormitory at Emory. After the completion of the first apartment building, it is planned to build more as the need increases.

Plays Go Big.

Three one-act plays, said to be the most successful plays produced here during the past year, featured the final performance of the Playcrafters' club Saturday night at the Playcrafters' theater in West End.

The plays were "The Cat," "The Very Naked Boy" and "Helena's Husband." They were played before one of the largest crowds of the season.

STRAUS BETTER AFTER ATTACK OF APPENDICITIS

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, May 28.—While attending physicians watched anxiously for improvement which would make an operation unnecessary, Nathan Straus, 80-year-old philanthropist, slowly rallied from an attack of appendicitis in Mount Sinai hospital tonight.

Frank admissions that the shock of an operation might be attended with fatal results because of the age of the patient came from hospital authorities.

"Mr. Straus is resting comfortably," was the word given out at the hospital. "The worst stage of the attack has passed, and no immediate operation is contemplated unless there is an unexpected change in the patient's condition."

Nearly three years ago Straus severed his last connection with the business world to devote his time to his favorite philanthropy—pasteurized milk for babies, and zionism.

Woman's Slayer In Nicaragua Row Not Determined

Managua, May 28.—(AP)—Although Captain William P. Richards, of the United States marine corps, shot and killed the Nicaraguan bandit, Cabulla, in self-defense at El Viejo on May 26, it has not been determined whether another bullet from his pistol killed a woman who attacked him with a machete, or whether she fell from a bullet from an automatic rifle fired by another member of the marine patrol.

Captain Richards had undertaken to remonstrate with Cabulla against his cruelty to the natives. Cabulla with members of his band and the woman were found in an isolated house. Almost immediately Cabulla reached for his pistol, but the marine officer was too quick for him, firing three shots and killing him. The woman sprang forward with upraised machete. A rifleman fired almost simultaneously with Captain Richards, and the woman dropped.

The official report of the occurrence received from Brigadier General Feland, marine corps, read:

"El Viejo, 6:30 P. M. May 26.—Captain W. P. Richards, on complaint of a native of maltreatment by Cabulla, went with a patrol of two squads to investigate. Cabulla was located in a house with a woman and eight other men. Upon the entrance of Captain Richards and the patrol into the room occupied by Cabulla and the woman, Cabulla reached for a pistol.

"Captain Richards fired three shots, killing Cabulla. At the same time the woman advanced armed with a machete. An automatic rifleman fired. The woman was killed either by a pistol or an automatic rifle; it is impossible to determine which."

KID EATS; ACHES

Quitman Boy Sings New Banana Song.

"Yes, he had some bananas!"

But 15 bananas were too much for Ernest Bussie, 15, of Quitman, Ga., who Saturday afternoon was stricken with severe cramps while on his way to see Stone mountain, as a result of eating that many. Young Bussie was picked up on DeKalb avenue by motorists who rushed him to Grady hospital, where doctors gave him first aid treatment and placed him under observation.

At the hospital the youth told of his journey to Atlanta and was very much grieved that he was taken sick, thus preventing him from seeing the "big rock" where the Confederate memorial is being carved. He said he had eaten "only 15" bananas.

ELECTRICAL RECIPES FOR THE HOUSEWIFE—ALL THE LATEST RADIO SET BUILDING DESIGNS ~

Alexander-Seewald Open New Department

Well-Known Automotive and Radio Distributors Add General Electric Refrigerator Line.

A new type electric refrigerator that is amazingly simplified is to be sold in Atlanta, according to an announcement issued late Saturday by the officials of the Alexander-Seewald company, prominent radio and automotive dealers.

The new unit, manufactured by the General Electric company, will be known and marked as the "G-E" refrigerator, according to the announcement which was issued by W. D. Alexander who is to be actively in charge of the distribution of the line.

Extensive plans for the marketing of the refrigerator have been formulated by the Alexander-Seewald company which has leased retail and display quarters at 577 Peachtree street, N. E., in the Erlanger Theater building. The display rooms which are to be devoted entirely to refrigeration, will be in charge of E. V. Dunbar, formerly conected with the Cincinnati Ball Crank company and the General Electric company.

"Our new sales rooms will be an innovation in the way of display," said Mr. Alexander in discussing his company's step into the refrigeration line, "and will be so arranged as to enable anyone to learn at first hand just what electric refrigeration means to the home.

"Mr. Dunbar, who will shortly make his home in Atlanta, is thoroughly posted in the principles of electric refrigeration and will be in an excellent position to advise with buyers. Every effort will be made to make our new quarters a place where any one may obtain the latest information in regard to the installation of iceless refrigeration.

"Both D. C. Alexander and myself will be actively associated in our new venture, into which we stepped only after we were entirely satisfied that the General Electric refrigerator would do all that is claimed for it.

"The new General Electric refrigerators is the result of 15 years of experiment and the building of thousands of refrigerators by the General Electric laboratories. This experimental work embraced 19 different types of electric refrigerators and that world-wide organization has now produced a simple, efficient domestic refrigerator that is entirely different from anything else on the market.

"The motor is on top of the cabinet—a departure in refrigerator construction that carries manifold advantages. It never needs oiling or attention. It can be installed in a few minutes by merely lowering the hermetically sealed unit into the top of the box. It is plugged into any electric outlet just like any other domestic appliance. One of its most important improvements is its unusual quietness of operation.

"The icing unit is assembled in a dust-proof room, with all the care that usually goes into the making of the most precise scientific instruments. After it is assembled it is hermetically sealed. It is then subjected to varied and rigid tests."

STARS "COME DOWN" AT TOUCH OF BUTTON

Scientific studies of the stars with giant telescopes would be nearly impossible without electric motors. At the Dominion Astrophysical observatory just outside of Vancouver, B. C., for instance, a 72-inch telescope weighing 55 tons is revolved and adjusted to finest settings by several motors running silently at the touch of a series of push buttons which the observer carries at his belt.

More than $25,000,000 was invested in electric power developments in Canada during 1926, adding 266,000 horsepower to the Dominion's generating capacity.

Wave of Interest In House Wiring Increases Daily

A wave of public interest in house wiring is traveling over the country. People are growing more anxious to get all the service they can out of the electricity they buy.

This is evidenced by the fact that the Red Seal Plan of home wiring offered to the nation without cost by the Society for Electrical Development is being adopted by new cities throughout the land with each passing week.

Up to January 1 the plan was working in about 1,000 cities and towns with a total population of over 16,000,000 and since then six more organizations centering in Richmond, Va.; Omaha, Neb.; Muskegon, Mich.; Washington, D. C., and Evanston, Ill., have introduced it.

The Red Seal Plan, which is a plan of wiring that anybody can use if he lives in one of the supervised territories, provides that his house wiring shall be adequate so that the occupants of a dwelling, whether it be a single house or an apartment block, can get the most out of their electric service.

In the United States and Canada there are already 4,979 Red Sealed houses either completed or under construction, 3,126 of which are in the states and the 1927 building season—the second in the American career of the plan—is just starting. A tremendous increase is expected during this summer.

In the long list of cities now actively considering adoption of the Red Seal iden are Racine, Wis.; Duluth, Minn.; Columbus, Ohio; Boston, Mass.; Easton, Pa.; Utica, N. Y.; New Orleans, La.; Alexandria, Va.; Hammond, Ind.; Lincoln, Neb.; Charleston, W. Va., and Salt Lake City, Utah.

WMAQ, Chicago, Raises $100,000 In Flood Relief

Chicago, Ill., May 28.—Seventy-five thousand dollars plus and the third quota passed is the record of stations WMAQ and WQJ, operated by the Chicago Daily News, in raising funds for relief of the flood sufferers.

"The new quota is $100,000 and we won't stop until we get it."

Those are the words of Miss Judith C. Waller, director, as she made plans today to raise the fourth $25,000, if possible, within a week's time, or if not within a week as soon thereafter as possible.

"The friends of the Daily News stations have already contributed a tenth of the whole quota originally set for Chicago," Miss Waller explained. "We intend to do our level best to maintain this same ratio in relation to the million-dollars quota now set for the city. With the exception of two $1,000 checks, one each from the Chicago Daily News and the Calumet Baking Powder company, owners respectively of WAMQ and WQJ, the great total has been subscribed in small amounts."

The appreciation of southerners for the valiant financial help they are receiving from the Daily News fans was expressed in a letter to The News by Governor John Martineau, of Arkansas, a state which suffered severely from both flood and wind. Because of a recent broadcast of 30 minutes of WMAQ, Governor Martineau said that he felt a little closer to The News' fens than to others and that he would like to thank each one personally.

Dawn of Complete A-C Operated Tubes

BY M. O. MOSTELLER.
Garvin Electric Company.

In this column was recently published an article on the A-C tubes, which contained no definite data.

We are very fortunate indeed to be in position to give you complete data as furnished by J. J. Hahn, of the Radio Corporation of America.

New tubes which, with the use of a small step-down transformer will eliminate "A" batteries from receiving sets especially designed to accommodate them, and improve rectifier tubes for use in eliminating "B" batteries, or in special circuits to do away with "A" batteries, will soon be placed on the market, according to an announcement by E. E. Bucher, general sales manager of the Radio Corporation of America.

These new tubes numbering four in all are the result of ceaseless research and experiment extending over a number of years, on the part of the Radio Corporation of America and its manufacturing associates, the General Electric company and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

On Market July 1.

"On or about July 1," reads Mr. Bucher's announcement, "there will be introduced two A-C types of radiotrons having operating characteristics similar to those of the 201-A type and which in so far as performance is concerned give the same results obtainable from the 201-A or 199 types of tubes, but in which unrectified current obtained from a step-down transformer eliminates the usual "A" battery. These are to be known as types UX-226 and UY-227.

A month prior, on about June 1, the Radio corporation plans to introduce two new and improved radiotron rectifies of the filament type for use in "B" battery eliminators, or, in special circuits for "A" battery elimination employing series filament drive. These tubes will be known as types UX-280 and UX-281."

The new A-C tubes will not be immediately applicable to the present types of receivers, according to Mr. Bucher, "and they are not to be considered as taking the place of any of the present types of standard vacuum tubes produced. To accommodate the new A-C tubes in the prevalent types of broadcast receivers, it would be necessary to make radical changes in design, and in many cases it would be entirely impracticable. The new rectifiers, on the other hand, are applicable to many existing radio rectifying devices without further adaptation.

They will give outstanding performance in battery eliminators especially designed for their characteristics."

Following is a general description and detailed specifications of the new radiotrons and their fields of practical application.

"A-C" Types of Radiotrons.

Radiotron UX-226 is a 1 1-2-volt A-C filament type, drawing current of 1.05 amperes, and intended for radio frequency and audio frequency amplification in circuits especially designed for its use.

The filament is energized from an A-C lighting source through a suitable step-down transformer. The operating characteristics of UX-226, other than the method of energizing the filament, are generally similar to those of the standard radiotron 201-A. UX-226 is not recommended as a detector. It employs the standard "UX radiotron base.

CHARACTERISTICS OF UX-226.

Maximum undistorted output	20	60	160	Milliwatts

Maximum overall height, 4 11-16". Maximum overall diameter, 1 13-16".

Radiotron UY-227 is an A.C. heater type in which the electron-emitting element (cathode) is made active through an independent internal heating element requiring 1.75 amperes at 2 1-2 volts, A.C. It is primarily intended as a detector tube in receiving sets where the radio-frequency and audio-frequency stages employ the UX-226 tube, although it may be employed for radio-frequency and audio-frequency amplification as well. UY-227 employs a special five-prong base.

CHARACTERISTICS OF UY-227.

How Will You Spend Today? Beware of Accident Wave

How will you spend today? Business cares forgotten, will you motor into the country as most people will?

Normally that would be considered a safe way of passing the time, but if you consider the ever-mounting accident wave that is sweeping the country, you must admit that your life and the lives of your family will be in danger every moment you're on the road.

Are you protected financially against accidents? How would you fare if your income were suddenly halted? What future would your loved ones face if you were killed without warning?

Don't take chances with comfort and happiness. You can safeguard them too cheaply to go along heedless of danger.

The Constitution offers you the famous $7,000 travel accident policy of the North American Accident Insurance company, of Chicago. The cost of this great policy is only $1.25 per year—a fraction of a penny a day—and to prove that it's the type of insurance most needed, more than $50,000 in cash already has been paid on claims of Constitution policy-holders.

The policy provides for payment of sums ranging downward from $7,500 in case of death resulting from certain accidents; heavy cash sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from the accidents specified.

This is the best investment ever tendered you. A train wreck, a crash of cars, the onrushing wheels of a speeding automobile or a burning building may leave you a victim of the accident wave today.

Act now! Watch for advertisements appearing regularly in this paper, which set forth details of the unparalleled offer in full.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of The Daily and Sunday Constitution and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 70 at $1.25 per policy per year.

One who is now taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution or will subscribe for same through carrier in Atlanta or suburbs, through an out-of-town carrier, or dealer, paying for the paper weekly, monthly or otherwise, is a subscriber and is eligible.

Those taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution by mail, either through a postoffice or rural route delivery, for one year, are eligible by paying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

In sending application for insurance the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation. If beneficiary is desired, full Christian name must be given and the relation of the same to the insured.

Wilson Connected With Nitrogen Firm In Executive Post

W. H. Wilson, of the Mississippi A. & M. college, has been made assistant to Dr. A. M. Smith, director of the agricultural department of Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Company, Inc., importers of synthetic nitrogen fertilizers. Dr. Smith established headquarters in Atlanta last fall to serve the south, and his work has increased to such an extent that it has become necessary to add to his staff.

W. H. WILSON.

Mr. Wilson is a graduate of Mississippi A. and M. college, specializing in farm crops and soil fertility.

For several months he was employed by the United States department of agriculture, doing research work on cotton production. For the past five months he has been a graduate student at Mississippi A. and M.

Every year men learn how to produce more electric energy per pound of coal burned under power plant boilers. Before the war it was considered good economy to generate a kilowatt-hour of energy to each three pounds of coal burned. Last year the national average was 1.95 pounds.

The most powerful electric locomotives in the world of the motor-generator type are now hauling Great Northern trains over the Cascade. Each locomotive weighs 350 tons.

DOG BEAUTY PARLOR NEW YORK'S LATEST

Hair clippers and cleansing devices driven by electricity may sound a trifle up-stage for use on dogs, but it isn't. At the new hospital in New York city just completed by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals a department equipped a good deal like a beauty parlor has been put into excellent service.

So many hundreds of ailing and homeless dogs in the great city have to be washed and clipped that no ordinary makeshift will do. Clippers for little dogs and clippers for big dogs are provided. After each dog is bathed he is dried off quickly by air heated electrically and blown on him by a motor. There is no time to waste and the new apparatus wastes none.

LEGION TO ATTEND MARIETTA SERVICES

Legionaires who will represent the Atlanta post in the Decoration day observance at the National cemetery in Marietta Monday will meet at post headquarters in the Palmer building at 9 o'clock Monday morning to go to the cemetery in a body.

Major Asa Warren Candler, commander of the post, will head the delegation. Fonville McWhorter has been designated to speak as representative of the legion in the Decoration day exercises at the cemetery.

The regular meeting of the executive committee of the post has been postponed from Monday until 12:30 o'clock Tuesday in order to enable attendance of members at the memorial exercises.

The newest use of electric lamps is secret signalling for military purposes. By properly screening signal lamps with certain materials only the infra-red rays, which are invisible to the naked eye, are released. These are received at various distances by sensitive apparatus which will sound buzzers and otherwise respond to the rays even though nobody in that region except the operators is conscious of the fact that the peculiar light is being transmitted.

Electric heat running up into high temperatures applied to oil used in an industrial shop greatly reduced an epidemic of boils and infections which workmen suffered. All oil that is flowed over metal cutting work is pumped into the hot tank and heated to 160 degrees Fahrenheit before it is sent back into the machine system. This kills all bacilli.

Stromberg-Carlson Virtuoso Favors Matriculation in Jazz

:: GRADUATES SHOULD HAVE DEGREE ::

Rochester, N. Y., May 28.—"University courses should be lengthened to eight years for the increasing number of students who want to matriculate in jazz," declares George Olsen, B. J. (bachelor of jazz), University of Michigan graduate and leader of the Stromberg-Carlson orchestra.

Mr. Olsen says that it took him seven years to learn to swing the drum major's baton. "Virtuosity on a single instrument," he affirms, "may be attained in an intensive four years, but the fine art of juggling drumsticks or the other graces of the complete jazz performer takes infinite time and practice."

Mr. Olsen believes that the universities of our country should pay more attention to popular music. He says, "Since our universities are fast becoming the chief sources of supply for the leader of syncopated music, serious attention should be given by them to preparing talented young men for this new and lucrative career. Letters from broadcast fans all over the country seem to indicate the extreme popularity of the manner in which my Stromberg-Carlson orchestra plays modern music.

"I attribute this to the fact that I myself can substitute for nearly any instrumentalist in my orchestra. Knowing what each has to do, I can orchestrate for each musician intelligently—and sympathetically."

Mr. Olsen and his Stromberg-Carlson orchestra are heard every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, eastern daylight saving time, from stations WJZ, WBZ, KDKA, KYW and WJR.

New Electric Servants

Toasting machines built like small roll-top glass and enamel desks are made for hotel, restaurant or lunch counter use. They can turn out 412 slices of toast in an hour with a belt arrangement that runs the bread past electric heaters.

A new light-weight soldering iron has appeared that requires only an ordinary 6-volt battery to supply electric energy. The iron is equipped with a pair of wires which are to be clipped to the battery terminals. The point of the iron is said to heat quickly.

Little hand electric cleaners are made for the benefit of those who do not own attachments for their full-size cleaners. These little suction appliances, hardly larger than a hair brush and weighing less than five pounds, can be used to reach many "out-of-reach" places.

A wire lamp guard to be used on a lamp equipped with a long cord is a handy device. Half of the wire cage around the lamp is a sheet metal reflector. At the base of the guard is a wire clip to enable the user to fix the lamp wherever it will do the most good. Such a device does well around a garage or in the cellar.

A device resembling a radio tube has been invented which is said to be the most sensitive thing ever made by man. It is a "grid glow relay" which can be stimulated to action by so evanescent a thing as the passing of a shadow or by the weight of a single drop of dew. The relay has many possible uses. It can be used to turn on lights at evening and turn them off the next morning. It will guard gas and oil stoves, give advance notice of the approach of thunderstorms, count people passing a given point and do a variety of other things.

ALL-DAY BROADCAST OF SPEEDWAY RACES

WGN will broadcast the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race again this year, on Monday, May 30, starting at 10:30 a. m. (central daylight saving time). This is the fourth year that WGN has broadcast the famous auto classic, and the station promises listeners another vivid word picture of the world's greatest automobile racing event.

The Indianapolis race is a sports highlight that draws the attention of motoring fans the country over. The most famous drivers in the world enter the competition, and the prize money is the largest offered the speed kings on any track. Thousands of people make the annual pilgrimage to the big brick speedway, and this year the crowd is expected to exceed 120,000.

Military Dead To Be Honored By Coolidge

Washington, May 28.—President Coolidge will officiate here Monday at memorial services in Arlington National cemetery for America's military dead.

The president is scheduled to make an address at 1:30 p. m., eastern standard time. It will be radioed over the country through the following linked stations:

WEAF, New York; WEEI, Boston; AJAR, Providence; WGR, Buffalo; WFI, Philadelphia; WRC, Washington; WCSH, Portland, Me.; MCAE, Pittsburgh; WTAM, Cleveland; WWJ, Detroit; WSAI, Cincinnati; KSD, St. Louis; WOC, Davenport; WCCO, Minneapolis; WDAF, Kansas City; WHAS, Louisville; WSM, Nashville; WMC, Memphis; WMAQ and KYW, Chicago; WJZ, New York; WBZ-WBZA, Springfield-Boston; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WTAG, Worcester; WJR, Detroit.

MOTORS GUARD CITY STREETS FROM FLOOD

Watchmen that nobody ever sees are on duty in most cities of the land ready to protect whole neighborhoods during rain storms. They are electrically-driven pumps mounted under such streets as may dip under railway crossings and the like.

The levels of these dips may be so low that a sudden rain would overload the storm sewers placed there and consequently flood the street, stopping traffic and possibly overflowing into nearby basements.

Under the street dip is constructed a concrete pit which collects overflow water as soon as the ordinary storm sewers flood. The rising water in this pit lifts a float automatically starting the motor pump which goes to work pumping water through a pipe to some distant discharge point. This continues until the emergency is over.

The lowering water in the pit then stops the motor pump to await the next call. Thus the motor does its job day or night without attention.

Electric service is spreading rapidly to farmers throughout the country. The cost of building transmission lines being the biggest handicap, a plan is usually adopted under which the electricity company pays part of this cost if the farmer buys electric equipment valued at about the same amount.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

This is a confession. An admission of error by a former radioscoffer. It ought to be good for the soul and it is, beyond question, good for entertainment.

For years—ever since radio first flooded the country and the waves of the air above the nation, in fact—I have taken no interest in the etherborne music, and so forth. To enquirers I have honestly explained that a preference for picking my own programs kept me true to my phonograph and its library of slowly acquired and pridefully possessed records.

Then, too, I knew nothing of radio and how could I, green, except to harness the wind carried programs through the twisted convolutions of multiple dials?

However——

Views have changed. In the space of two days, too.

Thursday last my good friends at Phillips and Crew Piano company decided it was time that this observer and commentator on things musical stepped within the radio circle. So they sent out, for my trial and approval a Radiola 20, with orthophonic victrola attached, 'n' everything.

Also a supply of new records, just in case the radio side of the contraption failed to convert. There is a lot of static this time o' year, anyway. In fact, they told me hardly anybody was getting anything except local stations now.

Just to try how the thing worked, first of all we tuned in on the local station, WSB. Clear, no static. Powerful? Had to tune down the volume control halfway to zero or we'd have been run out of the house by the torrent of noise. Charley Sheldon was broadcasting from his organ in the First Presbyterian church, they said. Personally, I had a suspicion he'd moved the organ just outside my front window. It was Charlie, alright. I recognized his delightful individuality in the handling of the stops.

Then we tuned in KDKA at Pittsburgh. Heard some really good instrumental music. Then we got several others, including New Orleans once more, where someone was making a flood relief speech. And back home to WSB, at 10:45, with Tech orchestra and Elmer MacDonald's vocalisms provided snappy amusement before bedtime.

Now for the confession. Radio is good and I'm sorry I've gone without so long. And no amateur need fear the dials when he has an instrument like Radiola 20 to use. For it is just about perfection. Not only for reception, but its own construction sends the music out again with the tonal quality of a grand piano or a Strad violin.

As for the victrola side, which we can always use even when the air is silent, friend wife and I have mildly quarreled over two of the records they sent out for our trial.

Friend wife says "Side by Side," played and sung by Nick Lucas is the most natural and beautiful reproduction of sound she has ever heard.

I admit it's good. But cast my vote for "Just the Same," sung by Chester Gaylord, the "Whispering Serenader."

In either case, it isn't the record we argue about. For, with the orthophonic victrola side of our Radiola 20 operating, you don't hear the record at all and you forget it is mechanical. What you hear is simply Lucas and his guitar or Gaylord and his whisper and you simply prefer one or the other.

Drop by Phillips and Crew and get 'em both, try 'em on your own Radiola 20—or what have you?—and let us know who has best taste, friend wife or I.

This Sunday morning I'm going to church by radio and will tell you all about it a little later.

RULES OFFERED TO STOP 'PEST'

John Wallace, well-known radio critic, has apparently reached the end of his endurance so far as listening-in on improperly operated radio receivers is concerned.

In the June Radio Broadcast magazine he makes attempt to define the term "radio pest," that species of listener who offends so flagrantly in the matter of forcing upon visiting friends an overabundance of poorly modulated radio music.

He also offers a set of rules for the edification of these pests. "At any rate you know the beast," he says of the radio pest. "When you open the door of his house for a friendly little call of an evening you are immediately greeted by a resounding blare from a loud speaker in the next room. And whether the order of the evening be bridge or poker, ping pong or conversation, that infernal loud speaker continues to vibrate viciously the evening through.

It vibrates from string quartet to brass band, from election speech to bed time story, from wheezy soprano to musical saw player, from stock market report to be keeping instruction, and back again—and all over again.

Gets No Attention.

"All the while nobody is paying it the slightest bit of attention. To add to the misery, some fluctuation in factors radio and electrical has thrown it out of tune and interference has been set up by some powerful local bird store.

When we say nobody is paying attention to it we refer particularly to its owner and the members of his family. They have, through long exposure, developed an immunity to it.

But you, however (we assume you to be a sensitive being whose ears are normally free of impedimenta), are woefully aware that it is going.

Gradually its cumulative effect is to grind down your nerves to rather small shreds. Finally, at the end of a couple of hours, the one nerve left you unground tautens itself in the superhuman paroxysm and you arise, devour the pack of cards, kick over the reviving set, shout your host, and rush out into the night.

Rules for the "Pest."

"We hesitate to adopt such a smug and paternalistic course as to set forth a set of rules for the proper operation of a receiver, especially because we suspect the great majority of our readers know a lot more about it than we do.

Perhaps you number a radio pest among your friends and would like to have the table of laws to clip and mail to him anonymously. Hence we advance these suggestions:

"First: Keep the fool thing in proper mechanical shape. A receiver with a defective tube or a weak battery or some other wheeze-provoking ailment should be immediately retired from service and kept retired until its ills are attended to. A distorting set is 99 times worse than no set at all.

Background Broadcasts.

Second: As a general rule, don't use the radio simply as a background, at least while some sensitive soul like ourself is parked in your parlor. Like all rules, this one is very flexible because certain types of broadcasts are genuinely fitting as backgrounds. Almost any program of instrumental music (excepting jazz) may serve as a pleasant obbligato to bride or conversation, or even reading, providing it is rheostated down to a sufficiently 'sotto' volume. But speeches, songs and static are a suitable background for nothing we know of outside of a tea party in a mad house."

Mr. Wallace's third rule in Radio Broadcast magazine is as follows: "The most genuine enjoyment from a radio program is to be secured by preparing for it in advance and listening to it with reasonable reverence.

Consult some advance program and find out the exact hour that some feature you want to hear is scheduled. Let the receiver remain deathly silent until two minutes before that hour. Then provide yourself with an easy chair (formal clothes not imperative) and tune-in the desired program right on the instant of the first word of the first announcement.

If you can provide yourself in advance with an itemized program of the feature, it will contribute to the illusion of being at a concert. Try it sometime if you haven't already (selecting, of course, a program that's worth the ritual) and you'll be surprised how much this slight mark of respect for the program repays you in enjoyment of it."

OMAHA STATION POINS NATIONAL BROADCAST CHAIN

New York, May 28.—Plans were formulated today, according to an announcement made public by Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company, whereby permanent wire connections will be installed by October 1, enabling WOW, Omaha, Neb., the broadcasting station owned and operated by the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance association on 526 meters (570 kilocycles) to become associated with both the Red and Blue networks of the National Broadcasting company.

"The addition of WOW to our red and blue networks in October is one which we have looked forward to for some time," stated Mr. Aylesworth. "The territory covered by this station contains hundreds of thousands of real radio fans and while our correspondence shows that they have been in the habit of "DX-ing" for a large majority of the N. B. C. programs, this arrangement will afford this section of the middle west an opportunity to receive these programs with the greatest clarity."

Desserts for the Children From the Electric Refrigerator

BY SELMA E. DAHLGREN.

Of all the various kinds of desserts which may be frozen in the electric refrigerator, the easiest to prepare and perhaps the best flavored, as well as the smoothest in texture, are mousses, parfaits and French ice creams made rich and thick with whipped cream and flavored with syrups or fresh fruits. But the family doctor may say these creamy dishes are found too rich for youthful stomachs. Inasmuch as plain, simple custard is one of the best foundations for making smooth ice cream, the doctor's orders may be strictly followed in the electric refrigerator home without depriving anyone of his ice cream.

How to Make It.

Naturally a longer freezing time must be allowed to stiffen this custard ice cream. The best time to freeze it is during the day so that it can be stirred well every hour, so it will be found convenient to cook the custard foundation a day ahead of time, cool it over night and, early in the morning, turn the mixture into the refrigerator pan for chilling.

Creamless Ice Cream.

2 cups milk.
1 tablespoon gelatine.
3 eggs.
1-2 cup sugar.
1-4 teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Pour 1-4 cup cold milk over the gelatine and let it soak for a few minutes. Heat the rest of the milk almost to the boiling point and pour slowly, stirring all the time, over the beaten egg yolks, mixed with the sugar. Add the salt, the soaked gelatine, and return to the fire, cooking in the top part of a double boiler until the mixture thickens slightly—enough to coat a metal spoon. Remove from the fire, cool, and just before turning into the refrigerator pan, add vanilla and the stiffly beaten egg whites.

Allow eight hours for freezing—more than twice as long as is required for most whipped cream mixtures—with the temperature in the ice compartment at 18 or 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Stir the mixture well every hour, if possible, stirring from the back of the freezing drawer toward the front.

If it is more convenient to do this long time freezing over night, turn the mixture into the pan early enough to allow for two or three stirrings before leaving it. The mixture may become too solid for serving by the time it is wanted, but it can be softened to the proper consistency by removing the pan from the ice compartment and placing it on a shelf in the food compartment of the refrigerator for 30 or 40 minutes.

Some Variations.

This custard ice cream will be found especially good served with crushed fresh fruit or a fruit syrup and its delicate texture will be preferable to the richness of a cream dessert after a very heavy meal. A parfait glass—or slender ice tea glass—filled with alternate scoops of the ice cream, spoonfuls of crushed fruit and sprinklings of macaroon crumbs or dry sponge cake is a deservedly popular dish.

Children—and nearly all grown folks, too—love coconut. Plain custard ice cream made with a half-cup of freshly grated cocoanut added to the recipe has a good, nutty flavor and is nourishing without being too rich.

Not Too "Chocolatty."

Chocolate ice cream for children should not be too strongly flavored else it will be as difficult of digestion as the rich cream mixtures. For a mild chocolate cream, add 1-4 cupful cocoa or 1 ounce grated, melted chocolate to the standard custard recipe, cooking it with the mixture to insure a perfect blend of flavor.

For older children, coffee-flavored ice cream might be permissible. This can be made by substituting 1 cupful of coffee for 1 cupful of milk in the standard refrigerator recipe or by using 1 3-4 cupfuls of milk and 1-4 cupful of concentrated essence of coffee (a handy flavoring to keep on the pantry shelf).

Crushed fruits and berries, sweetened to taste, may also be used to flavor plain vanilla ice cream made by the refrigerator recipe. See that the fruit is well mashed and add not more than 1 cup of fruit pulp to the standard recipe.

Electrical Cookery

BY STELLA ELIZABETH DELAND.

Raisins are very nutritious and the average housewife does not make nearly the use of them that she should. Adding raisins to any food—meat, vegetable or pastry—adds much nutrition to the food they serve. For this reason I am giving below several raisin recipes which I have tested in my own kitchen cooked electrically and have found excellent.

Baked Bananas and Raisins.

Wash one cupful of raisins and put in a saucepan with two cupfuls of water. Cook on the heating top of your electric range over "medium" heat for 15 minutes or until the water begins to feel a little like syrup, then remove it. Arrange the bananas whole in the baking pan, pour several tablespoonfuls of the raisin syrup over them and place in your electric oven which has been preheated to 350 degrees. F. Bake them 15 or 20 minutes, basting every five minutes with the raisin syrup. Serve with the raisin sauce and decorate with the raisins.

Gengerbread Pudding.

Cream one-third cupful of butter and stir into it one well-beaten egg, one cupful of washed and finely chopped raisins and one-half cupful of milk. Sift together one and one-half cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of yellow ginger. Stir the dry ingredients into the liquid mixture and beat until light. Then spread in a well buttered dripping pan as thinly as possible and bake in your electric oven 30 minutes at a temperature of 350 degrees F. Let cool and cut in small squares and serve with lemon or foamy sauce. The raisins in this instance take the place of sugar and give the gingerbread a delicious flavor. This is one of our favorite desserts.

Stuffed Apples With Raisins.

Select large juicy apples, wash and peel one-third of each top and carefully remove the core, leaving the bottom solid. Wash one cupful of raisins, or whatever quantity you will need, and mix them with one-third the quantity of brown sugar. Stuff the apples with this, sprinkle with brown sugar and bake in a pan the bottom of which is covered with water. Have the electric oven heated to about 450 degrees F., and finish baking the apples at that temperature.

BOYS RUN THIS RAILWAY SYSTEM

The grandest toy electric railway in the world is operating in the entire basement of an expensive apartment house on Riverside drive in New York city. There Hugh R. Newsom, a man of business, has adopted the electric railway as his hobby and is teaching 150 boys practical things with it.

The line, comprising about two miles of track running through a concrete "countryside" built in miniature, with four cities, yards, signals and everything, is a railway in every sense except that of dimension. The four-hundred-dollar locomotives are little more than a foot long and the freight and passenger cars that they pull are in proportion, but it is a "regular" railroad, as every boy who works on it by day—and not a few full-grown men who also work on it at nights—agree. These boys and men are getting a keener insight into the world's railroading of the future by electricity.

Boys "Man" the Road.

Every afternoon during the past winter, Mr. Newsom has turned over the railroad to a class of 40 boys. The classes rotate from day to day so that the entire 150 gets its chance. These youths take their positions, from the president's office down to the lowliest signal tower attendant, and the system starts.

Dispatchers issue orders. Boys standing at electric switches press buttons and trains go into action. Way freights and fast freights are made up and worked over the line at their different speeds. Local passenger trains and through passengers travel along the system from end to end always under orders.

Track switches open and close at the touch of boys' fingers on buttons. Signal semaphores and ground signals blink red or yellow or green under the control of other boys assigned to operate them. Slow trains take sidings for fast trains. They run forward and back, in and out of "city" yards. They set out freight cars at appointed places and pick up other "loads" or "empties."

Here Comes President's Special!

Ovvasionally the president's special comes forth for a flying trip and the whole line is cleared for its passage. This extra train movement and every other is controlled by orders that must be implicitly obeyed. If any boy makes a mistake, if the train he operates does not make its connection, or if he causes a wreck, he must make a full report to his superior. The railway works at high pressure, on split-second schedules and the whole system has to be a well-ordered enterprise in which intelligence, quick co-ordination of hand, eye and mind and a grasp of the operating problems of electric railroading are essential.

Everybody Stops for Rest.

The strain on boys would be too high for a continuous "day" of one hour and 50 minutes, which is the class period, so the whole system stops every 25 minutes when the man in charge pulls a master switch. After a few minutes' rest it resumes.

The railroad has many adult visitors, particularly among railroad officials and educators. Also there is a night class of several men who go regularly to play with the line for relaxation. But these Mr. Newsom says, are by no means as expert as the boys. The men cause 25 per cent more wrecks and accidents.

Of the machines generating electric power for the people of he United States, those producing a total of about 12 million horsepower are driven by water, 3 million horsepower by internal combustion engines and 42 million horsepower by steam.

School-Day Memories Feature Sears-Roebuck on Monday

PORTRAY FAMILIAR SCENES

Coincident with the closing exercises of the present school year, the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation will present a radio picture production, entitled "School Days," on WSB from 8 to 9 o'clock Monday night. Appropriate songs and continuity announcements will recall pleasant memories and portray familiar school-day scenes.

The participating artists will include the Foundation Four quartet, Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony," and Marquis Smith, baritone and reader.

The weekly edition of Marquis Smith's radio "scrapbook" will be presented during the hour, and Ray S. Baxter will be featured in various xylophone selections prior to the main presentation.

A variety of entertainment features are billed for the three noonday programs from the Sears-Roebuck tower studio during the week.

"The silvertone tenor" will make his initial appearance on the Monday noon broadcast, along with Frank W. Pay, flute soloist, and Benny Borg, "the singing soldier."

Paul and John will make their regular appearance at the tower studio Wednesday, as will "Hiram Doolittle," farm philosopher.

The Honolulu duo of Hawaiian guitarists, will offer several novelty numbers during the Friday noon program, alternating with Marquis Smith in his feature, "Out of the Old Song Book." "Farm Experience Corner" will be presented by George C. Bigger, foundation secretary.

STREAMS OF LIGHT CRISS-CROSS NATION

Streams of brilliant light thousands of miles long criss-cross the American continent every night of the year. They grow longer and heavier each month. These streams mark the air traffic lanes of the nation. There are now 9,475 miles of air routes either operating or about to open and 2,041 miles are ribboned in electric light to direct fliers through the darkness. During the 1927 calendar year 1,666 additional miles of light will be laid across mountains and plains. It is expected another 3,200 miles will be lighted in 1928. These lanes are marked by 2,000,000 candlepower revolving searchlights at intervals of 10 to 25 miles with "blinkers" and other small lamps between.

The newest thing in street cars was tried out in Springfield, Mass., late in April. It is a one-man car made principally of duralumin, a metal that has reduced the weight of the vehicle about 27 per cent. Enclosed worm drive from four motors increases the speed of the car over ordinary lightweight cars. Control of the motors and brakes is by a system of switches instead of the usual levers.

CROSLEY LICENSED UNDER RCA PATENTS

New York, May 28.—Stabilization of the radio industry received marked impetus today when it became known that Powell Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Radio corporation, leader of the independent radio manufacturers, had entered into an agreement with the Radio Corporation of America, whereby Crosley is licensed under many of the radio patents held by RCA, General Electric company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company and the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

The agreement entitles Crosley to the use of more than 100 basic patents except those covering the principle of the super-heterodyne and super-regeneration. All future laboratory developments of RCA and its associated companies in the field of tuned frequency receivers will be available to him.

Overtures were made to Crosley by RCA interests some months ago. Culmination of recent litigation clearing up the patent situation is said to have prompted Crosley, who also controls Am-rad Radio corporation of Boston, and who is interested in De Forest, Limited, of Canada, as a leader among hundreds of independent manufacturers to take this step to bring stability heretofore lacking, in the industry.

The contracts are said to provide for a 7 1-2 per cent royalty based on sales. More than half a million dollars already are said to have been paid to RCA by the Crosley corporation.

"Just as the federal radio commission is clearing up broadcasting so will clearing up of the patent situation help the engineering and manufacturing side of the industry," Mr. Crosley said. "I have always recognized patent rights and have always paid royalties on patents. Although this alliance with RCA involves paying somewhat more, I feel that through elimination of costly litigation the public will benefit most."

A race track at Greeley, Colo., is now lighted by lamps on 30-foot poles at 45-foot intervals, thus making night racing possible.

'Sympathy for Master'

The story is told of a Jewish girl who came to the United States intensely despising Christians or anything pertaining to them. After a few months in Boston in which there was time for some leisure and a more pleasant personal contact, she found herself spending many hours at Ford hall that brotherhood center, "where all creeds and races had a generous hearing in an open forum."

Evening after evening this girl from a foreign land heard Jews and Gentiles, believers and unbelievers, discuss Jesus and His teachings. Curious, alert, determined, she began to listen, to read, to study, in order that she might find out for herself about this wonderful Christ. One night she was asked to express her opinion and this is what she said: 'Chr'rist is a great social reformer. 'E was not badt, but when I see His beoples I—I am sorry for Jesus."

Are we church women following up Jesus in order to understand Him? And, understanding Him, are we going about our social program, regardless of dissenting opinions heard everywhere?

Today as our ears "hear the cry of children, the prayers of deserted wives and non-supported babies, uneducated boys and girls, and the call of a race for progress, are we proving our good citizenship?"

The juvenile court bill, legal adoption bill, non-support and desertion bill, illegitimacy bill and the mother's aid bill will be introduced in the legislature within a few weeks. Shall we not concentrate on these bills?

Having the strength of our convictions, let us work hurriedly, remembering:

"I shall pass through this world but once—
Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness I can show to any human being,
Let me do it NOW—
Let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

MRS. ALVA G. MAXWELL.

Baptist Missionary Union To Meet at Bessie Tift College

In keeping with its policy of emphasizing the religious development of the young people of the denomination, the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, in session at Bessie Tift college, June 7-9, will devote the first evening session of the convention exclusively to a young people's program, participated in by the members of the young woman's auxiliary of Bessie Tift. This program will be presided over by Miss Julia Allen, state young people's leader. The praise period will be led by Miss Elizabeth Bowen, president of the local college auxiliary, and the address of the evening will be given by Mrs. Janie Cree Rose, principal of the W. M. U. training school, Louisville, Ky.

The convention will be formally opened Tuesday afternoon, June 7, at 2:30 o'clock, with greetings from Dr. Aquila Chamlee, president of Bessie Tift college. Dr. Chamlee's welcome will be responded to by Mrs. Wilbur Jones, superintendent of the Atlanta association. This session and all others of a business nature during the union meet, will be presided over by Mrs. W. J. Nell, of Cartersville, president of the Georgia union.

Official reports given Tuesday will include state executive board report by Mrs. R. B. Adair; systematic Bible reading, Mrs. Paul Etheridge; rural extension work, Miss Ida V. Broad; Mary P. Willingham school, Mrs. E. M. Bailey.

The progress and accomplishments of the union since the Gainesville convention in November will be recounted Wednesday by Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer, and Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader and college secretary. Divisional vice presidents reporting will be Mrs. G. S. Borders, Cedartown; Mrs. Paul Jones, Canton; Mrs. W. C. Tribble, Lavonia; Mrs. Ben Thompson, Madison; Mrs. Idus Robertson, Manchester; Mrs. W. G. King, Waycross; Mrs. Charles Cater, Quitman.

Wednesday morning's session will be one of the most interesting of the entire convention, featuring addresses by Mrs. W. J. Neel, state president, and Miss Juliette Mather, young people's secretary of the woman's missionary union of the Southern Baptist convention.

Departmental officers and board representatives speaking Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning will be Mrs. Frank Burney for the Margaret fund; Mrs. A. B. Green, Mary P. Willingham school; Mrs. Ben Thompson, Southwestern Training school, Fort Worth Texas; Mrs. J. C. Lanier, W. M. U. Training school, Louisville; Mrs. W. W. Stark, stewardship; Mrs. W. W. Mrs. Mikell Makes Address To Local Daughters of King

The following address was made by Mrs. Henry J. Mikell, wife of Bishop Mikell, to the local assembly of the Daughters of the King Wednesday, May 18, in St. Philip's cathedral:

"I have been asked to say a few words on the subject of the duty of Daughters of the King to each other. Let us first ask ourselves what it means to be a Daughter of the King? I think we can answer that by saying one who is willing to try earnestly to live up to the two rules of the order—prayer and service.

"Let us take prayer first, for it is only through prayer that we are able to render really effective service. Christ Himself taught this all through His life, and more especially on that last night in the garden where He agonized in prayer and thus prepared Himself for the greatest service He or any other one can render another, to lay down one's life for a friend. Prayer is not easy; nothing worth while it. So many of us think that prayer is only asking for things, and more especially things of this world. Someone has said 'Prayer is putting oneself in tune with the infinite.' One of our psalms says 'Be still then and know that I am God. We can just as truly pray when we are sitting still and concentrating on the wonders of God as when we are on our knees asking for blessings, either spiritual or temporal. There is a saying, 'He that beautifies his own soul can beautify the universe.' That is true, for it is only by making our own lives beautiful that we can hope to influence others. I want to quote a verse each from two of our hymns which emphasizes the thought I am trying to express, namely, that the asking for spiritual blessings is the highest reach of prayer. After all, it is the spiritual life which is eternal.

"Now we can readily see that having reached this height in prayer our next thought would be to wish to share our blessings with others and to be of some service. But in our zeal and enthusiasm to do for those less fortunate than ourselves are we not apt to forget what we owe to those in our own sphere of life and particularly those of our own order. Are we always kind and courteous? In our judgment of others do we always try to understand the motive which prompted the action? Are we ready at all times to give of our love and sympathy? Do we live so that those around us will feel that there is a power in our lives which makes us want to be of service and which forgives and forgets any injury that is done us? Why do we take the cross as the emblem of our order? Why do we not take the fish which is also a symbol of Christianity and is carved on the walls of the Catacombs in Rome? Because the way of the cross is the way of sacrifice and service. As the Rev. Gordon B. Watt says, 'The cross is the mold through which our Lord passes all who represent Him here and who are to reign with Him after.' We cannot die on account of sin to make atonement for it as He did; we can die to our sinful nature and every time we die to the sins which so easily best us we are pouring ourselves into the mold of the cross and giving the Holy Spirit an opportunity to imprint upon our characters the image of Christ."

SURVEY SHOWS BIG BUILDING DEFICIT

Notwithstanding the extraordinary construction activity of the last five years a thorough investigation by the American Bond and Mortgage company of building and rental conditions throughout the United States and Canada revealed that, in addition to the new building necessary for normal increased requirements, there is still a building deficit to be made up in many cities and towns, especially those with a population of 100,000 and under.

More than 2,000 realtors and building authorities in 458 leading cities and towns collaborated in this annual survey, which summarized the national building and rental situation as follows:

1. Danger of overproduction has been over-emphasized and there are few cities where the saturation point has been reached to an extent that would jeopardize community prosperity.

2. Slight slackening may be necessary in some localities for a brief period until the temporary surplus of structures is absorbed by growth and population, but there is no excuse for a blanket restriction or financing new construction.

3. Building activity can continue at a high rate for some time to come before the national housing deficit is completely made up.

4. Old established and reputable real estate mortgage bond houses are fully cognizant of the situation and are discouraging building where overproduction is apparent.

5. Cities of 100,000 population or under in practically all sections of the country can absorb a considerable volume of residential and business types of structures, but a majority of the larger cities are fairly well caught up with their building requirements.

6. Rents, on the average for the country as a whole, are slightly lower than a year ago.

7. Few cities have an abnormal number of vacancies and no further important downward movement is expected.

8. Residential rents are well stabilized, but business rents are showing a pronounced upward tendency in many cities.

9. Supply of first mortgage money is fully ample for conservative investment, but practically no money is available for the speculative type of building.

10. Second mortgage funds are scarce throughout the country, with the cost very high.

BIG ACTIVITY SHOWN IN BROOKWOOD HILLS

Mid-spring activity in Brookwood Hills, prosperous north side subdivision, was revealed with the announcement of sales during the past two weeks aggregating $93,000 and residential construction under way representing a valuation of $169,500, as made by Lawrence Burdett, of the Burdett Realty company, owners and developers of Brookwood Hills.

Home sales in other sections totaling $39,750 brought the gross amount of residential property sold through the Burdett office in a period of 14 days up to $132,750. These transactions, significant of the sustained revival in the real estate market, offer a particular insight into the Brookwood Hills undertaking. With the first unit occupied by home owners of the foremost class in a section characterized as one of Atlanta's show pieces, and the second unit fast nearing completion on the same high plane of the original plan, Brookwood Hills from a purely real estate venture has proven a success in keeping with its well known architectural development. The sales of the past week, aggregating more than those of any previous week are cited by Mr. Burdett as a sign of the subdivision unchecked growth.

The Brookwood Hills sales of the past two weeks consist of a two-story brick home at 24 Camden road, sold to H. F. Hoyt for $17,500; two-story brick home at 49 Brighton road, sold to Mrs. Carrol Latimer for $22,500; two-story brick residence at 110 Brighton road sold to Herman Evins for $16,500; vacant lot on Brighton road, sold to ". M. Armistead for $5,000; two lots on Brighton road, sold to H. W. Nicholes for immediate improvement with homes for Mrs. Burckhardt and Mr. Johnson, valued at $31,500.

In the residential construction work now under way in Brookwood Hills are nine homes being built for occupancy by the lot owners and representing a valuation of $169,500.

Among the miscellaneous homes sold through the Burdett office during the past two weeks are 29 Glennwood drive, sold to R. P. Kite for $8,500; 68 Park lane, sold to C. G. Snyder for $8,500; 115 Terrace, sold to T. J. Allen for $5,500; 945 Virginia circle, sold to Mr. Farris for $8,750, and 694 Cooledge avenue, sold to P. H. Hall for $8,500.

REALTORS TO MAKE WIDE SURVEY FOR YEARS 1922-1927

The real estate sales committee of the Atlanta Real Estate board, which is composed of the sales managers of the 45 firm members, is planning to make an extensive survey covering the real estate brokerage business in Atlanta from the year 1922 up to date.

Questionnaires dealing with all phases of the business have been sent to firm members, requesting that they give the information asked and return to the office of the board at the earliest possible date so that a general report can be drawn.

Dana Belser, president, urges all firm members to give this information covering their business for the last four years, and asserts that it will be treated with the utmost confidence by the office of the board and will be used only in drawing a general report for the committee's consideration.

Real estate sales play a large part in the average real estate office in Atlanta, and it is felt that if information pertaining to the present market and definite data regarding the brokerage business over the last four years can be secured that some constructive ideas can be received that will allow members of the board to anticipate the future real estate business in the coming 12 months.

It is the desire of the committee to have this survey completed to be issued about June 15. Firm members of the board who have not sent in their questionnaires are urged to do so at once. S. P. Cronheim is chairman of the sales committee.

Austell Building Sale Features Week Of Heightened Real Estate Activity

South view of Austell building at Forsyth street viaduct, which figured as the central parcel in a series of real estate deals last week involving property worth nearly $2,000,000 in the aggregate and disclosing an unusually active market. The office building, valued at approximately $1,000,000, was bought from B. S. Miller, of Columbus, Ga., by M. L. Thrower, the fourth owner in a period of five months.

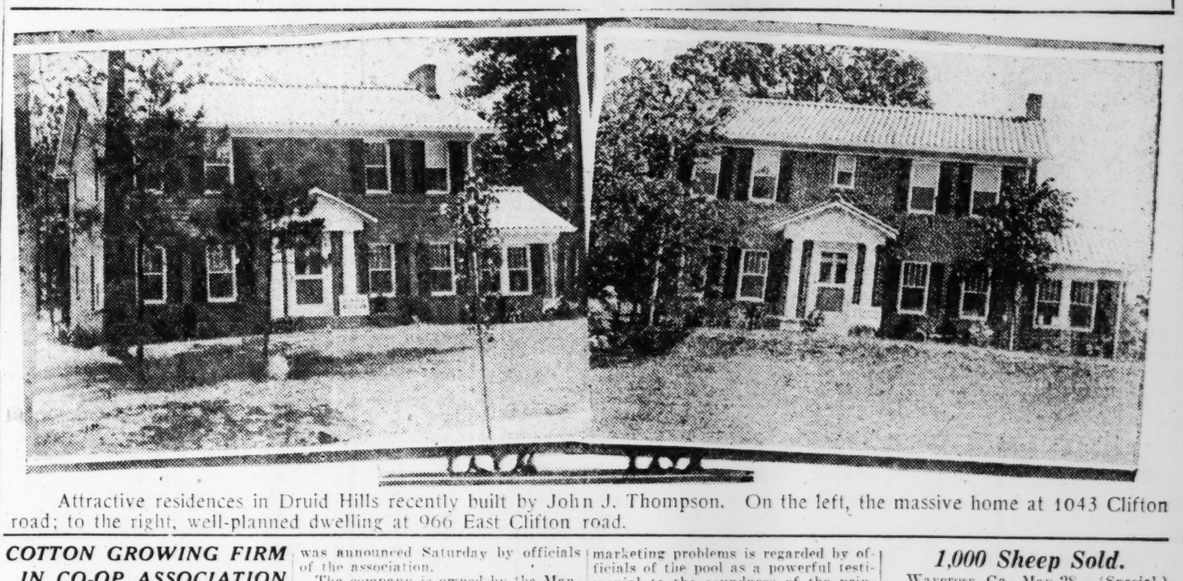

Bearing evidence of Atlanta's rapidly increasing real estate market several large sales in commercial investment property involving more than $1,850,000 were announced near the end of the week.

Foremost in the heightened activity of the recent transactions is the purchase of the Austell building by M. L. Thrower, disclosed with recording of the deed Friday. The site measures 113.2 feet north on Forsyth street from the viaduct. It has a ground appraisal value understood to be $400,000 and is improved with a nine-story building valued at approximately $600,000, bringing the total worth of the property up in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Other parcels included in the flurry of property transactions are the southwest corner of Pryor street and Trinity avenue, measuring 100 by 200 feet and valued at $300,000 with its three-story structural improvements. It is one of the pieces given by Mr. Thrower in exchange for the Austell building. The two-story warehouse structure at 550 Glenn street was sold by E. R. Craighead and R. J. Hudson to the Atlanta Postal Building corporation of St. Louis for $170,200, according to announcement Saturday. It is leased by the Western Union company and returns an annual rental of $17,000. Harry G. Poole bought the building at West Peachtree and Linden streets, occupied by the Studebaker corporation, for $167,500. The lot has a frontage of 100 feet on West Peachtree and is 200 feet deep. Other deals include a $100,000 parcel at the corner of Marietta and Thurmond streets sold to J. P. Matthews; $100,000 farm property in Alpharetta, Ga., sold to Mrs. Marion B. Little, of Atlanta, and J. P. Brooks, of Alpharetta; a 100-foot piece of property at 261 West Peachtree street sold for $800 per front foot, the four-story building at 11-17 Trinity avenue, worth $100,000, and with two smaller parcels on South Forsyth street and Garnett street, representing part of the property exchanged for the Austell office building.

Record activity for a single piece of property is revealed with the latest sale of the Austell structure, Mr. Thrower being the fourth successive owner to possess the property during a period of five months. He purchased it from B. S. Miller, of Columbus, Ga., who bought it from Weyman and Connors, purchasers of the building from the original owner, W. F. Winecoff.

COTTON GROWING FIRM IN CO-OP ASSOCIATION

Officials of the Carroll Land company, which cultivates more than 2,000 acres and normally produces 1,200 bales of cotton a year, have signed a membership contract and will market all its cotton through the Georgia Cotton Growers' Cooperative association during the next seven years, it was announced Saturday by officials of the association.

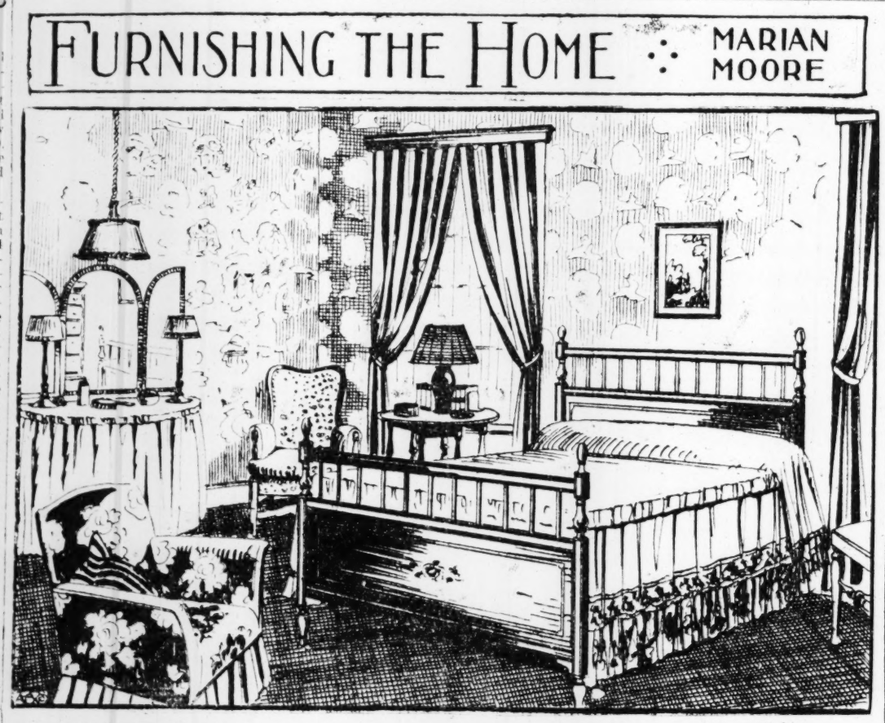

The company is owned by the Mandeville cotton mill interests and other leaders in the business life of Carroll county who are experienced in the cotton industry. The fact that the company has abandoned the plan of guessing as to when to sell and has turned to the association to solve its marketing problems is regarded by officials of the pool as a powerful testimonial to the soundness of the principles of cooperative marketing and of the management of the association.

1,000 Sheep Sold.

Waycross, Ga., May 28.—(Special.) One thousand head of sheep owned by O. M. Prescott and J. C. Littlefield, of Charlton county, have been sold at $4 the head, this being after the sheep had been sheared. The sheep were sold to Hundley & Mills.

FURNISHING THE HOME :: MARIAN MOORE

GARDEN HILLS SALE TO RESULT IN MANY HOMES

The recent auction sale at Garden Hills which has just been concluded will result in the erection of a number of very substantial homes, both in the Peachtree section and in the country club section, according to the statement of P. C. McDuffie, president of the Garden Hills corporation.

The auction at the property brought a large number of people, many of whom were seeking a suitable site for a home. In many instances the purchasers have already signified their intention of building. In addition to approximately 15 sites which were sold at auction Saturday, three Garden Hills houses, erected by well known Atlanta contractors, were sold. It is understood that the average prices of the houses sold at the auction were $13,200. In commenting on the auction Mr. McDuffie stated that it will have a tendency to attract home-seekers and investors to the property, and will result in considerable increased activities. Improvements, including water, paving and sewerage, are being extended to every portion of the property.

WORK STARTS ON POOL ON EMORY CAMPUS

Emory University, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Contract for the new Emory university swimming pool has been let to Charles C. Case, Atlanta contractor. Work has been begun and the pool is scheduled to be finished within 60 days.

The pool is being constructed 90 feet by 30. City water will be used, but chlorinators and filters are being installed. The water will be purified every 17 hours, it is announced.

During the summer of this year the pool will not be inclosed except for the bath houses. But during the winter it will be inclosed and steam from the university plant will keep it heated. The water will also be heated during the winter months, thus enabling year-round swimming.

WHITTEN AND OTIS ADDRESS REALTORS

R. R. Otis and J. H. Whitten, prominent figures in Atlanta real estate circles, will be the principal speakers at the weekly luncheon of the Atlanta Real Estate board, at 12:30 o'clock Thursday, June 2, in Vaughan's tea room, according to announcement Saturday by Dana Belser, president.

Mr. Otis will talk on "Industrial Values in Atlanta," while Mr. Whitten will discuss the present rental situation. Both speakers are experts in the chosen subjects and will confine their talks to 10 minutes each.

Ward Wight, who arranges the programs for the weekly luncheons, states that he is highly pleased with the attendance at these meetings and that the last luncheon, at which W. P. Walthall and Hunter Perry addressed the membership, was one of the most successful meetings held.

At the regular May meeting of officers and directors of the Real Estate board, held Friday, at the Atlanta Athletic club, two new members were admitted, C. C. Torrence, with the Adair Realty and Loan company, was the successful applicant for associate membership, and Georgia Bond and Mortgage company as an affiliated member.

OLD "SEVENTEENTH" PLANNING REUNION

Former officers and enlisted men of the old Seventeenth United States infantry regiment are planning a general reunion from June 30 to July 2 at Canton, Ohio.

Extensive preparations are under way to make the reunion a success, and letters are being mailed to all parts of the country in an effort to have every man who ever served with the "Seventeenth" on hand when the meeting opens.

Seventeen former veterans with this regiment were brought together in an organization at Portsmouth, Ohio, during 1922, and the enrollment has since increased to a membership of 1,600, it was stated.

Men who were enlisted in the "Seventeenth" and those having knowledge of others who likewise served are asked to communicate with F. J. Pickard, at 1220 Homedale avenue, N. W., Canton, Ohio, who as president of the veterans' organization promises to mail full particulars to all who may be interested.

National Appraisal Contest To Feature Real Estate Meeting

Official appraisal committees of real estate boards have come to pride themselves on the fact that appraisal experts from half a dozen cities judging a downtown office building even in a city not their own are able to agree upon its valuation with variations of only a few hundred dollars on a million dollar structure. Now these appraisal committees are to take part in a national appraisal contest, to be held in Seattle, Wash., August 12.

The contest will be staged at the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Seattle August 10 to 13, and will be a part of the main convention program. Shifting of the contest, hitherto a feature of the annual meeting of the association, to its general convention program, marks the growing extent to which scientific real estate appraisal is receiving emphasis. Georgia realtors through the Georgia Real Estate association are planning to attend the coming Seattle meeting in a body so as to advertise the state by the way.

Reed announced. EXECUTIVES
READ THIS—

WE KNOW a man who will be a valuable addition to the staff of some progressive firm and who will bring to the new connection he seeks, these qualifications:

FOUR years experience with a nationally known industrial firm in charge of advertising, catalogs and sales promotion work, all of which brought him in close touch with every phase of his firm's activities.

HE NOW holds the above position in New York city but is anxious to move to Atlanta. He is a southerner, 31 years of age, has a charming wife and two children.

PRIOR to his present connection he was employed in a major capacity by a coal mining and brokerage concern in Tennessee, and at one time he was a specialty salesman for a large food product corporation for whom he traveled throughout the south.

HIS ENTIRE foundation is firmly built and we believe he will be a valuable addition to our city and to the firm that employs him. He will be in Atlanta during the week of June 6. For further details write

A HABITUAL RENTER are both in the "same box" in one respect at least—one spends all he makes for Booze, the other spends all he makes for Rent, both on the downward road and will die poor. The good woman who happens to be the wife of either is in a "helluva fix," but let's talk about something interesting. The most interesting subject we know of for a "Red-Blooded Renter" is "HOPKINS BUNGALOWS." It has taken years of study of material, of labor, of construction and of expert designing to develop the personality, the atmosphere of distinction and the up-to-the-minute smartness of our bungalows. We have lifted "HOPKINS BUNGALOWS" out of the commonplace and given them a touch of salesmaking personality that you cannot resist. Our bungalows are the creation of our OWN MINDS, we CREATE, we do not copy—that is one of the secrets of our success. Just a glance at a "HOPKINS BUNGALOW" readily reveals the good taste and common sense back of their construction. We build for comfort and convenience, but we never lose sight of economy. We think we can save you from One to Three Thousand Dollars on your home. Look at 416 Glen Iris Drive, $7,250, and 574 Wabash avenue (just around the corner), $5,500; 1718 So. Gordon, West End Park, $8,000; others get as high as Ten Thousand Dollars for bungalows that are no better and some not as good. Reasonable payments. These houses will be open Sunday P. M.

'Cave Spring,' Another Georgia Resort Offered City Tired Motorist

Come on in, the water's fine. Really, we didn't have to Ford this, but just wanted to see how deep it was. We found this little stream running across the road right outside of Cave Spring.

We came back by Rome, which route can be called without the least bit of hesitancy one of the prettiest drives in our beautiful state.

Cave Spring Objective Of Sunday Auto Journey

BY H. M. VAN DENEDDER, Automobile Editor.

One of the most interesting towns in all Georgia is Cave Spring, and this was the objective of last Sunday's motor trip in the regular series of tours conducted by The Coustitution.

The route led from Atlanta to Cedartown—which trip has been previously described on this page—and from Cedartown to Cave Spring, which lies midway between Cedartown and Rome.

The famous spring at Cave Spring was widely known among the southern Indians long before the white man set foot on American soil, and it is believed that they used it as a health resort and a place for the foregathering of tribes and tribal members for unnumbered years.

The spring is located in an enormous cave that slopes gently into the earth for a distance of 250 feet. At this distance one's eyes have become accustomed to the darkness and one comes upon the great spring, which gushes 9,000 gallons of water a minute in its subterranean vault.

The water is icy cold, and analysis ha shown that it is pure and beneficial for drinking purposes, containing many medicinal minerals.

The grounds about the spring are ideal for picnics and outings of all kinds and there are excellent hotel accommodations for those who wish to remain several days at the popular spot.

The town of Cave Spring is old and shaded and beautiful. It is the home of the state's college for the deaf, which is set in an attractive campus and which in itself is a show place.

From Cave Spring the road leads to Rome and from thence to Cartersville, Marietta and Atlanta.

We made the trip in one of the new Ford Tudor sedans and after putting this sturdy little car through several gruelling tests we are willing to agree with those who assert tha tthe 1927 Fords are the best cars that Ford has ever built.

In riding quality and comfort, the new Ford rivals much bigger and more expensive automobiles, and we were keelly impressed with the plainly apparent economy of its operation.

Both car and journey were of the most pleasant type, the party taking the tour voting it one of the best of the present series of logging cruises by motor to towns and cities within one-day-reach of Atlanta.

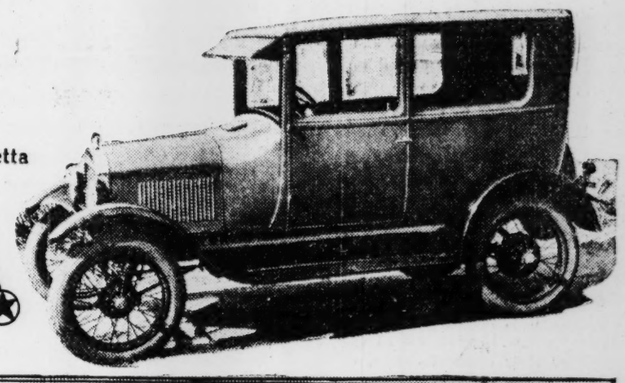

Try it some time!

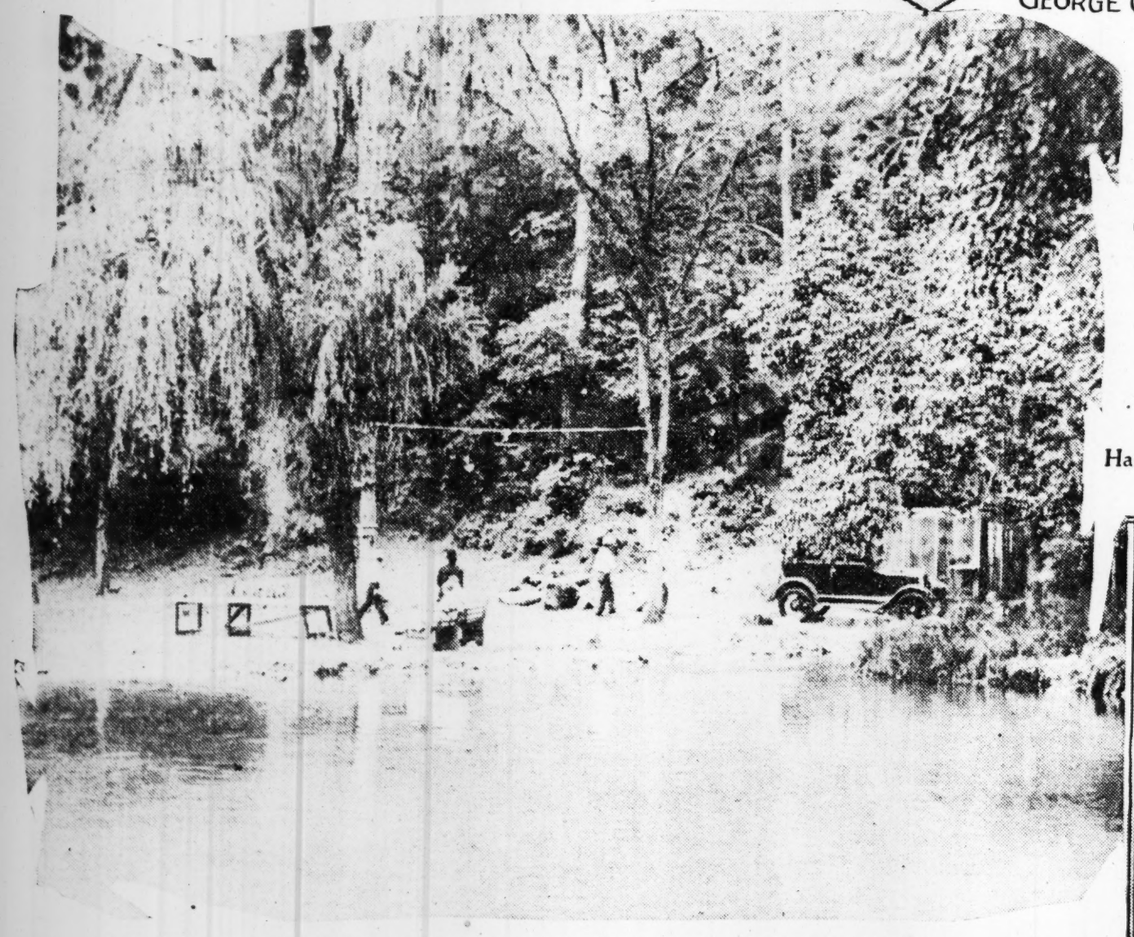

There are many places where you can get Constitution motologs. Some of them may be more convenient than our bureau. Glance through the list below and visit one of them. They will supply you with the correct folder, whether you make a purchase or not. Reed's filling stations all have them.

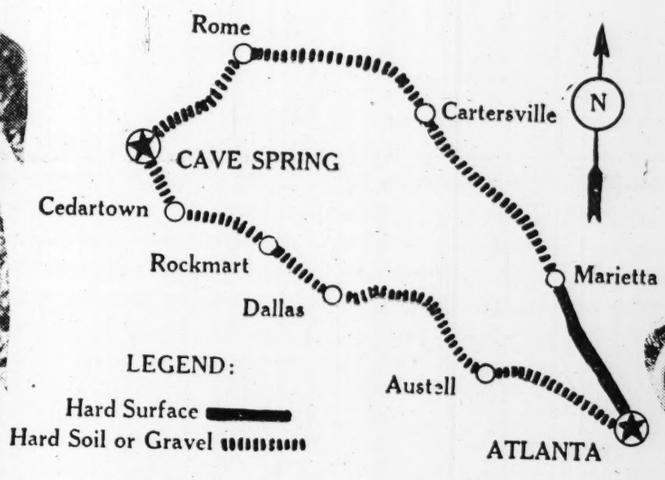

Constitution motorlogs and maps may be had in Atlanta at any of the following places:

Ansley hotel, Aragon hotel, J. B. Anchors Auto company, Battery Sales company, Buick Motor company, Candler Building garage, Cannon Motor company, Dobbs Tire company (three stores), Franklin Motor Car company, Georgian Terrace, Golden Eagle company, Hampton hotel, Henry Grady hotel, Ivy Street garage, Layfield's garage, Lee Tire service, Marion hotel, Nichols' Garage Service station, Piedmont hotel, Prior Tire company, Reed Oil company (22 stations), Southern Auto & Equipment company, Southern Bearing company, Stewart-Warner Products Service station, John Smith company (two stores), United Motor Service, Winecoff hotel, Yarbrough Mentzer company, York's Recreation parlor.

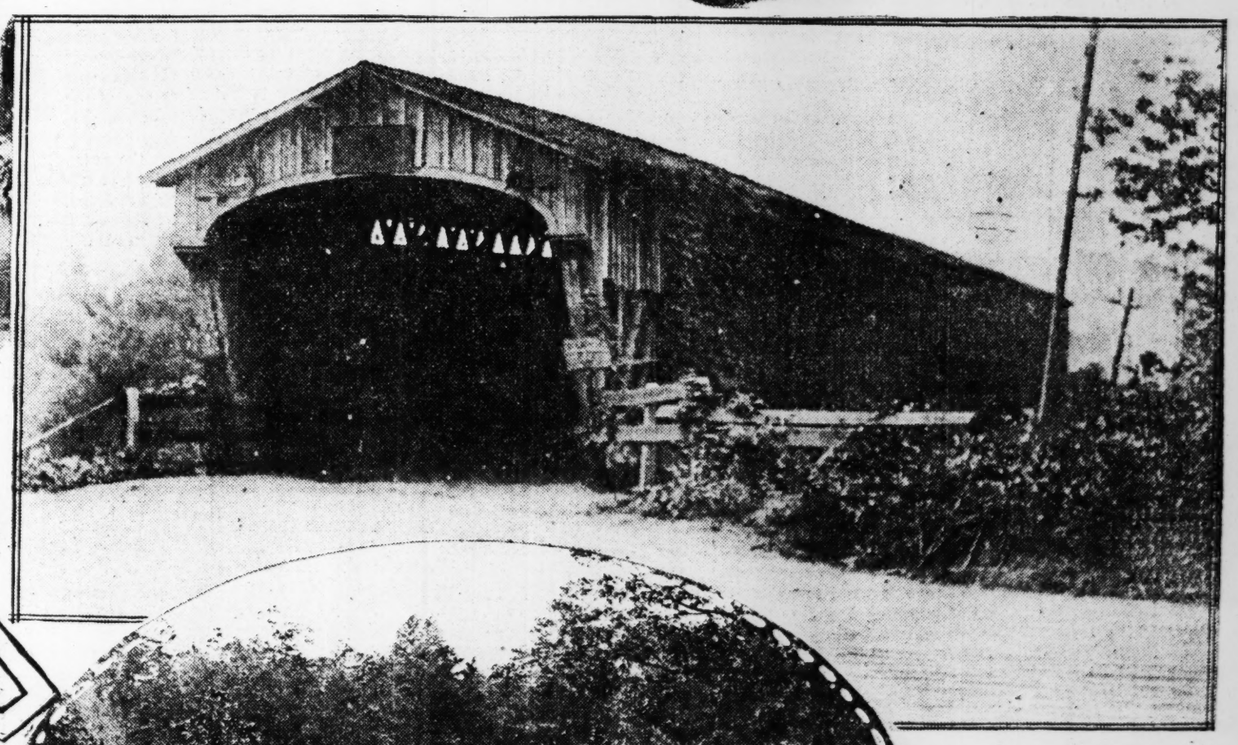

We used a new Ford tudor sedan for our check-up of the roads and give our photographer a lift. It afforded a most enjoyable trip.

Spacious picnic grounds in front of the entrance to Cave Spring. It could rightfully be called one of the wonders of the world. Three hundred feet under the ground here is a clear as a crystal spring that gushes over 9,000 gallons of water a minute.

A beautiful stream we found just outside of Cedartown, on the way to Cave Spirng. Excellent bridges have been provided motorists who travel this route.

Top—Perhaps the only covered wagon bridge left. We found it just this side of Cartersville. It will be used by motorists until the new road is opened. Bottom—Over the little mountain between Dallas and Rockmart. A new and excellent road has just been completed over this scenic hill.

CRIME HERE AND ABROAD.

Speaking before the national crime commission in Chicago Thursday, Dr. Louis Robinson, who for several years was probation officer for the Philadelphia municipal courts, and formerly a professor of economics at Swathmore college, told of a survey he had made of penal institutions in Europe, from which he said the United States might take a valuable lesson.

Declaring that European institutions are more efficiently managed, and that their staffs are chosen for their knowledge of crime correction rather than for political reasons, he stressed the fact that pardon and parole powers, frequently misused in this country, are invoked in European countries only after exhaustive studies of the cases.

The fact is, there is a great deal less crime in Europe, based upon population, than in the United States, and this applies to all countries. It is most strikingly illustrated in England.

The outstanding reason is that criminal laws in European countries do not permit of the loopholes for evasion—or of the technicalities which may be employed by shrewd attorneys for cheating justice.

In this country there are so many criminals who entirely escape punishment, or who are, shortly after conviction, turned loose by the abuses of the parole and pardon powers, that many of the criminals no doubt feel they actually have licenses to commit crimes.

Chief Justice Taft recently spoke of the failure of criminal law administration in this country and made the bold assertion, which is unanswerable, that an element of lawyer legislators deliberately make laws for the benefit of criminals. That is to say, for the selfish purpose of permitting lawyers to win cases for their criminal clients, or to enable such clients, who should be convicted, to escape the actual penalties.

The person who commits a crime in England, of whatever degree, is immediately apprehended and punished according to law. And there is no time lost in the process. Therefore, crime is greatly reduced by not only the certainty but the swiftness of meting punishment to the one guilty of crime, it matters not what position such a criminal may hold in business or in society.

This country, as Dr. Robinson demonstrated, can not only learn a valuable lesson from the conduct of the European penal institutions and from the European administration of paroles and pardons, but from the European criminal laws, which are framed for the protection of society and not for the purpose of delays and of permitting criminals to finally escape punishment.

SAVE PIEDMONT FOREST.

It is to be regretted that the proposal to convert the northern end of Piedmont park into an extended golf course has been revived. The same suggestion made about a year ago brought forth such a storm of protests from Atlanta citizens and organizations that the plan was abandoned.

The chief objection to the plan is that it would necessitate the clearing of the fine body of woodland in that section of the park and would otherwise impair the usefulness of Piedmont park as a recreation center.

The present nine-hole golf course at Piedmont adequately serves the purpose of all amateur golfers and those persons who have only a few hours to devote to the game, maybe before or after office hours. A golf course is practically useless for any other recreational uses and the present golf course at Piedmont already takes up much space that was originally intended for all recreational purposes and to encroach further on the park's land for golfing purposes would be to virtually turn most of the park into a course for that sport.

Atlanta needs a municipal 18-hole golf course, but it is doubted if Piedmont park should be used for that purpose. This city owes much of its healthful properties to its forests that surround the city and to mutilate the beautiful woodlands and drives in Piedmont would be nothing short of desecration.

It is hoped the present Piedmont suggestion will be abandoned. Ample grounds can be found for a municipal 18-hole course elsewhere. Fact is such a course is one of the proposed features for the memorial park which will be situated on Peachtree creek incorporating the present disposal plant site, and other lands generously donated for the purpose.

THE HARDMANS.

"A close up of the Hardmans" might be a good title for a most entertaining feature story in today's Constitution written by Paul Stevenson, of The Constitution staff, after a day spent in the home and on the farm of the governor-elect.

Mr. Stevenson tells as much about the remarkable wife and children of Dr. Hardman as he does about Georgia's next chief executive. He even relates how the much older man met the much younger woman at a Baptist convention in Valdosta, the parental home of the incoming "first lady of the state," and how love triumphed, despite the differences in their ages. He tells of the splendid group of children that have blessed the union—the very manly Lamartine, Jr., 18 years of age and serious, and the cultured Miss Josephine, 16, and Miss Sue Colquitt, 14, and then of the baby, who at seven is one of the crowning glories of a happy family that believes in God, in the ideals of the Christian home, in books, in the great open spaces of nature, in service.

The readers of The Constitution will be gripped by this story for the good reason that in every feature of the life of Dr. Hardman—as a young physician, as a builder, as the amasser of great businesses, as the leader in school and civic activities, as the neighbor—there is an appealing human touch. Starting humbly, and acquiring through thrift and honest dealings and enterprise and conservative progressiveness, the great Hardman fortune represents an earnest application of tested and invincible rules in attaining success.

Perhaps the human touch is felt most, however, in building a happy home, from which the latchstring hangs on the outside—a home of love, of contentment, of hospitality, of Chritsian manhood and womanhood.

To know intimately the next governor of Georgia, and the next mistress of the mansion, read Mr. Stevenson's story, and get the cameos indelibly in mind.

VALUE OF STATE PARKS.

Georgia, through the generosity of Mr. Vogel, the owner of extensive mountain areas, has established a state park on the top of the Blue Ridge, at Neel's Gap. The park area will undoubtedly be largely increased in the future.

Most of the states are becoming interested in state parks, and it is well.

The importance of state parks or forests in the diversified and ever growing recreational and conservational resources of the United States, and the degree of recognition of the value of such preserves in their relation to national and municipal undertakings, which has been immensely enhanced in the past few years, were emphatically shown at the Seventh National Conference on State Parks, held at Bear Mountain Inn, headquarters of the Harriman State park, in the Highlands of the Hudson, New York, the largest division of the Palisades Interstate park, May 17 to 20.

Recognition of the sociological value of state parks and forests, in providing readily accessible opportunities for recreation, intermediate between municipal and national preserves, was given, with the most striking emphasis, by Governor Smith, of New York, who has been immensely effective in his own state in supporting the greatest state park program in the country. Governor Smith declared that the people of New York were thoroughly "sold" on the state park idea; that they want wise expenditures on their parks, and are entirely satisfied to bear the burden of careful development of their parks and parkways.

Park developers were greeted "as the greatest public servants in America today" by Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, who welcomed the delegates at the opening session. "The physician and the hospital," he said, "care for our ills, but the makers of great parks like this prevent them, and promote health and happiness by bringing people out of the cities into the sunshine and the fields and forests.

"New York believes that the best way to prevent crime is to bring the people, young and old, out of the congested cities into the open. It is in the front of all the states in its program of expenditures for parks and in its area of state parks and forests. And across the Hudson one may see the greatest and costliest county park system in the country, in Westchester, upon which more than $40,000,000 has been appropriated. Such achievements throughout the country are doing more for public welfare than any other agency."

Thousands of Georgians on June 2 will journey to Georgia's state park, at Neel's Gap, to be the guests of a number of north Georgia counties. At that time will be celebrated the fifth anniversary of The Constitution-government mountain expedition that inaugurated the great road program in that section.

PROTECT THE CHILDREN.

Thousands of children are being weekly turned out of schools for the summer vacations. Whether in the city or country they will seek adventure. It is the child nature, accentuated by the unleashing of school's restraint. This is a speed-mad world, with pitfalls to which children will necessarily be exposed.

Each year in the United States 20,000 children are killed in accidents. Traffic accidents claim almost half this number.

With fine summer weather, and the call of the open spaces, the hazards of streets and highways are greatly increased. Inexperienced drivers experiment with new cars. Carelessness and recklessness are the inevitable companions of the holiday crowd.

The problem is squarely up to parents. Children should not be restrained from the fullness of vacation enjoyment, but they should be restrained from either inviting accident or deliberately moving in the path of accident. They should not be turned loose with the family car to drive. No child should be allowed to operate an automobile. Traffic congestion is confusing and a child has not the judgment nor the mechanical experience to negotiate a high-powered car in a jam.

Caution should be exercised as to bathing and swimming in pools and streams. The loss of life from this cause each summer is appalling.

The foundation for meeting the accident problem should begin in the home. Children should be taught to be safety-minded and to avoid hazards.

TO CELEBRATE ON MOUNTAIN.

News dispatches from Blairsville, Ga., and Murphy, N. C., tell of the extensive preparations being made for a great celebration on June 2 of the fifth anniversary of The Constitution-government expedition into the northeast Georgia mountains.

This event will be held at Neel's gap, on the top of the Georgia Blue Ridge, in Union county. Neel's gap is the mountain divide on the Appalachian highway, which great mountain road—a marvelous feat of engineering—was one of the outstanding results of The Constitution tour. It is expected that thousands of people will be present, weather permitting. The fact is, the road is macadamized entirely across the mountain, and there are no hazards even in rainy weather.

We are fully appreciative of the efforts of our friends in the mountains to make this a truly great anniversary occasion. If our expedition in 1922 and the constant urge for good mountain roads since have been resourceful we rejoice.

There are no more beautiful mountains in eastern America than in Georgia—no more inviting spots for health, recreation, rest.

There are no better people to be found anywhere. And they are making marvelous progress — a progress they richly deserve.

There will probably be a great number of Atlantans to attend this novel anniversary celebration, to which all are invited.

It is said that the barbecue dinner will be amply supplemented with basket dinners.

There will also be music, full police and traffic forces, and all preparations for the entertainment and enjoyment of everyone.

The people of the mountains have invincible spirits to do things wholeheartedly and right.

TO STUDY GEORGIA HISTORY.

The Georgia Historical society, of which Major William W. Gordon, of Savannah, is president, is offering this year a prize of $250 for the best article on some subject in Georgia history.

The work must be based on original research and properly documented. The length of the treatise should not be over 5,000 words.

According to the rules submitted only one manuscript may be entered by an individual, and must not have been previously published.

All manuscripts must be typewritten on one side of the paper only.

The article is not to be signed; but the real name of the author must accompany the manuscript and must be enclosed in a separate envelope on which must be written the name of the historical article.

The competition is open to anyone without restriction.

The society reserves the right to publish in its magazine any article submitted.

Each manuscript must be sent to Charles F. Groves, secretary of the Georgia Historical society, Savannah, Georgia, not later than January 1, 1928.

The award will be announced in the March number of the Georgia Historical Quarterly.

This prize ought to serve two good purposes—

First, produce some highly entertaining articles on different phases of Georgia history, which, compiled together, will form an interesting series of historical chapters.

Second, it should cause a general study of Georgia history which is so much needed to broaden our knowledge of our own state, and its evolution from the early days of trustee control to the present day of highly developed statehood.

THE JUNE 2 CELEBRATION.

Extensive preparations are being made in northeast Georgia for a celebration of the fifth anniversary of The Constitution-Government expedition of 1922 into the mountains of that section. On Wednesday, evening, June 1, the Nacoochee-Hiawassee Road and Recreation association will hold its annual meeting at Murphy, N. C., just a few miles across the state line from Blairsville. Following the meeting there will be a banquet tendered by the progressive citizens of that city. On June 2 the anniversary celebration will occur.

This latter event will be held at Neel's Gap, on the top of the Georgia Blue Ridge, in Union county.

Neel's Gap is the mountain divide on the Appalachian highway, which great mountain road—a marvelous feat of engineering—was one of the outstanding results of The Constitution tour. It is expected that thousands of people will be present, weather permitting. The fact is, the road is macadamized entirely across the mountain, and there are no hazards even in rainy weather.

We are fully appreciative of the efforts of our friends in the mountains to make this a truly great anniversary occasion. If our expedition in 1922 and the constant urge for good mountain roads since have been fruitful we rejoice.

There are no more beautiful mountains in eastern America than in Georgia—no more inviting spots for health, recreation, rest.

There are no better people to be found anywhere. And they are making marvelous progress — a progress they richly deserve.

There will probably be a great number of Atlantans to attend this novel anniversary celebration, to which all are invited.

It is said that the barbecue dinner will be amply supplemented with basket dinners.

There will also be music, full police and traffic forces, and all preparations for the entertainment and enjoyment of everyone.

The people of the mountains have invincible wills to do things wholeheartedly and right.

ROSTAND'S POEM.

The verses of Maurice Rostand, the famous French poet, written on the flying field near Paris when Captain Lindbergh arrived—verses of cordial, heartfelt welcome—will go down in history as one of the highly finished poems of the generation.

To the French people the poem, typically Latin in tone, is more musical than in its English translation, but even in English its rhyme and meter are of a high order of merit, and ring with a gripping appeal worthy of its inspiration.

Maurice Rostand is half an American. His father, the late Edmond Rostand, married Rosamonde Girard, of Philadelphia. Edmond Rostand was a man of great literary attainments, and became famous as the author of "Chanticleer." The son inherited the literary genius of the father and the outstanding intellectual ability of the mother, hence his own ability as a poet came naturally enough.

In his welcome to Lindbergh he had more than a mere Parisian's interest. He had fought for France, and his knightly spirit was quickened to expression in—

Ce qui t'a conduit predestine
A travers ce risque ou chacun succombe;
C'est le rendezvous qu'ils t'avaient donne
Sur leurs jeunes tombes.

It is not difficult to see in this the inspiration of Seeger's "I have a rendezvous with Death." One great production invariably inspires another. We learn as we live and as we apply the worthwhile thoughts of others in our own works.

The United States is operating 22,000,000 automobiles and manufacturing them at the rate of 300,000 to 400,000 a month. We might ask, also, what becomes of all the pins?

Just as the prohibition advocates claim that they were making headway, tourists from the orient arrived in Frisco with specimens of two-headed snakes, which will have a tendency to demand a double portion of whisky for emergency sake.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Third Term Issue As It Has Figured in Our National History.

It is very evident now that the "third terms" issue is to play a conspicuous role in the preliminaries even of the presidential contest of 1928. The efforts of the Coolidge partisans to "laugh it off" are not getting much applause except from their own ranks. Leading politicians and independent newspapers insist upon pushing the question into the open and discussing its historic, personal and expediency angles. And the president, upon whom the issue pivots, maintans his puzzling mumness on the subject.

The disposition to agitate the issue is by no means confined to the democrats who yearn to have Coolidge on the outside looking in. There is a formidable contingent of republican leaders who are hopeful that the question of the propriety, expediency or whatever else it may be called, of the president's renomination, will be raised in an acute way. They have various reasons for their wish. Some want to be listed as eligible for the nominatins in 1928, but realize they have no chance of successful consideration if the president is going to be again a willing Barkis. Others are honestly opposed to a third term for any president at any time, and consider that another term for Coolidge would be a third term in fact. Others simply say that the people generally are not yet educated to a willingness to scrap the precedents by Washington, Jefferson and Madison.

Silence of the Constitution.

The federal constitution contains no provision that limits the number of times a person may be elected to the office of president or vice president. The record is that in the federal convention, while the constitution was being framed, various proposals were made respecting the tenure of the office, varying from a term of three years to one of "good behavior." Twice the convention adopted a seven-year term with restriction upon eligibility for reelection, but the committee of eleven, one from each state, finally fixed the term at four years uyears to one of "good behavior." and imposed no restriction as to re-election, and that compromise was accepted by both those advocating a limited one-term provision and those desiring a life tenure. Which explains why the constitution is silent on the matter of presidential reelections.

But when the constitution went before the states for consideration the question of the eligibility of the executive was raised in two of the conventions and they ratified the constitution with the understanding that amendments of it that they advised would be considered by the congress when it should be organized.

The Virginia convention submitted 20 amendment proposals, the thirteenth of which was that no person should be capable of being president for more than eight years in any term of 16 years.

It is said that Washington approved that suggestion by the Virginia convention and that it was a controlling reason for his firm resolution not to accept a third term.

The North Carolina convention proposed the same amendment as Virginia had, but with the limit of "no more than eight years in a term of fifteen years."

* * * *

The Third Term Tabu.

It was the twentieth of the thirty-two proposed amendments that were adopted in the New York convention that declared for "no third term" for any president.

Since the einstitution became effective over one hundred and fifty amendments to change the term of president and fix the period of eligibility and tenure have been presented in congress and none of them submitted to the states.

Most of the amendments, fifty-odd of them, fixed the term at six years with no right of reelection. They were argued for as needed to prevent the president from using the patronage of his office, as most of them do, to secure a renomination and possible re-election.

The first person to present such an amendment and argument was Congressman Hemphill, of Pennsylvania, in 1826. His proposal was for one term of six years. On the same day Congressman Weems, of Maryland, proposed an amendment that a president should not be eligible for reelection until after six years from the expiration of his first incumbency.

Numerous amendments have been proposed to limit a president to two terms; and others to make him ineligible to a reelection until after the expiration of a certain number of years; and to restrict a president to one term only.

On January 20, 1823, Senator Dickerson, of New Jersey, introduced an amendment to limit any president to two consecutive terms, and on January 8 of the next year, 1824, Senator Benton, of Missouri, from the select committee, presented a favorable report; and the senate adopted the resolution by a vote of 36 to 3.

* * * *

Early Views Were Anti-Third Term.

Again in 1825 Senator Dickerson's anti-third-term amendment passed in the senate by a vote of 32 to 7, a change of four votes from yea to nay from the vote of the previous year. Senator Benton was one of those voting in the negative, but later he sided with President Jackson and favored a one term only proposition.

The "one-term-only" proposal did not appear in congress again until after the war between the states and then was provoked by the desire of Senators Ben Wade and Sumner to prevent the possibility of President Johnson being nominated and elected to succeed himself.

On February 20, 1866, Senator Wade proposed an amendment that read:

"The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during a term of four years, and shall not again be eligible to that office during the term of his natural life.

"In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice president, who shall not again be eligible to the office of president of the United States during the term of his natural life."

In presenting his proposition Senator Wade said:

"Early in the history of our government, Washington himself, who was exceedingly sagacious respecting its workings, informed the people that in his opinion here was a weakness that ought to be remedied. He saw it early. He saw that a man entrusted with these almost regal powers during the period that he was president, might be tempted to use them for his own advancement afterward. Almost all the presidents who have come after him have in some way felt, and honestly felt, that some such check was needed upon the ambition of man."

* * * *

Sumner for One Term Only.

That eminent republican, Charles Sumner, also strongly opposed a second term, much less a third term, for any president. When in 1871 President Grant sent to congress a message favoring certain civil service legislation, Sumner presented an amendment of the constitution providing for one term only for the president. In offering it he said:

"Sir, that is the initial point of civil service reform; that is the first stage in the great reform, the scheme of the president is the play of Hamlet without Hamlet. I propose by the amendment that I offer to see that Hamlet is brought back into the play."

It is worth while to recall here what Senator Dickerson had said in 1824 with respect to a third term. It was this:

"The illustrious example of Washington, Jefferson and Madison of retiring to the walks of private life, after filling for eight years the most important office within the gift of the people, has acquired in some degree the force of law; and this is strengthened by all the weight of public opinion. But neither illustrious example, nor public opinion, can restrain ambition when combined with power. They are not law, but may point out most distinctly what the law should be. And they do, in the most impression manner, admonish us while the danger is yet remote to adopt the proposed amendment as a permanent part of our constitution."

Those sentiments were embodied in the House resolution of 1876 that was adopted by a vote of 234 to 18 and stopped Grant's third term boom.

* * * *

What Is in the Wind.

Should President Coolidge allow himself to be renominated that event will provoke one of the intensest political debates the nation has ever known. It will, doubtless, lead to the presentation of an amendment such as that offered by Senator Dickerson, over a century ago, to render a third term unlwaful.

President John Quincy Adams was opposed to the third term idea. In his address at the celebration of the "Jubilee of the Constitution," in New York city, in 1839, he said:

"The example of Washington, of retiring from the presidency after a double term of four years, was followed by Mr. Jefferson, against the urgent solicitations of several state legislatures. This second example of voluntary self-chastened ambition, by the decided approbation of public opinion, has been held obligatory upon their successors, and has become a tacit subsidiary constitutional law."

On the foundation of that statement of a Massachusetts president the present president from Massachusetts could well take a patriotic stand and obtain a surer and higher place in history than by violating that "tacit subsidiary constitutional law" that no man should occupy the seat of Washington longer than did the "Father of his country" himself!

And, some day the sphinx will speak.

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

The Abundant Life

We often hear the phrase "not living, but only existing." It expresses the truth that life may be full and rich or empty and impoverished. We sometimes say that there seems to be so little in life for certain people. The mistake we may make is in thinking that the fullness of a man's life depends on his surroundings. The dissatisfied man wants to go somewhere else and change his environment. The poor man wants to surround himself with wealth. Another man longs for a different social circle.

This is the popular idea about heaven. We hope to get rid of the disagreeable earthly things and go to a place where we will be surrounded by everything we want. By this conception we miss the secret of living. One's life does not depend upon his surroundings. Of course the surroundings can greatly add to or substract from the richness of life. Primarily, one's life depends upon himself, not upon what he has or where he lives, but what he is.

Power to Appropriate.

When we think about it, a man's surroundings may be ideal and yet his life may not be any better for his environment. From one point of view, life depends upon one's ability to appreciate and appropriate the things which surround him. We have only to think of a man with no appetite at a sumptuous banquet, a deaf man at a concert, a blind man in an art gallery, or an illiterate man in a library. Of course the exaggeration is made for the sake of illustrating the principle.

We may carry it still further. A man may have an ear as sensitive as a wild animal, and yet no ear for music. He may have an eye as keen as a savage, and yet no appreciation of a picture or a sunset. He may have the learning of a Bacon, and yet no love of truth. His manners may be as exquisite as a Chesterfield, and yet he may have no appreciation of courtesy, grace or virtue. Many men move day after day among their fellowmen without any appreciation or love of humanity.

The Christian religion proceeds upon the assumption that every man is capable of a larger and better life. Christ came into the world for the purpose of arousing and developing those latent and sleeping capacities. The idea is not to take a man from earth and carry him to a place called heaven. The purpose is not to change a man's residence but to change the man himself.

Life a Growth.

Every man feels within himself a capacity for better things. What we call a sense of sin is a consciousness of having missed a mark which he might have reached. The after-taste of many passions and deeds are like the bodily indigestions caused by food unfitted for the stomach. There comes also with this sense of failure a longing for a better life. The feeling may be vague and indefinite but it is the unerring finger pointing upward. It seems at times like a voice saying "You are capable of better things."

This is the most tremendous truth that can be spoken about a man. One is capable of living a larger and better life. But this better life is not a robe which one may throw around him. It is a seed which is to be planted in him, which is to grow and put forth leaves and bear fruit. We so often forget this method of growth when talking about religion. We are constantly looking for the harvest when it is only the seed time. Yet, all about us this slowly developing method of life is a daily phenomenon.

When we watch baby we find that his first expression of life is all in terms of physical sensations. He wants food and warmth. Then the mind begins to unfold. Life begins to expand. The world does not grow larger, it is the baby which grows larger. Nothing is added to the world for him but much is developed in him with which to appreciate and appropriate the world. No new capacity is added but only the sleeping capacities are awakened. Thus, life becomes richer and more abundant as we ourselves enlarge the horizon of our knowledge, broaden the circle of our sympathies and interests, lift the level of our aspirations and ambitions and multiply our capacity for love. Jesus once said, "I came that they may have life and have it abundantly." That is just the significance of His coming into any life.

Across the stormy main:
You will not, through Ages hence,
Take such a ride again.
Be seated, do not tremble, Death,
This is a bonny plane."

They soared and sailed above the storm.
Beneath it and amid;
The stars looked down in wondement
At the wild things they did;
The Ocean leapt excitedly
At Valor's matchless bid.

Death rose, rebellious at the Man
Who would not halt nor quail.
"You make my sway ridiculous
As laughingly you sail."
What scorn! I will not ride with one
Who dares his soul to fail!"

Lindbergh the Magnificent.

Out through the mist of a trackless dawn,
In the silence he slipped away:
Out through the curtains of night, close drawn
O'er the birth of a restless day—
Into the pit of a sombre night
Alone, alone on his world-wide flight.

Poised on the rim of the open sea
That, swept by the winds of Chance,
Seemed like the gates of Eternity:
Allies of Circumstance—
Poised like an eagle for lands far-flung.
A Hero. His laurels as yet unsung.

Youth! with the touch of Nordic strain
Come down thro' the ages past;
Proved on ocean and battle plain,
At the oar and the quivering mast—
Youth! with the courage that fires the blood.
Be it a Bismark or a Robinhood.

As true as needle to Northern Pole,
He flew in the face of Death:
No fear or faltering touched his soul.
No qualms or quick'ning breath—
His soul on fire for his Country's weal.
His thews like hickory, his nerves like steel.

Out thro' the mist of a trackless dawn,
Silent, he forged his way
Into the glory that lay beyond;
All the homage a world can pay—
Yesterday only a boy, unknown,
Today a hero on a world-wide throne.

The Gift of Courage.

Because in thot you are an eagle
Power was given you to fly
Above beyond the grassy lowlands
Close to the jagged cliffs, a-near the sky.

Because the pinions of your lofty vision
Are so mighty, swift and strong,
You cannot rest them where the small birds nest
Nor pause to mark their morning song.

Because you bore the gift of dauntless courage
To be delivered to a doubting race
You dared the ethers unchampioned
To meet your unseen pilot face to face.

The star of faith your guide unerring,
Lighting a trail thro stormy skies,
Kindling a hope within the silent hours
Of dreams come true, with dawning and sunrise.

'Tis not because the shouting populace
Claim you conqueror, claim you great
Your true humility has won you
Right to wear this crown of fate.

What you have done has lifted mortals
Nearer to where the planets sing
Your gift of courage floats above us—
A feather from a soaring eagle's wing.

—ANNE WALKER DOUGHTY.

God Gave Me Wings.

(Dedicated to Charles A. Lindbergh.)

God gave me wings, this blessed day and night,
That I might fly—through space to you and say:
Beho'd! I have been sent to lead the way.
With messages of grief, from every hight,
Your gallant dead, champions in my flight.
Are with us here, in spirit. Let us this day
Join hands, across the sea in prayer, and say:
One Love—One Heart—One GOD!
This Blessed night.

THE SPIRIT OF AMERICA.

Out to sea, for 200 miles, the great lights of Paris cut a path through the inky dark. The best that France could give was in those lights, so that an American airman, pioneering untraced paths, might find his way.

A speck found the light, winging toward a goal, all alone.

So France found Lindbergh.

Applause deafened, died, and arose again,—and—

Lindbergh was rediscovered.

Astonishment for the magnitude of his carefully calculated, and perfectly executed feat was drowned in the discovery of "a real American."

Witness: (In borrowed pants.)

Letters of introduction from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, lest he be unknown.

Innate courtesy in the visit to the mother of Nungesser.

"The welcome of France is enough. I am more than rewarded by your reception. Give the money for my cup to your air widows."

"I am not an actor, I am a flier. I'm not after money, but I hope I have helped the cause of overseas air transportation along."

The "Flying Fool" dared nothing, neither death nor his God, as some would seek to suggest. What higher opportunity than his, than, with all humility, to discover whether God has given sufficient light, and mechanical ability, to bring human communion closer, in the name of the Master, so that His peace may reign, and that His millenium shall come?

The test of time will show how grateful the nation should be that her air ambassador was not of the self-seeking type.

Pity is that Congressman Lindbergh, of Minnesota, did not live to witness the triumph of his son. Glory is to the mother that bore him—not so much for his great feat, as for the revelation he has given France, and Britain, and the world at large of the honest, clean spirit of America.

Where do you find the taint of Shylock in:

"I am grateful madame has given me the opportunity to make this gift, which I could not have made myself."

Captain Lindbergh, at 25, alone, without a mentor in a strange land, with letters of introductions lest he be unknown, has written across the pages of Europe, the clean spirit of America in a way that does not fail of accurate interpretation.

Century-old barriers of intrigue and cabal have fallen before his smile. His naivete has moved mountains that years of official correspondence could not budge.

Although a child when the world war broke, he has told Europe convincingly what our heroes of the Argonne could not. His instinctive word is vivid and alive, where the keen bayonet stroke and bomb blast failed. He is our best ambassador.

Many American fathers have sons like Slim Lindbergh. American boys live their own lives to a great extent. The breed is strong. The balance of Americanism is not any more Lindbergh's than that of any other American boy. Lindbergh is typical.

His mental gyroscope holds him as true in social contacts as it did in his epoch-making air flight—true as a compass to the tenets of his little school teacher mother in Detroit.

American boys are just like that.

—J. A. HAZLE.

Coli and Nungesser.

Death on the battlefield, death in the plane,
Death victorious—death not in vain.
Death on the cross, death for mankind;
Death not inglorious, death martyrkind.

Life through dying, for you, for me;
Life worth giving, forever free.
Life worth living, if death this be;
Life, yes life Eternal to Thee.

—RACHAEL PEEPLES ROGERS.

The Artist of the Skies.

Art is the symbol of the soul
Expressed in some noble way.
Whether it be in poetry,
In painting or in sculptured clay.

In its beauty it must show
The perfect spirit of the art,
Knowledge mixed with perfect skill
That stirs the emotions of the heart.

Lindbergh flying in the night
Landing safe as daylight dies,
By the beauty of his flight
Becomes the Artist of the Skies.

The World's Tiniest Republic

"Somewhere between the deep Siberian forests and the vast Mongolian desert," the Russian government is reported to have created the world's tiniest republic—Tannu-Tuva.

"Tannu-Tuva lies in the valley just north of the Tannu mountains, and southwest of Irkutsk, where the Uriankhai (or forest dwellers) have long roamed in splendid isolation, seldom seen by anyone except a few traders and agents of the Russian government," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The Uriankhai resemble the round-faced, slant-eyed Mongolians to the south and east of them, but lack the aggressiveness of their oriental neighbors. Hidden away in their valley domain, they eke out a lazy day-to-day existence with their deer herds. The animals are tame and require little attention. As a result, the Uriankhai spends most of his time lounging about his tepee. Often as many as 600 deer will be seen around a tribal camp of 20 to 30 tepees. They graze all day and at nightfall not only return to the camp, but to the tepee of their individual owners. Only the offspring has to be given special care and the women do that.

"Deer milk, deer meat, and tender roots are the principal foods of the Uriankhai and for clothing they wear deer skins. When they go hunting, they use the deer for transportation and the fleet-footed animal is even 'charged' with responsibility for Uriankhai intoxicating liquors. Spirits are crudely distilled from fermented deer milk.

"When the women are not busy with the herd, they dress hides. With the aid of deer milk and a wooden comb they work the skins until they become as soft and fine as if tanned by modern methods. The tepees are usually full of skins ready to be made into clothing, and other skins for mats, harness, and for trading.

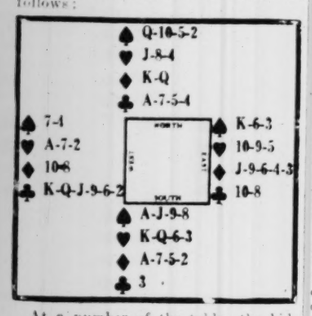

"Modern 'flappers' would envy the Uriankhai winter dress, when the tribesmen and women are entirely clothed in furs. Sable, lynx and roe deer cover the Uriankhai's body while their boots are usually of roe deer or musk deer. The cone-shaped hats of the natives are made of black astrakhan turned inside out and covered with colored cloth. A leather belt from which hang a Russian knife and a Chinese pipe, complete the Uriankhai outfit. The young girls dress like the men, but the married women wear longer and looser garments. In the summer they don loose-fitting garments of blue cloth acquired from Chinese traders.

"Perhaps few nomad tribes move as little as the Uriankhai. Only twice a year they roll up the bark tepee covers and seek new camping grounds. Their wanderings are at the convenience of their reindeer herds. In the summer the valley forests become too hot, so the tribesmen seek higher ground."

Milton C. Work's Pointer On How To Play Bridge

(Milton C. Work, the international bridge authority, will answer your auction bridge questions. A stamped self-addressed envelope must accompany each request for replies.)

In this series of articles I have been describing "Misplayed Hands I Have Met" and will continue that series today, but with the slight variation of making it a "Misbid Hand I Have Met." This hand, like most of its predecessors, appeared in a Duplicate game, and I was much interested in noting the outcome of the various tables. The cards were distributed as follows:

At a number of the tables the bidding was: South (Dealer), one No Trump; which was followed by three passes. At these tables the King of Clubs was the opening lead, and at all but one the adversaries won five Club tricks and the Ace of Hearts, holding the Declarer to one-odd. At one table, with the above bidding, the Declarer—with the adverse Clubs established—did not take the Spade finesse the hoping against long odds that he could drop a singleton King; so in that case the adversaries, in addition to five Clubs and one Heart, made a Spade and defeated the contract.

At several tables the Dealer bid one No Trump and, after a pass by West, North bid two No Trumps to shut out a possible bid from East and, as a result of this sound bid, the declaration was defeated. At one or two tables West overcalled the No Trump with two Clubs (a most foolish bid), and what happened then depended upon North's bid. In the cases in which North bid two No Trumps the contract was defeated; in the cases in which North bid two Spades the Declarer made a Small Slam.

At only two or three tables was the hand bid properly, and at only one table was it both bid and played properly. Before you read the description of the proper bidding and play that follows, I urge you to look the hand over and make up your mind how you think it should have been bid and played. After that, read what follows; but be sure to determine in your own mind what should be done before you read the explanation. You will find this method of reaching a determination first and then reading the explanation of the correct procedure, to be the most interesting and the most educational way in which to examine Auction Bridge hands.

How the Hand Should Have Been Bid and Played.

South should have bid one Spade not one No Trump. A No Trump should not be bid with a hand that contains a worthless singleton (unless you are playing with a partner who is non-dependable). The worthless singleton is a serious No Trump menace. Bid a suit in preference. Major or Minor, five-card or four-card. If your partner bid your singleton suit, fly to the No Trump; if the adversaries bid it, double and show your partner that you possess two other suits in addition to the one that you already have named.

In this case, with one Spade bid by South, overcalled with two Clubs by West, and the Spade raised by North, South should make a Small Slam—quite a difference from one-odd or a defeated contract. Playing at Spades, the King of Clubs would be led and won in the Dummy. The Spade finesse would then be tried and, when it won, the rest of the play would be easy.

Now for a concluding word in regard to the bidding of No Trumps with a hand containing a worthless singleton. I appreciate that it is a practice quite generally indulged in, and that in some hands it produces a better result than a suit-bid; but the number of hands in which the suit-bid works more successfully is much greater than the number in which the No Trump produces the better result. If you held any such wonderful picture gallery as an Ace-King-Queen-Jack of three suits, with a worthless singleton in the fourth, and you bid a No Trump, it would be quite probable that the adversaries—in spite of your immense strength—would save the game by running the singleton suit. They might even defeat a one-bid in spite of the superlative strength of your holding; so that no matter how strong the hand may be, a No Trump is unwise when the danger signal of a worthless singleton confronts the bidder. It is hard to understand, in these enlightened days with the results of extended experience so self-evident, how anyone can favor bidding No Trump with a hand that contains the singleton menace; but because there are many who still do it, I put out this earnest warning against a practice which in the long run must result disastrously.

Wagner Players Seek Relaxation To Break Strain of Long Rehearsals

Members of the cast of Charles L. Wagner's Production company, now rounding out a 10 weeks' engagement at the Erlanger theater, have enjoyed their work in nearly all the productions thus far presented, but they are convinced that this week's offering, "39 East," is going to be one of the high marks of their local season. The two stars who head the cast, Miss Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer, are enthusiastic over this play, which gave Mr. Blackmer one of his first big roles in New York and the entire company has worked with unusual vim to give a perfect performance of "39 East" this week.

As a comedy the Rachel Crothers creation is bright and breezy, and as a mystery play it is filled with many creepy thrills and astounding situations. There's action in the show from the very first moment until the final curtain, and the company members believe it will score one of the biggest hits of the series.

Mr. Blackmer appeared in "39 East" in the same company with Tallulah Bankhead, the Alabama girl, who began her stage career in this show. Miss Bankhead is a daughter of Congressman William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, and since she appeared in "39 East" has played leading roles in many companies. She is now appearing in London.

Miss Kennedy will have a great role, but different from the types she has been handling. Strong parts are provided also for other capable people who are in Mr. Wagner's strong company.

The company also is hard at work on the new production, "Andrew Takes a Wife," which will be staged here for the first time in any city. In bringing his company here Mr. Wagner promised one entirely new production. If the new show scores as big a hit in Atlanta as those who have read it believe, it will be used as a vehicle for Miss Kennedy and Mr. Blackmer on their next tour.

The last comedy to be presented here during the present engagement will be "On Approval," a brilliant satire by Frederick Lonsdale, author of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," which was one of the big successes scored several weeks ago by the Wagner players.

Health and Diet Advice

THE CHEMISTRY OF THE COLON.

After the food has been digested by the stomach and intestines, it passes into the large intestine which is called the colon. This is a long muscular tube whose walls are made up of two sets of muscles which have the power to squeeze along the feces, carrying it all the way from the cecum through the entire five feet of colon to the rectum.

It usually takes about fifteen hours after a meal is eaten before any of the food material reaches the colon, and about twenty-four hours before it is completely filled. It then takes from six to twelve hours before this is emptied from the colon into the rectum. Of course, certain amounts of this feces are often held back in pockets and do not empty out until carried along by other food material. Some food, which is especially constipating, will stay in the colon for many days, while softer foces passes by and is eliminated.

When the digested and undigested food material enters the colon from the small intestine it should be in an alkaline condition. No assimilation takes place in the colon, but there is a kind of digestion which goes on as the bacteria of the colon continues to further decompose the foces. The colonic bacteria can only work in an acid medium and so the foces is again changed from its alkaline condition to an acid one. The colon is literally swarming with billions of acid bacteria which act chemically upon the undigested food material and further change it so that it can be more easily eliminated.

Oo not confuse these bacteria with the ones found in different diseases. If you could see them under the microscope you would see that they are simply vegetable growths which multiply by division, that is, they divide again and again, the same as yeast mold.

A great deal of experimentation has been going on lately in an effort to find some way for making the contents of the colon normally acid. It has been found that those who suffer from constipation the most do not have a large enough growth of this bacterial flora. Lactic acid milk has been tried, but the results have not been entirely satisfactory, and I do not expect any better results from such treatment than we have had from the giving of hydrochloric acid for defective digestion.

A good course of daily enemas will do more to clean up the colon than anything I know of. At the same time, if the proper physical culture exercises are taken, a better tone will be developed through the entire abdomen and this effect is soon noticed in a better chemical condition in the colon.

At the same time as a better muscular tone of the large intestine is developed you must also remember to use the proper kind of food, and especially good food combinations in order to change the chemical condition of the feces before it reaches the colon.

Question.—E. A. G. writes: "Can one get cedar poisoning from drinking rainwater from a roof covered with cedar shingles? Do you consider rainwater safe for drinking if well strained, and stored in a clean cemented cistern?"

Answer.—If rain water is properly collected and purified, it makes a very desirable drinking water. I have never heard of any one being poisoned by it, except from the water drained from a freshly painted roof.

Question—Mrs. Jane K. asks: "Could you, through the paper, tell me if gall-stones could be overcome without an operation? Some claim they can, others say not, and I would like to know."

Answer — Unquestionably, thousands of people have cured themselves of gall-stones by taking a fasting and diet treatment. In many cases the gall bladder is so completely filled with these stones that practically all functioning has stopped. In a few cases it is necessary to remove the entire gall bladder in order to save the patient's life.

Question—K. M. F. writes: "Would you be good enough to advise if I would be able to follow the fruit diet in order to reduce? I am troubled with hyperacidity, and was advised to give up all acid fruits and vegetables, as I had ulcers of the stomach."

Answer—Hyperacidity can be very quickly cured if you will take a fruit fast and live on the right diet afterwards. This same treatment will allow your body to throw off any excess weight, and you will be benefitted in every way.

MANY MEETINGS HERE NEXT MONTH

The Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau announces several important gatherings and conventions for the coming month. May has just ended with an average of one convention a day for every week day of the month. These conventions lasted for from one day to eight. Monday the fifth district letter carriers will hold their convention.

Notable among the conventions for June are:

The Interstate Oil Mill Superintendents. This will include an exhibition which will be held at the auditorium June 6-11. W. H. Camp, a local member, anticipates an attendance of over 250.

The Georgia Aerie of Egles will convene June 6 and 7 at their rooms at 34 1-2 Peachtree street. This meeting will be attended by approximately 100 delegates from all over the state. A. W. Kline, of Atlanta, is treasurer for the state organization.

On June 14-22 the young people's conference of the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia will hold its eighth annual convention at Agnes Scott college, in Decatur. J. B. Ficklin, of Decatur, is in charge. About 500 young people are expected.

The International Association of Circulation Managers, with the three Atlanta newspapers as hosts, will be entertained here on June 21-28. About 500 representatives will be present, many coming from foreign countries.

On June 18-19 the Georgia Lone Scout union will encamp near the end of the West View car line on Hightower road.

Boyd Senter, Okay Record Maker, Here This Week at Howard

Boy Senter, one of the featured artists in Frank Cambria's Publix presentation, "Opera vs. Jazz," at the Howard theater this week, is considered by many to be the greatest saxophone player in the world. And if there is any doubt of his musical versatility it should be dispelled by the fact that he can play 33 different musical instruments—of course not at the same time. Cable Piano company and Barnes, Inc., are offering a complete selection of the Famous Senter Okay records.

Senter uses what is said to be the largest saxophone in the world. Because of its length he has christened it the Gir-af-a-sax. It differs from the ordinary saxophone in that it has no curve at the end. Senter hails from Omaha, and first attracted attention in Chicago when he played twelve consecutive weeks at the Chicago theater. Later he appeared with Paul Ash. He has since played in most of the leading cities of the country.

Alamo No. 2.

"Sandy," the story of a flapper bride, which has been running serially in more than 100 newspapers, has been converted into a motion picture by Fox Films and will be shown Wednesday and Thursday at the Alamo No. 2 theater.

"Sandy" was written by Elenore Meherin, who also wrote "Chickie," which was filmed last season. While "Chickie" registered a success both as a newspaper serial and as a picture, it is said that "Sandy" has far outdistanced "Chickie" in popular appeal as a story that it presents greater motion picture possibilities.

Fox Films made a careful search for an actress to bring to the screen the vivid personality of Sandy McNeil, the beautiful young girl of 19, who is the heroine of the story. Madge Bellamy was finally selected. Sandy is the modern young woman aquiver with the love of life and impatient with hampering rules of conduct.

Fairfax.

Lon Chaney, the wonder man of the screen, opens the week's program at East Point Monday in "Flesh and Blood," a really different picture from an out-of-the-ordinary story. A picture of a man's fight with himself; of a human derelict, of man's inhumanity to man. On Wednesday Harry Langdon breezes in on his trans-continental hike "Tramp-Tramp-Tramp."

Thursday another of James Oliver Curwood's stories will be shown when House Peters will be featured in "Prisoners of the Storm." The dramatic story of a strong man in the grip of circumstances he couldn't control. Thrilling action coupled with a remarkably human story of the life and love in the snows of the lonely north country marks "Wild Justice," the closing feature for the week at the Fairfax Saturday.

Felix the Cat is pictured as the annoyed cat who is unable to evade the wailing notes of a saxaphone in "Felix the Cat in Sax Appeal," the latest release in this series for Educational.

Tenth Street.

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, the greatest pair of lovers on the screen, furnish romance Monday in "The Night of Love." The love story is the paramount theme of the picture and romantic love has never been better portrayed—nor has the hot blood of Spain ever pulsed more passionately than in many scenes between Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Wednesday, Rudolph Valentino appears at Tenth street in "Conquering Power," supported by Alice Terry.

A soul-stirring picture story of an American soldier and a German maid that will hold spectators as by a magic spell, will be Thursday and Friday's offering. Presenting William Boyd and Jetta Goudal in a wonder photoplay on a dramatic background of war. Rin-Tin-Tin in "The Clash of the Wolves" will be shown Saturday at Tenth street.

West End.

Lillian Gish in Nathaniel Hawthorne's famous classic, "The Scarlet Letter," will serve as the opening feature Monday. The story features Lillian Gish in the tragic role of a Puritan woman who bears a brand of shame through life to shield her lover. Here's a real screen masterpiece of amazing power and beauty. Wednesday presents Rex Beach's "Winds of Chance," a thrilling tale of stirring deeds in the land of the everlasting snows.

"Beyond the Rocks," one of Rudolph Valentino's pictures, will be shown Thursday and Friday at West End. Gloria Swanson plays opposite the world's most romantic lover in this picturesque drama of domestic differences. Saturday offers the sort of dashing hero that every fan loves—man, women and child—that's Strongheart, the wonder dog of the screen.

Palace.

Monday, "Stella Dallas," featuring Belle Bennett, presents a tremendously big romantic drama as new as tomorrow, as old as time, and as sympathetic as a mother's caress. Stella Dallas couldn't guide her own heart, but she will rule yours in the story of her love life that will stir the senses with its human throb. Wednesday brings back an idol of the screen when Mae Murray is featured in "Valencia."

"Wolf's Clothing," featuring Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, will serve as the Thursday and Friday offering of this week's program. Harry Carey, with a well-oiled gun and two hard fists, cleans up the vice and sin in "the wickedest city in the world," which is known as "Satan Town," his latest Pathe picture.

Glen Cavender, often seen as a sheriff or policeman in comedies made at the Educational studios, plays the role of hard-boiled football coach in "The Draw-Back," the Tuxedo comedy featuring Johnny Arthur.

Ponce de Leon.

This week's cinema offering at the Ponce de Leon theater is exceptional from many angles. To begin with, on Friday the first episode of "The Mystery Plot" is played by a cast of stellar movie actors and actresses. In addition on Friday another picture will be shown featuring Jack Hoxie in "Hidden Loot." On Monday and Tuesday the program includes Gloria Swanson and Rudolph Valentino in one of Elinor Glyn's greatest story successes, "Beyond the Rocks." Never were two popular stars more ably matched than the glorious Gloria and the handsome Valeatino.

Another modern novel that has scored a tremendous hit will appear on the program at the Ponce de Leon this week in picture form. "The Plastic Age." In addition to the interest which the picture will inspire from the title of the popular novel is the fact that the vivacious Clara Bow, the screen's "perfect flapper," will take the leading role. Douglas MacLean in "Hold That Lion" will be seen in the picture scheduled to be shown on Saturday.

Tudor.

Speed, action and fun, are the highlights of the program set for this week at the Tudor. Art Acord starts the week off with a breezy, fast moving western story, which starts in a scrap and winds up with one. Acord appears in the picture, "Loco Luck," as a cowboy who leaves the home range because the girl he loved was apparently rich and he was poor, and who returns to find he was wrong. George O'Hara, who a few years ago jumped into prominence through his athletic ability, while appearing in a series of H. C. Witwer pictures, plays in "Going the Limit" at the Tudor on Wednesday and Thursday.

Bob Custer winds up the week with a masterful characterization in "The Dude Cowboy," the story of a fighting man who masqueraded as a dude and valet until the time came to throw off his disguise.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

Barnum, Wis.

What is the nature, function and purpose of suffering?

I ask because I have a dear one who is likely to exaggerate it.

Suffering arises either from bodily pain, mental distress or sorrow over the affliction of others. Bodily pain is abnormal, a warning signal, and indicates the derangement of one's physical system. Similarly, mental distress involves abnormal situations in life which seemingly should not exist, death itself being the capital example.

These explanations do not cover the whole case, since in many instances, especially those relating to the the animal world, few ways exist for the relief of suffering, while that of innocent children has in it tragical elements which often baffle believing hearts.

If man could control the issue probably he would abolish the suffering which has caused many sympathetic and intelligent minds to reject the idea of a benevolent Deity. Yet were suffering ended the sorrow caused by the constant removal of beloved ones would still remain.

The problem is exceedingly severe and those who do not appreciate its severity will never help solve it. Yet some relief may be obtained by considering the fact that suffering fosters sympathy, tenderness and sacrificial service. The greatest moral influence in the world is exercised by its supreme sufferer. Pain and bereavement have turned multitudes from a self-centered to an unselfish way of life, making them altruistic in word and deed.

One of the noblest achievements of the human soul is so to use circumstances which conspire to crush it as to make them stepping-stones to higher things.

Those who are inclined to exaggerate the prevalance of suffering should read a recent book on "The Mystery of Painlessness," by Dr. Frank Ballard.

Garden City, L. I.

When and by whom was "Yankee Doodle" written and what was the occasion or the cause for its composition? How does it compare with "Dixie" as a national air?

Dr. Harry Rowe Shelley declares that this air has a history as mysterious as that of the Mikados of Japan. The first Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam were so fond of the name Jancke that they gave it the diminutive Jan, pronounced with a hard J as in Johnson. The soft J came in with many other changes when the English took possession of the place. Under their usage Jancke became Yahnkee, a title of reproach applied to New York's inhabitants other than the Dutch.

Doodle, twin brother of Noodle, was intended to mark more strongly than before the contempt of the doughty Dutch for their invaders. But Yahnkee-Doodle with the "h" omitted ultimately achieved reputation by the sheer resolution of citizens who could not boast of their Dutch blood.

Many nations have tried to father the tune, the very essence of which is Celtic. Apart from any other argument the intrinsic evidence points to its Irish origin. In 1775 the air began to arouse enthusiasm in the Colonies. Its vigorous swing stirred the blood of the incipient revolution.

Such reasons may or may not appeal to others who are sincere and devoted Christians, and who in this respect must determine their course for themselves. But why single out baseball? What about the more exclusive golf, tennis and other sports which could be named? One does not have to be a Sabbatharian on this disputed issue to perceive that the Lord's Day dedication to spiritual culture may prove the wisest policy for all concerned.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Do you think a Christian can attend a baseball game on the Lord's day and feel that he is doing the proper thing?

I am not the judge of another man's conscience. To it and to its God he must stand or fall for himself. All I can say, therefore, is that I could not attend a baseball game on the Lord's day and maintain my self-respect as a professing Christian. Far be it from me, however, to assert that an personal experience should be elevated to the dignity of a law binding on fellow believers. My reasons for feeling as I do are satisfactory to me. They relate to my vocation, my influence upon the community, and my conception of the day's origin, its purposes and the best methods for its observance.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

TOO MUCH SMOKE.

Recently when theatrical salacity adventured far enough over the line to arouse protest from even the jaded public of New York, the theatrical merchants themselves proposed to censor the stuff they offer for sale. Nobody laughed at this proposal, at least not out loud. Then the New York people denied that they get what they want from the theatrical merchants. They insisted it is the book transient class, the buyers from Hickville and Greenburg, who demand the smutty stuff that fills New York theaters. The visitors to New York not being well organized have never resented this slur or explained that they really prefer clean, uplifting drama such as Ivy's Mangy Rouge.

It takes something really extraordinary to shock me. I mean things clients, readers, correspondents, patients tell me. I was jolted a good deal by a letter I received recently from a high school girl who has adopted a philsophy and a code based on the suggestions and plot of one of the present or recent psychopathic plays that panders to the degeneracy of the playgoing public. I wonder if the people who patronize and even uphold these frank presentations on stage or screen consider the effect of such education on the children who absorb it so eagerly?

The smoke nuisance is similar in many respects to the smut of the stage. In many urban communities leagues and ordinances for the suppression or rather the abatement of the smoke nuisance exist, but as a rule industries or individuals responsible for most of the smoke horror are leading spirits in these leagues or the authors of ordinances, and so the "movement" becomes a mild form of agitation, something like praying for rain.

A private school, conducted for profit but not taxed, under a quant principle of law, maintains a very offensive smoke nuisance in a fine residential section. The power plant is served with soft coal, the smoke-stack is equipped with smoke consuming equipment which the manufacturers declare should and will prevent all black smoke if the stoker attends properly to his fire. The stoker, however, seldom attends properly to his fire, for the stack belches almost an endless pall of black smoke upon the neighborhood, creating much business for painters, decorators, laundrymen and the like. However, it is private residents of the neighborhood, whom the school people regularly canvass for donations, that suffer from the nuisance.

The Soot's the Thing.

What is soot? Analysis of smoke in a large city showed that it consists of about 40 parts of carbon, 39 parts of mineral matter (chiefly silica and iron oxide), eight parts of hydrocarbons, three or four parts of sulphuric acid, one part of hydrochloric (muriatic) acid, one part of ammonia and one part of organic bases such as pyridin. Of course the composition of this soot varies with the character of fuel which produces the smoke, but this is a fair average analysis. Then the smoke contains gases, both carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide, but these are relatively unimportant, though occasionally persons are asphyxiated by carbon monoxide gas from a stack, when the wind or draft happens to carry the smoke directly into a workroom.

The soot in smoke is the objectionable part. This does harm in several ways, first, by shutting off sunlight, second, by soiling and damaging the surfaces of buildings, vegetation, the skin, third, by irritating the respiratory organs, fourth, by making artificial light necessary in the daytime, fifth, by favoring fog.

Whether from its direct irritant action on the lining of the respiratory tract or its shutting off of sunlight is a debatable point, but physicians and health authorities agree that smoke and soot predispose to tuberculosis of the lungs and increase the amount of sickness and the death rate in the community from the respiratory diseases generally.

There is a very good reason why the New Yorker, Bostonian, Chicagoan, or Buffalonian is happier and in some respects healthier in Los Angeles or San Diego or Long Beach. The pall and gloom of smoke does not hang over these sunny resorts. Were it not for the smoke horror of the eastern towns, the Angels, Diegos and Beach people might visit Boston, New York, Buffalo or Chicago to get away from flood, earthquake or oppressive heat. Eliminate the smoke and soot factor and there would be little difference in the climate of Chicago from that of Los Angeles. Fog is produced by the condensation of water vapor from the air on dust or soot particles. People with the rheumatism or catarrh obsession seldom care about the actual humidity, the amount of water vapor in the atmosphere, but they get depressed over the amount of water which is condensed from the air in the form of fog, dew, rain or dampness of walls.

Doctors Should Recommend Lots of Smoke and No Apples.

Smoke filters out the vitality essential ultraviolet rays of sunlight even more completely than it shuts off the visible rays. This has a great deal to do with the health and growth of infants and children than most people recognize. It has more to do with your and my immunity against ertain you suspect. It has much to do with the extraordinary prevalence of sinus infections in our pall covered gloomy cities.

Smoke Has No Market Value.

Smoke abatement, to my cynical mind, is a rather futile project. Whenever health clashes with business one expects when the battle is over to find business as usual.

We health writers, smoke inspectors, members of the smoke abatement commissions, would rather relect to see smoke go, now that we are so much interested in the smoke problem. This problem, like a good many other problems, affords for many of us lucrative occupations or delightful diversions—for instances, how could I sell an article like this if some thoughtless genius had introduced a positive method for making a profit from smoke? No, let the smoke problem go on baffling us, for there's money in the problem if not in the smoke.

A thing like this is too good to last forever, though. Eventually, of course, there will be some such discovery, and probably a snug little infant industry nurtured by our paternal government, with prior rights and basic patents and all that sort of thing. The Universal Smoke Consumers, Inc., head office in Wall street, subsidiary branches in all live cities, will have the right to collect the smoke from every chimney, and the slogan for the occasional advertising the firm will publish when any popular discontent manifests itself will be "We Watch Your Smoke." Chemists or rather novelists and Sunday newspaper writers, are fond of painting imposing pictures of the miracles in the way of food, medicine, flavor, color and scent which modern chemistry produces from coal tar. The Sunday supplement or Monthly Marvel Magazine of the future will take away the reader's breath with tales of the wonders wrought with smoke.

It is quite apparently futile to assure those who provide most of the smoke that it is more economical to use certain devices for better combustion or smoke consuming equipment. But from the moment the great inventor (he may be reading this) perfects his method for making a profit out of smoke, from that moment there ain't gonna be no more smoke nuisance.

Jazz and Opera To Fight It Out On Howard Stage

Is opera the popular music of today, or is it jazz that satisfies the hunger for harmony and song? Which style of music is best? Which typifies modern America? Is it opera or is it jaz? Which is the soul of music? Which receives the appreciation and applause of the multitude? Will the jazz of today prove of lasting quality, or will it die with time? Whatever you think you will want to see the Publix state production, "Opera vs. Jazz," which will be presented at the Howard theater all this week. "Opera vs. Jazz" was produced by Frank Cambria at an expense of $40,000.

"Opera vs. Jazz" will include the Cathedral scene from "Faust," sung by Rosalind Ruby and Arturo Imperato, and the quartet from "Rigoletto," which will be rendered by Leonori Cori, Adelaide de Luca, Georges Dufranne and Benjamin Landsman. Jazz, on the other hand, will be well taken care of by such popular artists as Boyd Senter, Okeh Record star; Cy Landry and the Foursome quartet. Wheeler Wadsworth and his New Idea orchestra will also join the controversy, offering a number of grand opera gems as an overture, while George Lee Hamrick, the popular solo organist of the Howard, will remain neutral, playing both jazz and operatic selections. It promises to be a great week for Howard patrons, whether they be worshippers of the classic or disciples of syncopation.

A story of our much discussed "Younger Generation" will be the feature screen attraction this week. The leading roles are taken by Huntley Gordon and Billie Dove in this Universal-Jewel production called, "Sensation Seekers." Other subjects on the program will include Publix News of the world and a cartoon comedy.

Cameo.

A program as interesting as it is excellent has been arranged for the Cameo for the coming week. Opening with Bebe Daniels in one of her most enjoyable pictures, "A Kiss In a Taxi," followed up with Lon Chaney's most sensational success, "Tell It to the Marines," and climaxing the week with another return engagement of Miss Clara Bow's "It," the week has in store for Cameo audiences an abundance of screen entertainment, diversified and contrasting.

Miss Daniels' "A Kiss In a Taxi" has the whole action of the plot centered in osculating action which took place in a taxicab, leading the star through numerous enjoyable adventures. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mark the return engagement of what is easily Lon Chaney's greatest portrayal, and one of the few pictures in which the star appears as himself, rather than donning some hideous makeup, "Tell It to the Marines," a story of the leathernecks, and of one in particular who joined the marines because of lack of anything else.

Clara Bow makes another appearance Saturday when the Cameo brings her back in "It."

Worn out mail pouches can be turned into fine grade writing paper, a government experiment reveals.

Beautiful Billie Dove is seen this week in "The Sensation Seekers" on the Howard screen. The next scene is from "Don Juan," featuring John Barrymore, which returns in Vitaphone form to the Metropolitan screen for this week. The gent preparing to "hit the hay" is George Sidney, character actor, who is featured again as a man of money in "Mililonaires," is on the Georgia silver sheet. Lower left, Leatrice Joy, who is starred in "Vanity" at the Rialto. What's this, a honeymoon? At any rate, William Haines and his girl friend take a trip as can plainly be seen in "A Little Journey" on Loew's screen.

Love a la Pullman In Romantic Film Screened at Grand

Three thousand miles of love and laughter is what can be found in "The Little Journey," a gay romance a la Pullman made from the brilliant stage success with Claire Windsor, William Haines and Harry Carey in the leading roles. This picture is based on one of Rachel Crothers' most popular plays and as directed by Robert Z. Leonard it promises to be one of the biggest successes found in recent showings of the lighter productions. It has an appealing plot, there is nothing but romance and action in it from start to finish and it brings out a lot of real acting.

Director Leonard had a difficult task before him when he started "A Little Journey." The story contains little that is theatrical, allows for nothing spectacular, in fact, almost the whole thing takes place on a transcontinental train between New York and San Francisco, and a good share of the whole is played by the two principals.

Walter F. Futter, head of the company by the same name which produces Curiosities, released by Educational, is leaving his headquarters in New York city soon for the Pacific coast, where he will make a survey of the one-reel picture situation. He also will visit Omaha, his former home, before returning to New York.

Young trees to be used for reforestation are sometimes placed in cold storage to prevent them from growing beyond the planting stage.

PUBLIX CHEX BOOKS GO ON SALE MONDAY

Rialto, Howard and Georgia To Sell National Ticket Books.

The management of the Rialto, Howard, Keith's Georgia theaters announces that on Monday, May 30, it will place on sale at the box office special books of tickets which represent a substantial saving to theater patrons. These are known as Publix chex books and the coupons will be redeemed for regular admission tickets not only at the Rialto, Howard, Keith's Georgia theaters, but at any of the hundreds of Publix theaters throughout the country.

Publix chex books are issued in three sizes, $10 book selling for $9, a $5 book selling for $4.50 and a $2.50 book selling for $2.25. Each book contains 25 cents, 10 cents and 5 cents coupons which may be exchanged for their face value when presented at the box office for any performance.

The convenience of this new form of ticket, the Publix theaters corporation points out, cannot be overestimated. In cities where there are more than one Publix theater, different members of the same family may attend different shows and still have the advantage of the reduced rate. Particularly convenient are the Publix chex books to those who travel extensively, either on business or for pleasure, for almost every city of importance in the country contains at least one Publix theater where coupons may be redeemed for theater tickets.

Each book contains, in addition to the coupons, a complete list of all the Publix theaters throughout the country where the coupons will be honored. Almost without exception the regular admission charge at these theaters does not require the payment of an additional tax. In the few exceptional cases, where the admission charge is more than 75 cents, necessitating the collection of a government tax, the amount of the tax is to be paid in cash at the box office when the coupons are redeemed.

Publix chex books make ideal gifts at Christmas or on birthdays or, for that matter, at any time.

Before the CURTAIN

By ELMO HAMBY

It seems that a golden age in the development of the cinema is beginning; we have, of course, the Vitaphone as the most remarkable step forward of the silver sheet since its birth, and now, according to reports from the producing company, we are to have third dimension films. The muchly-searched-for effect of depth on the screen has been achieved through the invention of Emil and Jacques Burkhardt, of Switzerland, according to announcement of the Tiffany Productions, Inc., who have acquired the rights to the Swiss invention.

The company further announces that the new invention requires no special machine or screen to obtain the effect of depth; apparatus now being used is sufficient for the needs of the invention. All the work, according to the announcement is done in the camera, the development of the negative and the printing of the positive.

Some movie fans will no doubt remember a short subject which was shown at the Howard a year or so ago dealing in the third dimension, but in this instance the effect of depth was produced by the use of two screens, and was at best, an experimental affair.

Tiffany plans to make a "super-production" for the first public exhibition of the new invention, and it is also hinted that a number of short subjects will be produced under the new plan.

Mr. Leide Scores.

One of the cleverest bits of scoring in local theaters was the work of Enrico Leide of the Metropolitan the past week. Mr. Leide scored the scenes showing the departure of Lindbergh and the telephotos of his arrival in Paris to "Fifty Million Frenchmen Can't Be Wrong." It was the scoop of the week, musically, and it might be added, of the year. The only unfortunate part of the affair was that the song was so new that only a small portion of the audience caught the significance of the music. And Mr. Leide said in his attractive little accent, that only a few of his orchestra members knew what it was all about. His accent, by the way, is just sufficiently noticeable to have the fairer sex refer to it as "just too sweet for words."

It was, to repeat, a clever bit of work and one worthy of recognition; but after all, it is but a fair sample of the scoring which he gives every picture program at the Metropolitan. Mr. Leide does not, as is the accepted custom, use the printed score furnished by the producers of the picture, but arranges his own. Good work, Mr. Leide.

The outstanding affair at the Howard this week will be the Publix show, "Opera vs. Jazz," which attempts to precent the virtues of each o fthe two forms of music for the audiences to decide which is the more popular. It lasts almost an hour, according to Gus Grist, publicity manager of "Atlanta's refrigerating station," and is quite the best thing offered there in several months.

A Comedian Speaks.

In the mass of publicity which curses the life of the members of this department each week, there are found all sorts of items, humorous, ridiculous and occasionally a really intelligent piece of news. The following statement was purported to have been made by Menty Banks, comedian with Pathe, in announcing the selection of a newspaperman as his director, and it belongs to any of the classes named above. Mr. Banks predicts that "the editorial offices of newspapers will furnish many of the outstanding motion picture directors of the future."

"No other class of men," says Banks, "are brought into such close contact with the real reaction of men and women to every emotion in human experience. They have looked first-hand at good and evil, joy and sorrow, poverty and wealth. Because of this, the pictures they direct are invariably warmly human and the action is neither overdrawn or underdone."

But the comical Mr. Banks neglected to add that at the present time the public will have none of the reality which he mentions. For proof, I point to "Variety" and other pictures of the same type which were, artistically, great successes, but rank flops at the box office. The public tastes may change before this decade passes, but it is to be doubted.

It seems like a nice week all around in local theaters this week. The Georgia offers the first of a series of New Wayburn productions which carry a step further the vaudeville unit show idea; the Grand has Eva Puck and Sam White, famous stars of "The Girl Friend," the Broadway success. On the screen, the Rialto has "Vanity;" the Metropolitan offers the Vitaphone production of "Don Juan," the entire production being accompanied by the New York Philharmonic orchestra and the Howard screen features, "Sensation Seekers"—you're right, it's a story of modern youth.

Aw, "Waddy" yuh mean?

"Don Juan" In Vitaphone Form On Met Program

"Don Juan!" What adventurous and romantic fancies that name conjures up in the minds of the literature lovers of all nations!

John Barrymore! What a very incarnation of the spirit of romance and adventure that name represents to all lovers of the stage and screen the world over.

Therefore, it is with pardonable pride that Warner Brothers present their super-production of "Don Juan," starring John Barrymore, which comes to the Metropolitan theater on Monday.

This inimitable love-chronicle artfully combining intimacy, action and splendor, loosely adheres to the tradition of Don Juan Tenorio, grandee of Spain, upon which Moliere, Balzac, Byron, Zorrilla and many others have based enduring contributions to the world's classics. The source-character of Don Juan possesses the characteristics of irresistible charm, grace and masculine comeliness. He is accomplished, aggressive, audacious in affairs of honor or the heart. Men instinctively acknowledge his natural precedence in the kingdom of intellect and power—women his mastery in the realm of emotion and love.

The complete Vitaphone synchronization of the "Don Juan" musical score as played by the New York Philharmonic orchestra of 107 musicians with Henry Hadley conducting, will accompany each presentation of the feature photoplay. The latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views will also be shown.

OH, VANITY, thy name is woman! said the poet of old —Do money and beauty make vanity righteous?

Charming, Vain, was this pampered daughter of wealth, but in a great crisis, she acquitted herself nobly—You'll be thrilled.

Madge Kennedy Has Versatile Role This Week

The Wagner Production company, fresh from its great success of last week in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," at the Erlanger theater, this week will present another drama, "39 East," an absorbing story of the struggles of a young woman to win fame as a singer in New York city. With the opening of the play taking place in a boarding house—familiar in its settings to many, many persons, "39 East" offers a personal attraction seldom presented in any play.

The familiar varied characters all are there, and, of course, all in capable hands. The leading parts—those of the young singer and her wealthy admirer who strives earnestly through out the play to lend a helping hand in the young woman's adventures—are taken by Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer, the two popular performers who have contributed so much to the success of the Wagner company during its spring season.

The types that dwell in the boarding house are all amusingly introduced in the first act of the play, offering great opportunities for the company. There is a giggling widow, a stern spinster, a droll westerner and the usual array.

In the second act Miss Kennedy is called upon for another exhibition of her amazing array of talents. She has proven that she can act with emotion and that she can handle comedy parts with success. She has shown Atlanta that she has a truly fine singing voice, but this week she will be called upon to show her ability as a dancer. Seats for "39 East" are on sale at the box office and at M. Rich & Bros. Co. store.

Trees burned over in a forest become more susceptible to attacks from insect pests.

NED WAYBURN SHOW TOPS GEORGIA BILL

What will undoubtedly prove to be the biggest of the present season's stage shows at Keith's Georgia theater will open Monday, Ned Wayburn's "Variety Show," a stage production with a cast of 25 principals and chorus, will be the attraction which includes some of the young ladies who appeared in Wayburn's local productions for the Atlanta Junior league.

Unlike the usual vaudeville bill the performance is one big event replete with clever revues, variety sketches, musical comedy, dancing and some straight vaudeville features of merit. A singing and dancing chorus of 12 Wayburn proteges contribute to the picture while the stage settings and electrical effects contained in the 16 scenes of the production are all designed to create a harmonious picture.

Eddie Foley furnishes the comedy line while Lea Leture is the principal singer. One scene of the show introduces the Four Ortons, "At the Circus," with George Orton, the clown, and his trained goose. Ed East and Ralph Dumke have a singing and comedy specialty said to be one of the real hits of the show.

Virginia Bacon, who is well-known to Atlanta theatergoers, presents "The Cameo Revue." With the assistance of Eddie Foley, Lea Leture, the Four Ortons, East and Dumke, and the bathing beauty chorus, this section is one of the big colorful parts of the production which is said to have created a new note in entertainment for vaudeville.

On the screen George Sidney, Louise Fazenda and Vera Gordon are being featured in "The Millionaires."

Why so many gold fish die when shipped from one point to another has been investigated by the United States bureau of fisheries.

In the circle, Sidney Blackmer and Madge Kennedy are shown reading the manuscript for "39 East," the play in which they star at the Erlanger theater this week. The two young ladies with the lances are the Griffin Twins, who are featured on Loew's Grand stage this week. The four gents in the "blazers" compose a quartet, which is one of many features of the "Opera vs. Jazz" Publix show on the Howard stage. In the inset is seen Gwendolyn Milne, one of the stars of the Ned Wayburn "Variety Show" which headlines on the Keith-Albee Georgia stage—don't rush off, Gwendolyn's older than she looks.

MUSIC-COMEDY STARS HEAD LOEW'S BILL

Headed by two stars of the very highest rank in stagedom, Eva Puck and Sam White, a good vaudeville bill will be offered this week at Loew's Grand theater. Eva Puck and Sam White will come to Atlanta direct from a year's engagement at the Vanderbilt theater in New York in "The Girl Friend."

These two stars can give a whole show by themselves, according to reports. Miss Puck has won honors as a comedienne while Sam White's droll comedy is always appealing.

In their Atlanta engagement Puck and White will offer a skit in which singing, dancing and clowning is blended. This act was conceived and staged by Lew Fields, of Weber and Fields, one of the ablest producers in the country.

The bill supporting Puck and White is strong throughout. The Griffin Twins, "Two Prince Charmings of Artistry," will bring a novel dancing and posing act. The twins will bring some remarkable costumes which they will use in Egyptian, Greek and classic dances of all kinds.

Of a real headline class, too, is the musical comedy gem, "Flaming Youth," written by Bennett and Carlton for Lou Beck, Peggy Bolton and Albert Burke. The skit is full of clever lines and funny situations and serves also to bring some lilting musical numbers.

Some harmony singing of the highest type will be offered by the famous Hemstreet singers. A program will be sung which will include some of the prettiest and sweetest ballads and late popular song hits.

The opener on the new bill will be a new act by The Novelty Clintons entitled, "Jumping and Kicking." The performance has many unique and remarkable feats of trick jumping and leaping.

This bill with the jolly romance, "A Little Journey," with Claire Windsor, William Haines and Harry Carey will form the program at Loew's Grand for the ensuing week.

Lucille Hutton, who has played opposite Al St. John in most of the Educational-Mermaid comedies, in which he has been featured this year, again appears in the principal feminine role in "Jungle Heat," the new Mermaid comedy.

ERLANGER THEATRE

EAST SIDE LOCAL OF 'MILLIONAIRES' GEORGIA PICTURE

"Millionaires," a Warner feature film production, will be shown for the first time locally this week at Keith's Georgia theater. Starring in the production is George Sidney, Louise Fazenda, Vera Gordon and Nat Carr. The story was suggested by "The Inevitable Millionaire," a novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, and is the story of a simple family on the lower East Side of New York transformed overnight into millionaires. Their amusing difficulties trying to break into society border on tragedy when the wife is convinced she must divorce her husband if she is to enter the magic circle.

"Millionaires" is a picture which seems to go out frankly to get laughs and, according to reports, it has succeeded admirably. The film will be shown all week in conjunction with Ned Wayburn's new stage production, "Variety Show of 1927."

PARKING SERVICE FOR RIALTO PATRONS

The Rialto theater management has solved the automobile parking problem in so far as its patrons are concerned.

Manager W. T. Murray has made arrangements with the Cone street garage, nearby, for patrons of the Rialto to leave their cars stored there for two and a half hours after 6:30 p. m. every day for the nominal sum of 15 cents.

The arrangement calls for the theater to pay the rest of the storage charge. The patrons will present their claim checks from the garage at the theater box office to have them validated to secure the 15 cent parking rate.

'THE AWAKENING' NOW READY FOR CURTAIN

With more than 500 Atlanta people in the cast, 26 acts on the program, and the most elaborate costumes ever seen in an amateur production on the local stage, "The Awakening," booked for the Atlanta theater for this week, promises to be not only one of the outstanding programs of the week, but of the entire season.

Saturday night's dress rehearsal at the Atlanta theater put the finishing touches on the principals and choruses and was run off in perfect order. Director James H. Hull expressed himself as extremely well satisfied and predicted that the Atlanta presentation of "The Awakening" will eclipse any performances in the many other cities in which the extravaganza has been shown.

The dramatic scenes are modeled after "The Birth of a Nation" and present many plantation scenes of the old south, as well as depicting the struggles of this section in the days following the war between the states. One of the feature scenes of the dramatic acts presents a chorus of 50 black mammies.

Principal parts in the dramatic scenes will be played by A. F. Patterson, Bob F. Stocks, Marcus J. Wager, C. L. Mathews, Billy Stocks, W. L. Rice, Tillie Phillips, Clestelle McNeal, Lois Griffin and Dan C. Pate.

In addition, 10 specialty acts are on the program, including everything from black bottom dances to grand opera presentations. The vaudeville acts present Virginia Lee Coppock in an acrobatic song and dance number; Mrs. Roberta Welch, soloist; the youthful Wager brothers; Jacqueline Gullatt, juvenile entertainer; Kimo Kaloki, Hawaiian star; Tootsie Dunbar in a song and dance number; Robena Astin in Charleston and black bottom dances; the team of Leavens and Harris; Ann Faulkner in a black bottom dance, and Louise Didschuneit, toe dancer.

LEATRICE JOY STARS 'VANITY' AT RIALTO

Drama, swift-moving, tense, thrilling and of the character which most film fans revel in, is present in satisfying proportions in Leatrice Joy's new De Mille star picture, "Vanity," which is scheduled for showing at the Rialto theater this week. The dynamic star is finely supported by Charles Ray, leading man, and Alan Hale, the villain of the story.

On the eve of her wedding to Lloyd Van Courtland (Charles Ray) Barbara Fiske, a proud beauty who saw service in France, meets Dan Morgan (Alan Hale), a gob she had known on the fighting line. His dominating character fascinates her and when he invites her to visit him aboard his steamship, she recklessly consents. When she boards the vessel she discovers that with the exception of the ship's cook and Morgan, she craft is deserted. To her horror she realizes she has been trapped, but she faces the situation bravely.

When Morgan seeks to take advantage of Barbara, he is interrupted by the brutal cook who has made up his mind to win the girl for himself. A terrific battle between the two men ensues, Morgan is stabbed to death, and when the cook triumphantly faces Barbara, he is disconcerted to find her armed with a revolver. Does she use it? The subsequent scenes are tensely dramatic and there is a smashing climax as effective as it is unexpected.

"Musclebound Music," a comedy, is on the program with "Vanity." There is the usual presentation of the world's news in pictures gathered by the world-wide Pathe organization, and the musical program by the Rialto orchestra, under the direction of Frank Turner.

New Dodge Models Slated For Early Introduction

Dodge Brothers, Inc., has started production of its new six-cylinder line and output is now running at about 100 per day. This number will be increased rapidly, and by the end of June daily output will approximate 300.

The first shipments to dealers were made May 11, and by the end of this month all of Dodge Brothers' dealers will have been sampled. The company now has orders for the "sixes" sufficient to keep the immense new plant operating at 300 per day for several months.

The new line will be produced in three models—a four-door sedan, a four-passenger coupe and a new type of cabriolet roadster. Other models will be made later. It is expected that the new line will be introduced about June 1.

The company has found it necessary to step up production of its four-cylinder line twice in 10 days to keep shipments abreast of the orders which have been placed since announcement of the new four-cylinder motor and standard gear shift was made on May 1.

During the first week after the new motor was introduced orders for cars valued at $5,500,000 were received. These were in addition to regular contractual allotments.

All of the Dodge Brothers factories are now operating at the highest levels of the year and it is expected that still further increases in operations will be necessary.

Graham Brothers' April retail sales in the United States and foreign shipment totaled 5,000 units. Overseas shipments last month totaled 1,054, an increase of 188 per cent over March and the second highest month in Graham Brothers' history. In Canada Graham Brothers' April sales broke all previous records.

Overseas shipments of Dodge Brothers' cars established a new high record in the company's history on May 5.

Savannah Student Is Named President Of Georgia Glee Club

Athens, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Dan Tulley, of Savannah, has been elected president of the University of Georgia Glee and Instrumental club for next year, succeeding William A. Eyler, of Savannah, who is to graduate in June.

Armand Eyler, of Savannah, was elected leader of the Glee club, succeeding William Minnich, of Atlanta, and Luke Stancil, of Tate, was elected leader of the Instrumental club, succeeding Francis Gilbert, of Atlanta. Mack Barnes, of Waycross, was elected business manager for next year's club.

The director was not chosen. It is possible that a chair of music will be created at the university for the 1927-28 session, according to Dean S. V. Sanford, in which case the person elected to fill this chair will be in charge of the Glee and Instrumental club.

The club is composed of business and professional women as its name indicates, and it is one of the most progressive organizations in Quitman. It has furnished rooms over the chamber of commerce and cooperates with the chamber of commerce in maintaining a rest room for women. The club has a membership in the chamber of commerce and serves on the monthly activity committee of that body.

The club helps with all community activities and contributes to the school library and other local causes. It will join other women's organizations in putting on a fair here this fall.

Mrs. Ethel Pollock is president, Miss Ella Mae Miller is past president and compiled the club report and is secretary of the chamber of commerce.

Miss Spain Gathers Material in Carroll For Anniversary Fete

Carrollton, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Miss Helen Knox Spain, of Atlanta, was here this week, gathering material for the historical pageant she is writing to be used in the celebration of Carroll county's 100th anniversary to be held October 20-22.

Miss Spain expressed herself as being delighted with the richness of material which would lend itself so well to a dramatic pageant, going back to General McIntosh, the half-breed Creek Indian, a first cousin of Governor Troup, and the dramatic part he played in the making of the treaty by which the Indian title was lifted from a great tract of land, now composing many counties, which was originally Carroll, and the tragic death he met at the hands of his people, for having so befriended the "whites."

Miss Spain has already completed the epilogue of her pageant, together with many episodes.

SAVANNAH PRESBYTERY ORDAINS 2 MINISTERS

Savannah, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Two Savannah men, Robert P. Lovell and Robert E. Alsworth, became full-fledged ministers of the Presbyterian faith Wednesday after successfully passing examinations and preaching trial sermons before a special meeting of the Savannah presbytery.

The young ministers have been theological students at Columbia seminary for the last three years and graduated this month.

Rev. Alsworth goes to the church at Douglas, while Rev. Lovell will go to Calhoun for his ministerial duties on June 1.

MERCHANT FLEET IN LOCAL OFFICE

Atlanta offices of the Merchant Fleet corporation, under the direction of the United States shipping board, were opened Saturday on the ground floor of the 101 Marietta building, opposite the Federal Reserve bank.

The offices, which will give Atlanta increased importance in the exporting and importing field and offer greatly improved service to shippers to foreign ports, are in charge of N. P. Leary, traffic representative, whose appointment by President A. C. Dalton, of the shipping board was announced a short time ago. Mr. Leary will make every effort to develop the traffic in this region.

The mission of the Atlanta office, like those of similar offices in other cities, is to encourage to the fullest extent possible the use of American shipping board vessels in the import and export trade. He will devote attention not only to Atlanta business but to that of other interior points in Georgia, South Carolina and probably parts of North Carolina. Details of his territory have not yet been completed.

N. P. LEARY.

Office Sought.

The creation of the Atlanta inland office of the Merchant Fleet corporation followed efforts of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Foreign Trade club, the south Atlantic office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The advantages of an office in this territory were pointed out to President Dalton, of the United States shipping board, by the Atlanta chamber several months ago, and after considerable correspondence the board's decision to establish an office here was made, followed by the announcement that Mr. Leary would be the Atlanta representative.

It is expected that most of the traffic originating in the southeastern territory will flow through south Atlantic ports. The board's vessel in the south Atlantic comprise the fleet of the American Palmetto line, whose headquarters are in Savannah and which is owned by Georgia men. Its officers are president, E. S. Trosdal; vice president, R. D. Sullivan; secretary and treasurer, J. J. McQuillan. It has branch offices in Charleston and Jacksonville. Fourteen steel cargo ships are employed in the service of this fleet, which sail between the south Atlantic coast and English and European ports.

South American Service.

In addition, the shipping board has vessels in the South American service which make regular calls at south Atlantic ports on both outbound and homeward voyages. This fleet is known as the American Republic line, and has representatives at the south Atlantic ports. A service also is maintained from the south Atlantic to the Mediterranean.

All the above services are represented by the South Atlantic Steamship line, which has offices in Savannah, Charleston and Jacksonville. This line is the managing operator for the American Palmetto line fleet and acts as sub-agent for the south Atlantic and Mediterranean steamers.

Mr. Leary is no stranger to Atlanta, as he spent several years here when with the old Southern Express company. His 15-year-old son was born here. Mr. Leary devoted 22 years to active work in transportation and solicitation in the southeast and is familiar with the territory.

Summer School Students to Hear Opera Singers

Athens, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Seven leading opera singers have been engaged to sing four well-known operas during music festival week, July 19-22, at the University of Georgia Summer school, Director Joseph S. Stewart has announced.

The annual grand opera week of the state university begins with the grand festival concert on Tuesday evening, July 19, closing with the third act of the "Tales of Hoffman." On Wednesday evening Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" will be staged, and on Thursday evening one act from Verdi's "Il Trovatore," and the first comic opera ever written, Perfolese's "La Serva Padrona," will be offered. The annual opera offerings close Friday evening with Flotow's "Martha."

Explaining that the parts of "Romeo and Juliet" are to be sung by representatives of the Metropolitan Opera company, with whom he has not yet closed contracts, and hence whom he cannot yet announce, Dr. Stewart said that the following have been secured for the music festival week at the university:

Mary Craig, soprano, Philadelphia Civic Opera company; Judson House, tenor, St. Louis and Philadelphia Opera companies; Henri Scott, bass La Scala Opera company, and formerly of the Metropolitan, Chicago and Hammerstein companies; Francis Tyler, baritone, Hinshaw Opera company and the American Singers opera; Glen Stables, baritone, who was at the University of Georgia last summer in "Madame Butterfly" and Cavalleria Rusticana."

Negotiations are in process with other artists for the festival, Dr. Stewart said.

Savannah-Ridgeland Road Contract Let To Florida Company

Savannah, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—Hutton Construction company, of Sanford, Fla., has been awarded a $600,000 contract for paving work on the Coastal highway from the Georgia-Carolina bridge to Ridgeland. Monroe B. Hutton, a former Savannahan, is president of this firm.

Actual paving will start in a short time. Half of the causeway will be paved at a time so automobilists can pass while the work is in progress. After the causeway is finished and work is started on the remainder of the road, detours will be arranged at convenient points so motorists will experience no difficulty at any time in traveling that route. The work is to be completed in 250 days.

The road is to be paved with asphalt on a gravel base. This base is to be five inches, the asphalt base three and a half inches and the asphalt top one and a half inches.

The Hutton company will use two asphalt plants in the work, one large and one small, 100 mules and three cranes, as well as much other equipment.

WAYCROSS MEN ASKED TO GET RIVER DATA

Waycross, Ga., May 28.—(Special.)—The chamber of commerce has asked Dr. H. J. Carswell, M. M. Monroe and George W. Popwell to take charge of the gathering and compiling of the data requested by United States Engineer William F. Tompkins, in connection with the proposal to make the Satilla river navigable as far as Waycross.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

DO YOU REMEMBER?

Do you remember?

The mauve decade, the gay 'nineties, or whatever one chooses to call the era of cigarette pictures and balloon sleeves, has awakened a curious romantic interest within the last two years. "Doddering, decrepit veterans who have lived to the ripe old age of 35," says Charles Dana Gibson, "enjoy recalling the customs and costumes of their dear, dead 'outs,' and children who have been born in this century have an archaeological interest in them, much as children of my generation were fascinated by reminiscences of the civil war." And they were gay, those 'nineties, Mr. Gibson fondly remembers.

It is the delightfully antiquated modes of having a good time which marked this period that R. V. Culter has resurrected in his album of reminiscent drawings entitled "the Gay Nineties," which Charles Dana Gibson sponsored originally as one of the most popular features of life. The collection has just appeared under the imprint of Doubleday, Page & Co. in a demure, but cheerful yellow cover with a mauve label.

If you sit down with a pencil and paper and jot down the things you remember best about that ante-bellum period, you will come very near writing a list of contents for the book.

The taffy pulls where girls in long flounces with coquettish bows in their pompadours pulled the sticky strips with hilarious young men, the tandem bicycle whose owner paid dearly for his popularity in the long run, outraged womanhood holding indignation meetings before a billboard advertising the Black Cro . , the nifty little livery rig with the reel wheels and rubber tires and the livery horse who always managed to get his tail over a rein just as soon as you were passing somebody you knew, the Sunday afternoon ride in the family surrey with the fringed top; he has drawn them all with a tender humor that at times is almost wistful. In more rollicking vein are his sketches of the embarrassed disciple of the new style cuff trouders at whom the small boys shouted, "Hey, mister, is it raining in London?" and the heroic pioneer who had to pass the livery stables in full tennis regalia amid hoots of "Thirty, love. Your serve, dearest." The bicycle craze awakens his most mirthful memories, and one ventures the belief that Culter himself was one of the members of the local club who were dragged inominiously back to town in a wagon at the end of the "century run." The lady with the hat askew who took up bicycling in a serious way whenever she could induce her husband to spend a nice Sunday afternoon holding her up while she practiced, the really nice girl who didn't have to walk home, the joy-killing predecessor of the back-seat driver, he knows them all. Even the signboards that they pass are drawn with a fond historical accuracy.

SYMPHO Y SERIES.

Nothing recently has pleased me more than the Analytic Symphony Series, edited by Dr. Percy Goetschius and published by Oliver Ditson company.

Dr. Goetschius has reduced the great symphonies of the masters to piano score; and it is now possible for a pianist of average ability to audibly study the structure of the master pieces of musical architecture. Heretofore these symphonies have been available only in expensive orchestral scores, and could only be heard from time to time in cities which maintained symphony orchestras.

These piano arrangements of the symphonies contain full and complete annotations showing the design, arrangement and evelopment of the music material from and upon which each symphony is built. The entrance and extent of the phrases are indicated; and all important or suggestive thematic relations are pointed out. The names of the principal instruments which would carry the music along in an orchestral performance are eshown in the piano version so that the studious listener can mentally perceive the original tone edifice.

The series includes the most accepted symphonies of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, Tchaikovsky, Mendelssohn, Dvorak and Franck; and each volume contains a portrait and biographical sketch of the composer and a critique of the work.

Another thing that will recommend the use of this series to teachers, students and music lovers is that the editions are very reasonable in price.

WILLIAM E. ARNAUD.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Allah and the Ice-Gods. By H. Rider Haggard, is called "A Tale of Beginnings," and of which the writer says in the first anagraph, "Had I the slightest qualifications for the task, I, Allan Quartermain, would like to write an essay on 'Temptation.'"

The author of "She," who is still remembered in connection with the name of Haggard has written a thrilling story in which Egypt is the location and Taduki leaves the inspiration. "Taduki leaves . . . they had the power, their fumes were breathed, of projecting you through centuries and showing you whole cycles of life in strange countries.

Lady Ragnall was the wife of Allen Quartermain's best friend. Upon her death she left Allen a fortune which he gave away, but the box of Taduki leaves . . . this is where the adventure begins which makes it one of the most gripping stories ever written by Haggard.

A new Allen Quatermain story will be sure to receive a real welcome from the many admirers of the writer —Rider Haggard. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City.)

Ladies and Gentlemen. By Irvin S. Cobb. The stories by this famous humorist, of Kentucky by birth but whom all America claims, have been compared to that old spring tonic of grandmother 'days — sulphur and molasses.

So it is with the humor of Irvin Cobb—it makes you feel that the world is yours and everything in it is running along smooth lines.

Some one says his "Ladies and Gentlemen" can't all get in the social register, but they are too full of humor, kindness and originality to take a back seat and be lost in the shuffle. Cobb's characters are not forgotten, and in this book he presents 11 stories which cover every phase of humanity. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

THE GAY NINETIES.

Congai. By Harry Hervey. The story is woven around characters of the countries of France and Asia. The title of the book means literally "woman." Asia being the country of the mother of Thilah, around whom the story is woven, but as the critic says, "it is more than the story of a woman; it is the story of a country." (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

Bold Bendigo. By Paul Herring. A romance of the open road, of the long green lane and the broad heath, of Bendy, Prince of "Milling Coves," and his Gypsy sweetheart. It is a story that "fairly rings with sturdy blows" and stirs the pulse with its joy of living, its virility and slashing style, and it will make a strong appeal to sportsmen as well as lovers of romance. (Lippincott's Book.)

The Ancient Hunger. by Edwin Granberry. "Mankind's oldest and yet ever-fresh problem is newly interpreted in this story. It is the story of a woman, aristocratic, of New England ancestry, who lives such a lonely life that she meets but few people and has fewer friends. It tells the story of her flight against her love for the foreman of her ranch—an ordinary role. (Macauley, New York).

Creston Meadows, a story of love and daring, by Sheridan Franzell Wood, author of "Blossoms From the Clay." Another story of the sixties and of the part played by the sons and daughters of Tennessee and the civil war.

The love story is wound around four young people who find the whole world their home as they love and are loving. (Dorrance and Co., Philadelphia).

The Girl in Black, by Victor Bridges, author of "The Man From Nowhere." This is another romance which first develops when Lindsay Brooke, an attractive young explorer, goes to the movies. He leans back in a box and until the picture begins entertains himself by watching a young girl, dressed in black, sitting at a grand piano, rendering Rachmaninoff's prelude, all this attracting his attention. The door of the next box opens and closes and he hears the whisper, "That's the girl at the piano." It sounded to him like a plot and he felt that it was his duty to protect this unknown girl.

This is the story and it was a case of the brave hero, exciting adventures and finally the reward, this being followed by the unfolding of a mystery which will interest the reader. (Lippincott's Book, Philadelphia).

A Knight of Carolina, by A. M. Barnes. The name of Mark Ashton, gentlemen, is not a strange one by any means. He was sent to the Province of Carolina during the early part of the seventeenth century in quest of his brother, Edward, who had disappeared from England some years before this.

This well written story by a well-known author has an American background, and it tells of how Mark Ashton fell in love with a charming representative of the lassies of Charles Town, which changes his unhappiness occasioned when his father sent him away from home. It is a historical tale that is full of thrilling interest. (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

The House of Sin, by Allen Upward. A detective story by the author of "The Club of Masks." The story is located in London and it was at the door bearing the name of "F. Tarleton, M. D.," that a low knock was heard at 5 o'clock on a summer morning.

Among the interesting points brought out in this story is that a handsome young man in evening dress is murdered.

The tragedy occurred about midnight in the house of a duke.

The duke's young daughter had a picture of the young man in her room.

The lovely daughter of the house is engaged to a manly young captain, who is attended by a Nigerian servant.

The doctor, who is the famous home office expert, immediately begins to unravel the web of mystery which hangs over the House of Altringham. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia).

The Band Plays Dixie, by Morris Markey, who is a New York newspaper man. It is a story of the civil war. This, with the romance of a historical time, makes it a most entertaining story. There are no historical characters.

It is the story of two men, cousins, who are first seen fighting side by side, "lured by the glamor of uniforms and fascinated by the beat of drums." It is here that the romance begins. Heretofore faithful friends, brothers-in-arms, they fall in love with the same girl, and a daughter of the enemy.

It is a true story of the war between the states in which the issue between the two lovers is finally settled by the war itself. (Harcourt, Bruce & Co., New York.)

Overtaken, by Lawrence Rising, author of "Proud Flesh" and "She Who Was Helena Cass." Mr. Rising seems to have the power of making his settings so realistic and his characters so much alive that he holds the reader's suspense until the last moment.

Mr. Rising is the son of W. D. Rising, a scientist, who was born in California, but spends the greater part of each year in New York, and then there's months of travel to London, Paris, Rome and Madrid. It was, however, while motoring in northern Africa that he began writing this story which was finished in New York. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

Spread Circles, by Florence Ward. The story is woven around the lives of Stephen Janney, who married Elena Queredo. It was then that the stone was cast into the pool of life and the circles began.

"Take any life you choose and study it.
It gladdens, troubles, change many lives.

"Fate drops a stone and to the utmost shores
The circles spread."

McRea-Smith Co., Philadelphia.)

Edgar Lee Masters. (Published by

Storm of the Old Frontier, by Marshall R. Hall. This is a story of the gold rush to California, which always has a thrill in it, and while it has been written about by many different people and yet it is still entertaining—and the romance adds much pleasure to the tale. (Henry Altemus Co., Philadelphia.)

Home, James, by Ethel Kelly. The illustrations are by Ralph Barton. In this romance the bride and the bridegroom tell the story of their runaway in a most interesting style. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

Tom and Jerry, by O. J. Boulden. This is a lively story woven around the Darness family and Amos Darnell and Amy McConnell were called the leaders of the small-town society. (Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia.)

Findings is Keepings. A detective story. By John Boyd Clarke, whose mystery story covers a case of mistaken identity, three wills and a murder. All this is placed into the hands of Harry Vale, the rookie policeman, who is noted for his talent of discovering clues after others in his profession have failed. You can count on Rookie Vale being quick-witted and perfectly sane in his conclusion. (Edw. J. Clode, Inc., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

I Ought to Know That, by Berton Braley and George B. Hill. This is another book for everybody—every one who wants to test his knowledge of the world here, there an everywhere will find the book full of fun and interest.

For instance, I ought to know who wrote "Richard Carvel," "Janice Meredith," "The House of Mirth," etc. Why Joan of Arc was called "Maid of Orleans?" What woman was co-discoverer of radium? Was the Lusitania the first liner sunk in the submarine campaign? These are a few questions among the many asked in this entertaining book. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

On the Slope of Montmarte, by William Wallace Irwin. There are seventeen unusually attractive illustrations by Marcel Poncin. This book is running over with interesting things and just the gift for one who is going to Paris this summer. (Frederick Stokes Co., New York.)

Lessons From the Out-of-Doors, by Ida M. Folsom. Illustrated. It is a most valuable book, for it contains suggestions of the teaching of natural science. There are fifty well-planned and carefully-worded lessons. The book is especially designed for teachers and it will appeal to all nature-lovers. (The Stratford Co., Boston.)

Swimming Scientifically Taught, by Frank Eugen Dalton, founder of the Dalton Swimming school and son of the late Captain Davis Dalton, who was in his day the champion swimmer and life-saver of the world, winning 148 medals of honor and swimming the English channel in 1890.

"Swimming Scientifically Taught" has long been a standard textbook on swimming, the instruction being so clear and explicit and covering the subject so thoroughly. In its very tone it inspires confidence in those who have tried to learn to swim and failed. Any poor swimmer will find his technique wonderfully improved by practicing the methods explained in Frank Dalton's book. The recent channel swims which have injected much new interest in swimming are recorded in this book and, besides, there is much fresh material which now appears for the first time. (Funk & Wagnalls, New York.)

MAGAZINES FOR MAY.

The Nomad, with which is incorporated Tavern Topics, is a most attractive magazine of travel and adventure. The leading article for this month being "France on the St. Lawrence," which discusses French ships, carrying art and fashion to the new world—then war and French prows headed otherwhither. John Trevor Custis writes most interestingly of "In the Kingdom of Beau Nash," where Dickens and Smollett, Jane Austen and Fannie Burney, John Masefield and Booth Tarkington lingered. The illustrations are most attractive. Another is entitled "Madrid; the Color of the Soul of Spain," by Waldo Frank, with illustrations by Harold Helvenston; "Land of Today and Yesterday," by Willis B. Whitcomb; "When Automobile Touring in France Began," by Albert Stevens Crockett. Another attractive feature that always catches the eye is "Interesting People We Have Met—and Where." The Nomad is quite a popular magazine.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Some of the fans in Queen Mary's collection are described in the leading article in the May issue of The Connoisseur, which is just out. This article is by Eugene Gibson and is illustrated by eight pictures as well as a full page in color. Another article is one that will appeal to the collectors of pewter, called "Pewterers' Trade Tokens of the Seventeenth Century," by H. H. Cotterell, F. R. Hist. S., with a page of reproductions. Other articles are "W. B. Harriott; a Forgotten Imitator of Prout, by Basil S. Long, of the Victoria and Albert museum, London; "Misericords Again," by Fred Roe, Rhode Island, and "Some of the Less-Known Liverpool Transfer Tiles," by John A. G. Watson. All the articles are fully illustrated. The two other color plates, in addition to the one mentioned above, are a landscape by Constable and a scene by Singleton. Other plates are reproductions of paintings by Gilbert Stuart, M. J. Van Mieredelt and William Etty, R. A.

The list of the 200 best American books, compiled by Harriet C. Long, of the Wisconsin Library commission, has just won first prize in the competition held under the auspices of Scribner's Magazine. It is interesting to note that out of the 200 books listed, 45 were published by Houghton Mifflin company and 24 by the second highest publisher. Houghton Mifflin company is thus accorded the distinction of having published 22 1-2 per cent of "the best books written by American authors and published in America," and has more than twice as many books on the list as any other American publisher.

Dr. William E. Barton, the Lincoln biographer, went to Keyser, W. Va., in April on an interesting mission. It was the occasion of the rebuilding of Nancy Hanks' birthplace. On the site of the cabin in which Lincoln's mother was born, they dug down to find the corners of the old foundation, Dr. Barton helping to lay the first courses of logs. It will be a shrine for all lovers of Lincoln.

Cornell Woolrich, a young Columbia university student, has just won a $10,000 prize novel contest. He is a former pupil of John Erskine, author of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and "Galahad," having taken Professor Erskine's advanced prose composition course.

George Kelly's plays continue to be popular in book form as well as on the stage. "The Flattering Word and Other One-Act Plays," published in 1925 by Little, Brown & Co., has just gone into another printing. George Kelly's newest play is "Daisy Mayme," the story of a spinster who has not forgotten the joy of living.

This month the Cosmopolitan published "Overtaken," by Lawrence Rising, author of "Proud Flesh" and "She Who Was Helena Cass." Of "Overtaken" it may be told that the story is the career of an amazing woman. Mr. Rising's understanding of women has contributed largely to his reputation. But he has pleaded with his publishers not to make further disclosures about his new book, the plot of which is so unusual that the barest hint would reveal it to a prospective reader. They consented to his entreaty and "Overtaken" will be launched on an advertising campaign which merely mentions that it is laid in New York, Paris and Morocco.

JOURNALISM CLUB FORMED AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—The Quill club, a group of advanced students in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism of the University of Georgia, has been granted a chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity, a telegram just received from Lawrence W. Murphy, of the University of Illinois, national executive vice president of the fraternity, states.

Installation of the chapter at the University of Georgia will take place at an early date, Ernest Camp Jr., president of the Quill club, said.

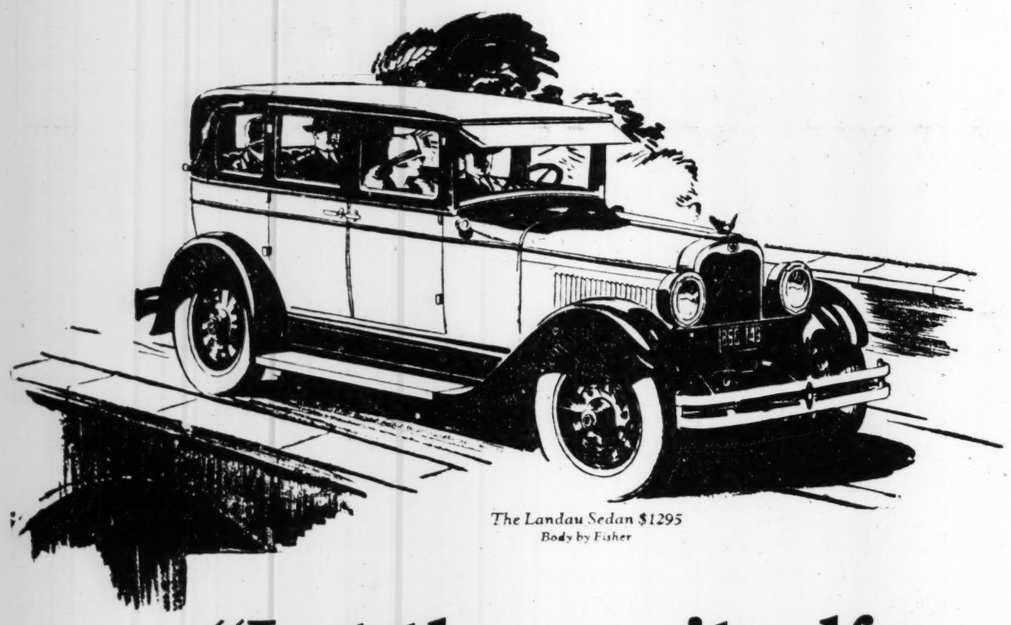

Membership of the Quill club is restricted to those students in the school of journalism who have superior records, who are members of the junior or senior classes, who have had newspaper experience, and who expect to enter some phase of journalism upon graduation. A few students not in the journalism department, but who are connected with the several college publications and who expect to take up newspaper work upon graduation are also among the membership.

The Quill club has made an effort to bring about a closer contact between the press of the state and the school of journalism. This effort has, according to Mr. Camp, been directed to a two-fold end: "To acquaint the students with journalism as it is actually practiced; and to give the editor closer contact with the journalistic talent at the University of Georgia, thereby facilitating the placement of students after graduation."

During the current session the Quill club had brought several practicing newspaper men to the school for addresses, among them being Mark Ethridge, managing editor, The Macon Telegraph; E. B. Braswell, publisher and general manager of The Athens Banner-Herald; Ben A. Julian, advertising solicitor, Athens Banner-Herald, and others.

The charter membership of the Quill club, which petitioned Sigma Delta Chi, is: Thomas F. St. John, Athens; Ben H. Hardy, Jr., Barnesville; William S. McMichael, Buena Vista; Thomas J. Hamilton, Jr., Augusta; Robert L. Sherrod, Thomasville; Victor B. Jenkins, Jr., Savannah; Benjamin F. Cheek, Jr., Lavonia; D. M. Sherman, Albany; Robert F. Donaldson, Jr., Statesboro; William M. Bryant, Athens, and Ernest Camp, Jr., Monroe.

"Let the car itself reveal the meaning of super-precision construction"

Perhaps you are not mechanically inclined.

Perhaps it means nothing to you at all that the manufacture of an Oakland Six involves more super-precision operations than any other car of its price in the world . . . that in building the Oakland engine alone no less than thirty-three operations must be accurate to three ten-thousandths of an inch—one-twentieth the thickness of the paper on which these words are printed.

Perhaps you are one of those practical persons who ask not "how?" but "what?". And if you are, drive the Greater Oakland Six! Let the car itself reveal the meaning of super-precision construction! There's something thrilling in the way it darts ahead when you step on the gas; something reassuring in how it conquers hills; something strangely restful in its handling ease and freedom from vibration.

That difference is marked. You feel it instantly. It's the difference in performance that always results when advanced engineering is combined with super-precision construction. One demonstration will tell you all—come in and get it today!

CHRYSLER MODEL NUMBERS MEAN MILES PER HOUR

Air-Cooled Motor Lauded By New York-Paris Flier

Because the air-cooled motor offers several distinct advantages over other forms of power plants, a Wright 230 horsepower air-cooled radial engine was adopted for the Ryan monoplane to carry it from New York to Paris with Captain Charles Lindbergh as pilot. Lindbergh showed his faith in the reliability of modern air-cooled motors by using for the cross-Atlantic flight the same engine which brought the plane to New York from California.

Virtually no adjustments or repairs were necessary to prepare the Wright engine for its gruelling flight across the Atlantic after its record-making trip from San Diego to New York.

Of utmost importance in long distance flights, Lindbergh stated, is an engine that will deliver the greatest amount of horsepower for the least possible amount of engine weight. By the elimination of the radiator, water jackets, water and tubing necessary with a water-cooled motor, the air-cooled motor on this score weighs considerably less than the other type of motor of the same power.

Cause of Forced Landings.

Lindbergh's most striking remark regarding the practicability of air-cooling for motors was that "over 40 per cent of forced landings in airplane flights before the popularizing of the air-cooled motor was due to trouble developing in the water cooling systems of heavier engines." This fact he said proved that air-cooling makes for greater dependability in addition to a saving of weight.

With the lighter construction of the air-cooled motor, it is possible to carry a greater quantity of fuel than would be possible in a plane having a water-cooled engine of the same horsepower. In addition to the fuel factor, the saving of the weight allows carrying of special equipment for proper navigation, the transportation of mail or merchandise, and also provision for storing of emergency apparatus.

One of the greatest problems confronting engineers in designing planes to be used for exceptionally long flights, Lindbergh asserted, is that of building a machine which can carry enough fuel to reach its goal and still have a safe fuel margin for unfavorable weather conditions. The air-cooled motor, he said, offers greater fuel economy than other forms of power plants which thereby enables the plane to fly farther on a given amount of gasoline and oil.

Low Gas Consumption.

A feature of these engines is the low gasoline consumption when the plane is flying at its cruising speed. The cruising range is determined by the highest speed of the plane at which the engine runs most satisfactorily on the least amount of gasoline.

In making the early plans for the Atlantic flight, Lindbergh said he studied all types of airplane motors in existence with the thought of finding that type of engine which is best suited to meet the varied and gruelling conditions encountered in a flight across the ocean. It was in the air-cooled engine he said that he found the most desirable form of power plant for his flight.

OFFICIALS PRAISE HUP IMPROVEMENTS

In emphasizing the quality features of their six cylinder car, Hupmobile executives are pointing to numerous improvements which serve, in their estimation, to bear out their contention that Hupmobile builds the closest priced six on the market.

Body features recently added include color options, metal ball-back body for closed cars, cushions upholstered in genuine mohair, contrasting reveals around all windows, and remote control handles on closed cars. Genuine plate glass is used throughout all models, including that in the patented vision-ventilating windshield. This, with the narrow pillar posts, affords clear vision in every direction.

Engine and chassis features include manifold heater; thermostat water control, lessening of the time necessary to bring the engine to its most efficient operating temperature; vibration damper, oil filter, gasoline filter attached to the vacuum tank, and a manifold specially constructed to provide equal gas distribution to all cylinders under high turbulence, during which the heavy particles are thoroughly broken up before reaching the combustion chambers. This manifold, with the heavy crankshaft and light piston and connecting rod assembly, acting in conjunction with the vibration damper, promotes the unusually smooth engine operation throughout the car's entire speed ranges.

Inside the car is noted the grouping of all instruments under one glass, indirectly lighted. Driving lights are controlled from the top of the steering wheel, with extra bulb fitted in the headlights for parking or driving on brightly lighted streets. The manifold heater is operated directly from the cash. In addition to shortening the warming up period it greatly reduces crankcase dilution. In grouping all dash gauges under one glass, the dash board is also conveniently arranged for the other controls.

To save ice and food in warm weather, tighten hinges and latches on the refrigerator, says the New York State College of Agriculture.

A collection of 38,000 birds, representing 40 years of collecting, has been given to the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History.

RIDING QUALITY OF WHIPPET HIGH

With the sale of the Whippet six reaching new high marks monthly, Willys-Overland dealers declare this popularity is partly due to the car's unusual riding qualities which are brought about mainly through the adoption of the low center of gravity idea in the construction of the chassis and body. The use of this design, engineers point out, places the weight of the car close to the ground and thus eliminates the vibration and top sway which is noticeable in cars where the body rides higher in the air.

The low center of gravity construction is a noticeable feature this year in all products of the Willys-Overland company, this type of design being adopted for all models following the success of the four-cylinder Whippet which made its first appearance nearly a year ago. Since that time many other automobile manufacturers have adopted the low swung design, admitting its superiority over the old method of construction.

The performance of the Whippet six over every type of road has justified the maker's claim of a remarkable road stability and riding comfort. This car is of the type that hugs the ground at all speeds, riding along smoothly and not jolted or swerved by road shocks which would be distinctly noticeable in a car of another design. Engineers see in this form of construction one that meets the demand of motor car buyers where power and speed are not sacrificed.

The Toledo manufacturer claims that the unusual popularity already attained by this 1927 entry in the light six field stamps it as a leader in its price classification.

Chrysler Cars Sweep Swedish Racing Events

Remarkable gains in Chrysler export business, which have been a consistent feature of the company's reports for months past and have recently been increasing faster than ever, are attributed by officials to the fact that at its price Chrysler quality surpasses foreign standards of motor car perfection, just as the same qualities account for the phenomenal success the company has registered in the United States.

Outstanding records in racing and endurance contests, which have been made by Chrysler cars in all parts of the world, are especially responsible for the appeal these cars make to sport-loving peoples abroad, the officials declare.

Among the most interesting of many such sport records reported to the Chrysler corporation in recent weeks are the detailed certificates regarding ice races held in Finland and Sweden during the past winter. The Finland races were held in Helsingfors under the auspices of the Finnish Automobile club. Eight Chryslers started in these races and seven won first places, with the eighth finishing second in its event.

In the one kilometer distance races at Helsingfors, Chryslers won first place in classes 6, 5 and 4 of group A and classes 5 and 4 of group B. In the 20 kilometer distance races Chrysler won first place in classes 6 and 5, and second place in class 4.

In Sweden Chrysler "70" touring cars won all of the first five places in the three to four liter class races; a Chrysler "6" was first in the two to three liter class; and Chrysler Imperial "80" cars finished first and second in the four to five liter class.

ANOTHER CHAMPION RECORD IS FORECAST

Toledo, Ohio, May 28.—Victory for Champion spark plugs at the 500-mile automobile race classic at Indianapolis Memorial day will make their 58th in major racing events in less than four years, it was announced here yesterday. Champion equipped engines have dominated race events the world over, both on land and water, throughout that period, it was stated. Only two major speed and endurance events have been won by engines using other equipment since July, 1923.

Experts here see a new 500-mile world speed record as practically certain if weather and track conditions are reasonably good. They base this forecast on the high speeds made in the two earlier 1927 major racing events, at Culver City, Calif., and Atlantic City, N. J., when the winning cars averaged 124.7 and 129.89 miles an hour, respectively. Leon Duray, in recent practice spins at Indianapolis broke all track records there by turning a lap at 119 miles an hour. The 1926 Indianapolis race was won at 94.62 miles an hour. The world record for 500 miles was made there in 1925 by Peter de Paolo—101.13 miles an hour.

Since July, 1923, motor car racing has achieved greater prominence than ever before, if the size of its crowds and its growing interest among motor car experts are a criterion. Since that time cars equipped with Champions have established more than 50 world records, until today they hold every recognized speedway mark in the world, regardless of distance.

According to R. A. Stranahan, Champion president, victory for a car equipped with that company's product is virtually assured, since practically every car is expected to be so equipped. Cars using Champions have won 28 of the 30 money-winning prizes in the last three Indianapolis races, he pointed out.

Thirty-nine states, Porto Rico and Hawaii now have forestry departments or other agencies to look after their forestry interests.

New De Luxe Essex Sedan Placed on Exhibit Here

An Essex super-six sedan de luxe, with a number of advanced ideas in body construction, is announced by the Hudson Motor Car company. Shipments on this new model have begun, and the cars are on exhibition in the display rooms of the Becker-Goldsmith company, Hudson-Essex dealers.

For the first time in motor car history, it is claimed by Hudson-Essex engineers, an "airplane type" of construction has been utilized, with aluminum panels fabricated on framing of steel. This unique construction is said to combine strength and rigidity of construction with lightness of weight. Even though this sedan is substantially larger and roomier than the standard Essex body types, the size has been obtained, it is declared, without excessive weight, so that standards of performance are entirely maintained. The body is manufactured by the Hudson organization in its own body plant.

"An interesting feature of this car," local officials point out, "is the curving contour. The whole exterior of the body is worked out in attractive proportions, and with the sides, top and back all rounded pleasingly into each other. Full advantage is taken of the higher hood and radiator of this year's Essex, so that the whole car is an attractive and handsome unit.

"The interior is finished with a completeness and richness to be expected in a de luxe type of car. Upholstery is mohair and velour. Among the fittings are a smoking set and an additional ash receiver, a dome light, robe rail, silken curtains on the rear and quarter windows, and a rear vision mirror. The car is equipped with special nickel-finished lamps.

"Essex has designed and built this car to top off its super-six line. This year's chassis has been received with such universal enthusiasm that a de luxe body was called for which would correspond with the custom built Hudson models. Admirers of the Essex chassis now have available to them an additional and distinctive type of body which is finished in the best degree of good taste and luxury.

"With the introduction of this body, Essex offers six car types—the open two-passenger speedabout and four-passenger speedster, and the closed coupe, coach, standard sedan and the de luxe sedan."

FALCON REPORTS HIGH GAS MILEAGE

Detroit, May 28.—(Special.)—While no attempts at record-breaking economy drives have yet been made by the engineers of the Falcon Motors company, builders of the Falcon-Knight Six, reports coming in from owners are disclosing averages well around the 20 miles to the gallon mark.

The first of these reports to reach the factory came from San Francisco, an owner in California making the 600-mile trip from that city to San Diego through the mountains at an average of 19 miles to the gallon in a new car.

A second report came from Montana covering a trip through the mountains over rough roads and in many places through snow, showing an average which tallied almost exactly with that made in California and which was slightly over 19 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Both of these trips were made without any advance preparations and were observed by the owners merely as a matter of curiosity. Neither of the cars had been run in and neither had shown 1,000 miles on the speedometer before the trips were started.

These mileage figures on new cars are attributed to the high efficiency of the Knight sleeve-valve power plant used in the Falcon-Knight in which the exclusive features of design give a high power development from the fuel.

Service Managers Will Hold Summer Meeting on June 2

The final summer meeting of the Atlanta Automobile Service Managers' association will be held Thursday night, June 2, at 7 o'clock, with supper on the roof garden of the Cecil hotel. No meetings are held during July and August.

Frank Fletcher, of the Martin-Nash Motor company, and C. H. Field, of the Autocar Sales and Service company, will lead a general, informal, round table discussion on "Operating a service department on the budget system. Harry Sommers, president of the Atlanta Automobile association, will be the special guest on this occasion, and will deliver the feature address.

FEATURE PROGRAM FOR AUTO OUTING

Athletic stunts and games scheduled for the annual outing of the Atlanta Automobile association on Friday, June 17, at East Lake Country club, will include races and other features, particularly for the young boys and girls, with prizes for the winners. Relay races, swimming contests, a horseshoe tournament and other similar events will fill up the afternoon for those who do not care to play golf or participate in the women's bridge party in the clubhouse.

The golf tournament is one of the big features of the occasion and a large number who expect to enter have already filed their applications in pairs with Clarence Knowles, of the Martin-Nash Motor company, who is in charge of the tournament. The women's bridge party will be held at the clubhouse in the afternoon. A number of prizes are being secured by the committee on arrangements and these will be divided among the various events.

Promptly at 6:30 o'clock the large crowd, which this year is expected to run up around 1,000, will gather on the grounds for the service of a special buffet supper, after which an entertainment will be provided at the clubhouse followed by a dance, for which one of Atlanta's orchestras has been secured.

BULGARIAN KING HAS STUDEBAKERS

In the garage of his majesty, the king of Bulgaria, there stand two Studebaker big sixes, ready at a moment's notice to be driven by the royal chauffeurs in the service of their owner H. R. H. King Boris. These cars are the personal property of the king, who uses them on formal and informal occasions.

King Boris recently used one of the Studebakers in overseeing the dress parade of the cadets at the Bulgarian national military school—the West Point of that country. The cadets gathered around the official royal car to pay their respects to their ruler.

LA SALLE SMAKE AMAZING RECORD

From anuary 14 to May 23, 10 LaSalle stock cars taken from the standard production line by the experimental department of the Cadillac Motor Car company have run up the amazing total of 376,629 miles.

In the month of February alone, four of these cars were each driven more than 25,000 miles, one car covering 610 miles in 10 hours. Since the average motorist totals, under ordinary driving conditions, about 10,000 miles a year, this remarkable mileage represents for each car two and a half years of usage crowded into one month's driving.

Taking half a dozen of these production line cars at random, the total mileage of each of these cars during the last four months as shown by mileage records kept at the factory are 26,328 miles, 45,652 miles, 46,276 miles, 41,650 miles, 19,565 miles, and 35,199 miles, respectively.

What this mileage really indicates is not revealed by mere figures, for the condition under which it was rolled up were far more severe than would be encountered by the private LaSalle owner.

Day and night, rain or snow, under the most exacting conditions at the General Motors proving grounds and on the open road, the cars are driven at abnormal speeds under the supervision of a staff of experts eager to detect the slightest sign of inefficiency or protest.

Among these cars were the two LaSalles that made the run from Detroit to Los Angeles and back in record time, and the car that hurtled the speed track at the General Motors proving ground at 105 miles per hour and which paced the Indianapolis race on memorial day.

Keep Your Furs the Cold-Storage Way

In a "Question and Answer" page conducted by a Washington authority this question and answer appeared recently:

Q. Does a fur coat keep better in a cedar chest or in a cold place?

A. A cool, dry place is better. In all skins no matter how well cared for there is a certain amount of decomposition going on. It has been found that cold air retards this process.

Sixth District W. C. T. U. Rally

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

The third of the quarterly rallies of the sixth district W. C. T. U. was held in the Methodist church in Griffin Tuesday, with the banner union, Griffin, for hostess.

At the request of the sixth district president, Mrs. D. A. Warlick, of Macon, the state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, presided. Fifty-four delegates from five unions in the district and five visiting members from Atlanta and two from Augusta were present.

A letter of commendation was ordered sent Judge William J. Tilson, of the middle district of Georgia, the prosecuting attorneys, those officers who collected evidence, and all who had a part in padlocking places in Macon where the prohibition law had been violated repeatedly. Appreciation was also expressed because Judge Tilson gave prison sentences as well as fines to prohibition law violators, for "if we are to have prohibition that will prohibit then we must have punishments that will punish for scofflaws," it was stated.

A letter was also ordered sent from the gathering to Georgia's two United States senators, Harris and George, requesting them to withdraw heir opposition to Judge Tilson's appointment to the judgeship.

Reports, talks, music, the dedication of a number of young children as prohibition recruits filled morning and afternoon sessions.

The visitors were cordially welcomed by Mrs. J. C. Owens for the Griffin W. C. T. U., Mrs. Eloise Jackson, of Macon, made the response.

Reports were made by Mrs. Wilbur H. Brown for Griffin W. C. T. U., Mrs. A. W. Voight, for Macon, Mrs. J. L. Lyons for Jackson, Mrs. J. N. Jossey for Forsyth, Mrs. J. B. Ridley for Zebulon, each showing a gain in membership and gains along several important lines. All reported that Temperance day was observed in the schools in their several counties.

The morning's session began with devotionals, led by Mrs. Frank T. Vincent, of Macon, which created a spiritual atmosphere for the day's proceedings. Miss Julia Goodall, musical director, led in singing patriotic temperance songs written for the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. R. H. McDougall, Jr., of Atlanta, state secretary of the Loyal Temperance legion, the children's branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, enthused her hearers by her earnest, optimistic presentation of the value of temperance training in the L. T. L. to such an extent that the immediate organization of four new legions were promised and she also secured 22 subscriptions for the children's temperance paper, "The Young Crusader."

State Conference Here.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, the state president, told of the plans for a state W. C. T. U. conference to be held in Atlanta July 6 and 7, modeled after the national conference which was held in Washington early in the year. The state legislature will be in session, and one feature of the conference will be a banquet at which the W. C. T. U. in each senatorial district will entertain their representatives and state senators. Among the speakers of prominence will be Mrs. Nell Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., and national recording secretary.

All the way around the world at noon each day W. C. T. U. members pray for the overthrow of the liquor traffic, this prayer was led by Mrs. Martin A. Wood, of Macon.

A vocal solo by Miss Julia Goodall was followed by an elucidating Christian citizenship talk by Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, in advocacy of women registering and voting. Her logic and clear-cut statements made a favorable impression.

Mrs. Mary F. Stewart discussed another phase of citizenship, that of cooperating with law enforcement officials, by conferring with them as to the way to help them, by supporting faithful officials in the performance of their duties, by personal letters of commendation to judges, editors, to all public officials, who by precept and example, are helping to win the fight against an illegal business, by stressing the fact that law observance is incumbent upon all citizens as a patriotic duty, since those who sell are dependent for customers upon those who buy and those who buy are helping to finance the illegal liquor traffic.

At the close of her talk it was decided to send the letter of appreciation to Judge W. J. Tilson and those of his court who have rendered such signal service for prohibition in Macon by padlocking and prison sentences in addition to fines for those who flagrantly violated the prohibition law.

A letter was also ordered sent to Senator W. J. Harris and Senator W. F. George, asking them in behalf of law enforcement to withdraw their objections to the appointment and confirmation of Judge Tilson to the judgeship. Both the state and district presidents and others lauded Judge Tilson's methods of dealing with scofflaws.

In a talk on W. C. T. U. preparedness and publicity, the state director of publicity and editor of the state W. C. T. U. paper, "The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin," Mrs. August Burghard, of Macon, urged the greater use of W. C. T. U. tools which she listed as W. C. T. U. literature, leaflets, posters, books, state and national papers.

"Know the objections to prohibition in your community and be prepared to answer them," she advised. "Know the kinds of business carried on in places formerly occupied by saloons; know the facts as to what prohibition has accomplished. Enlist the public through a campaign of education whereby the facts in regard to prohibition through the press and platform, by placing historic and reference temperance books in all libraries public and private, distribute W. C. T. U. literature freely and systematically, and report W. C. T. U. activities through local papers."

Mrs. O. L. Taylor, of Atlanta, president of the fifth district W. C. T. U., and Mrs. N. C. McPherson, of Atlanta, president of the Fulton county W. C. T. U., responded to a request for helpful suggestions and resultant plans.

Just before the fraternal circle was formed and the W. C. T. U. benediction repeated in concert, a number of mothers brought young children to be dedicated, promising to bring them up in the W. C. T. U. principles of prohibition, purity and peace. The white ribbon was tied on the wrist of each child by Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Warlick and Mrs. McDougall. Miss Goodall led in singing "His Jewels," and Mrs. Vincent prayed for the parents and children.

They were Donald Faulkner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner; Ed Scales, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Scales; Robert and Ruth Hunter, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hunter; Betty Cosby Mixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Mixon; Betty Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Hammond; Patricia Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cox; Fred and Thomas Wilson, twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Wilson, and Lamar and Charles White, sons of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. White.

The next rally will be held in the sixth district in Macon in August.

Do you feel like going back to bed?

AFTER YOU have dressed your children, fed them, and sent them off to school, do you feel like going back to bed? Do you shrink from your daily task of dish-washing and house-cleaning? Are you tired? Discouraged?

Many women have found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for that tired feeling. It builds up the appetite. It induces natural sleep. Read what these two women say about it.

GAINED 18 POUNDS

Cleveland, Ohio:—"After having my first baby I lost weight no matter what I did. I went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble." Mrs. M. Reissinger, 10004 Nelson Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

NERVOUS SPELLS GONE

One day a little booklet was left on my porch and I read it through. I found a case similar to mine. I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have had fine results. Now housekeeping doesn't tire me." Mrs. Jack Lorberter, 704 Dellwood Place, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Flood Relief Needs Children's Garments

Three hundred children's and infants' garments are needed to make up the quota of 1,500 articles the Needlework Guild has set itself for this week.

Mothers whose own little ones keep them at home unable to join in the affiliated work of the guild will feel especially the need of the children and will be glad to know that the work of making the garments is so simplified that the most inexpert can make five or six in a very short time at home.

Garments ready for making with all necessary material for home work can be procured at the hall of the Woman's Benefit association in the McKenzie building which will be the headquarters for the relief work until the end of next week.

"Yokohama Maid" At Egleston Hall.

Mrs. Eunice Curry Prescott presented her voice pupils in a Japanese operetta, "Yokohama Maid," at Egleston hall, Thursday evening, May 26.

A cast of characters, whose voices had been beautifully trained, costumes brilliant in coloring and blending harmoniously with the Japanese flower garden stage setting, afforded a highly entertaining evening.

Honors for the occasion could be equally divided between the leading characters and the chorus. A number of Shrine chanters, Emory university boys, choir singers from All Saints' Episcopal church, all pupils of Mrs. Prescott, with the exception of two or three, made up the chorus of some 20 voices.

Mrs. Prescott directed the operetta, trained the voices and played the piano accompaniment. She was assisted by Mrs. Anna Harwell, violinist.

Mrs. Prescott, a Canadian by birth, is contralto soloist at All Saints' Episcopal church and has been a teacher of voice in Atlanta for the past six years. She studied five years with Arthur Hubbard, of Boston, Mass., and was associate teacher with Lewis Johnson, director of voice at Agnes Scott, for two years prior to opening her studio in the city.

The operetta was given for the benefit of the missionary guild of the All Saints' Episcopal church.

Al Fresco Reception Assembles Society at "Mont Rest"

In a charming al fresco setting with historic Stone Mountain as a background, the above group was snapped at the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Priestley Orme at their country home, "Mont Rest," Tuesday afternoon, the affair honoring their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hardin, whose marriage was a recent interesting event. The lovely young belles who received with the honor guests are, left to right, Misses Martha Worth Rogers, Eleanor Maude, Virginia White and Mrs. Joseph Fisch, who until her recent wedding, which took place at the same time and place as did Mr. and Mrs. Hardin's, was Miss Josephine Clarke. The beautiful figure below is Mrs. Hardin, who before her marriage was Miss Sally Kellogg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orme, and one of the most attractive members of the younger set of society. The charming photographs are the work of Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer.

"Club Openings Will Feature Week's Events

The center of things, socially speaking, will be moved June 1 out Ponce de Leon way where the Druid Hills Golf club opens its hospitable doors to the world of society. The club management has planned rather a gala day for its formal opening which is set for Wednesday.

Beginning with a golf tournament at noon, an interesting and varied program has been arranged. Twelve o'clock will mark the formal opening of the swimming season and club members will take their first dip in the cerulean blue depths of the handsome pool.

At 6:30 o'clock the gentlemen golfers will be joined by their wives and a number of lady visitors and friends for the old-fashioned southern barbecue which will be served on the club terrace and on the attractive club grounds surrounding the barbecue pit. In a charming alfresco setting, the tables will be ranged in tempting array and society will assemble en masse for the delightful event. Never have the club grounds and terraces been lovelier than at the present time with the wealth of blooming shrubs, trees and flower boxes.

During the evening dancing will be enjoyed in the ballroom and lounge, a popular orchestra presenting a program of late music for the dancing.

On the same date the roof garden of the handsome new Atlanta Athletic club will stage its formal summer opening with an elaborate dinner-dance. This beautiful altresco affair will inaugurate the program of weekly dinner-dances planned for each Wednesday evening by this popular club during the summer season.

The East Lake club, country home of the Atlanta Athletic club, will be the scene of informal dinner-dances each Saturday evening during the summer.

W. E. Richardson, who will continue as the popular manager of the Athletic and East Lake clubs, requests members to make reservations early for the opening of the Athletic club roof garden.

Garden Hills Swimming Pool Officially Opened.

The opening of Garden Hills swimming pool, operated by the Garden Hills Riding and Swimming club on Saturday afternoon, was largely attended by members and north side residents who have availed themselves of membership in this organization. Music was furnished by an orchestra and a number of swimming parties of Atlanta's social set were a feature of the opening day.

The pool is located at the intersection of Rumson road and Pine Tree drive, in one of the most picturesque settings of this attractive property. It is almost entirely surrounded by huge original growth trees, although many shrubs and flowers have been added to enhance the charm of its appearance and is one of the largest concrete pools in Atlanta. Every precaution has been taken to safeguard the health of members. The initial filling of the pool is from city mains.

The management of the corporation announces until June 1 the pool will be open to all residents of Garden Hills and acceptable north side property owners. After this date admission to the pool will be by membership card only.

The Garden Hills Riding and Swimming club has a membership of over one hundred. It has taken a prominent part, not only in water sports, but has to its credit the successful staging of two horse shows, which attracted not only hundreds of spectators, but occasioned bringing to Atlanta over a hundred of the finest saddle horses in the south.

Circulo Espanol Meets With Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt.

The Circulo Espanol was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hoyt, Jr., in their home, 581 Myrtle street, N. E., last Thursday. Assisting them in the entertainment of their guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Brown Hoyt.

Mrs. J. E. Campbell, president, presided at the meeting. The session was devoted to the study of noted Spanish paintings, the work of Velazquez and Murillo being particularly emphasized. Through the courteous cooperation of the Cole Book company there was arranged an interesting exhibition of the most famous paintings of these two artists. Following an inspection of this gallery, the technique of Velazquez and Murillo was discussed by members of the circulo.

Among the Velazquez subjects shown were Las Meninas, Duque de Alba, portraits of Philip IV and his little son, Principe Baltasar Carlos, and other members of the royal family. Among the Murillo paintings were noted the Immaculate Conception, Vision of St. Anthony, Virgin of the Rosary, Children of the Shell, Fruit Venders and many of his larger paintings.

An entertaining contest on the identity of these pictures was then held. The prize, a Velazquez picture, was won by Richard Morenus, who succeeded in naming all titles but one.

The Circulo Espanol welcomed Mrs. Marguerite Hamlett, a new member, who was sponsored by Mrs. J. E. Campbell. Mrs. Hamlett speaks Spanish fluently, having spent much time in countries of Latin America.

This was the last meeting of the Circulo Espanol before September, as quite a number of its members, among others Mr. and Mrs. George A. Bland, plan to visit Spain during the summer.

The Circulo Espanol is one of Atlanta's youngest organizations, having sprung into existence with the new year. Its purpose is a study of cultural Spain, and a mastery of the Spanish language, in which all programs are given. In the recent wonderful welcome accorded President Machado of Cuba, the Circulo Espanol had the honor of playing a part by having awaiting President Machado in his suite at the Biltmore a cluster of exquisite roses, accompanied by a cordial greeting in his own tongue.

'Spirit of State Federation' Is Mrs. Richardson's Theme

The "Spirit of the Federation in My State" is the theme of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson's address to be given at the biennial council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs held next week in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. Richardson is director for Georgia in the general federation and leaves Sunday for Grand Rapids. Her report is as follows:

The time has been, in all the states when the general federation like the national government was a thing apart, something afar off, which, in a measure, affected our club life, and to which we were expected to be loyal, but with which we had no intimate association. Now, all this is changed, and in Georgia the appreciation, the leaning towards rather than away from it increases daily, until at present every community general federation consciousness grows stronger each day.

Causes Numerous.

The causes for this are numerous: (1) Universal membership. Until each club felt itself a vital part of the organization, was in fact a real unit of the whole, there was the all-absorbing local interests which could be neither sidetracked nor inclusive. Universal membership suggests nation-wide interest, and the realization that the general federation is mine, is yours, that the great mother of all clubdom stands ready to help the feeblest of her children. With true mother love and understanding even their childish problems become hers and particularly the local difficulties, the more easily solved.

(2) Dissemination of knowledge, through The Federation News, which goes to every club, and which, portraying club conditions from every part of the United States, brings a unifying of thought, a solidarity of purpose which means power. Georgia recognizes this.

(3) Personal contact: The visits of the general federation officers from time to time, like that of Mrs. John D. Sherman, who, at Albany, Ga., this year, became almost instantly "Mary Sherman," our loved friend as well as leader. The entertainment of the biennial council in Atlanta, which drew the women so closely together in an intimate club relationship which knew no north, no south, no east, no west.

The attendance of the women of the state upon the meetings of the general federation bringing back to the state the messages of inspiration which can come only from personal contact with those who have loved, who have overcome and who have achieved each in her own state what seemed only our own besetment. In Georgia the director has visited districts, individual clubs, county federations, district and state institutes; in fact, covering the entire state, personally carrying the message of the general federation. Her presence at all general federation meetings at which she was expected to represent her state, her constant contributions to the official organ of the state federation emphasizing and magnifying the general federation ideals of mutual understanding and helpfulness—this, too, has played its part in the spirit of the general federation.

Money Investment.

(4) The investment of our money: Our money (however large or small the investment), wisely placed, has brought to the state the result of the "bread cast upon the waters which returned an hundredfold." Paying investment of club funds is a potent stimulant to club spirit. Your director finds that the spirit of the general federation of Georgia is growing in strength, appreciation and power. Some of the reasons have been sketchily outlined, but over and above all the greatest reason for the growth and increase of club spirit in Georgia is that Georgia, too, has something to give, while she receives so bounteously. The almost universality of individual, civic, social and club problems binds the heart of Georgia's clubwomen to that of the smallest club in the farthermost outlying district, and as we overcome those difficulties how typical it is of women in organization life to want to pass along what she has learned in helpfulness. How regally we shall wear the title "The Empire State of the South," in clubdom if we may realize that our difficulties have been translated into inspirations for others.

This, I believe, is the great reason for the splendid growth of the general federation spirit in Georgia land, as we have followed quietly the mandate of that One who said: "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Vidalia Club Wins Gavel Offered in Twelfth District

The Vidalia Woman's club, of which Mrs. O. D. Warthen is president, was awarded the gavel at the district meeting of the Federated Women's Clubs, which took place in Dublin Thursday. The gavel is the symbol of excellence in this organization and is awarded annually to the club making the best report of the year's work. The Woman's club of Vidalia has held this symbol of excellent work on three occasions, the award this year being the second year in succession.

Mrs. Warthen, by her untiring efforts and splendid leadership, has endeared herself to the Vidalia Woman's club, and is a valued member of the state federation.

Report Given.

The following report was given at the twelfth district convention held in Dublin.

The Vidalia Woman's club was organized and federated in 1921 and has 48 members. The meetings, both business and program, are held twice each month at the scout house. In addition to the usual standing committees the club membership is divided into four finance committees to work for the clubhouse fund. The president offered a hand-painted picture to the most successful and the club offered a prize to the committee having the best attendance record. All local, district and general dues have been paid in full and $31 to Tallulah maintenance fund.

Representatives have attended state council meetings, district conventions and board meetings. President Mrs. Olee D. Warthen, being a member of the state board, has brought to the club reports from three state executive board meetings. She has organized and helped federate one new club in Talbotton in the fourth district. Club members are 100 per cent registered and a very active committee worked for the ratification of the bill requiring that all births and deaths be registered. Citizenship day was observed and two Bible programs given. There is a very active civic committee, observing Clean Up week, fostering civic pride, planting trees and shrubbery. The president was the guest of the Kiwanis club and made a talk on building a community spirit. The club has been trying to do that by inviting the scouts, Parent-Teacher association, president of Bronte club and president Kiwanis club to meet with them.

Puts on Programs.

The Better Homes committee put on two programs, stressing not only the home equipment and gardens, but character building in the home, recreation and hospitality. In one of these programs thrift was discussed by an experienced banker. This department conducted a cake-making contest and realized a nice sum for the sale of cakes. The committee on applied education has cooperated with district and state chairmen. The chairman of the local committee, who has been a member of the Toombs county board of education, met with the board and urged that an educational rally be held this summer. Their aim is to make Toombs 100 per cent literate. This committee gave a splendid educational program and has helped with library extension and other equipment in county schools to the amount of $26. In September a reception was given to the faculty and all of the teachers and ministers' wives are honorary members of the club. A gift of $25 was made to the scout organization.

The Better Films committee has done excellent work. The chairman has the privilege of helping the manager of our local picture house to select his pictures. Different types of the best productions have been shown. The committee assisted the scouts in getting a real scout picture and gave a percentage of the receipts of the box office. The home talent entertainments were put on during the year and a nice sum realized from a benefit picture. Special attention to music has been given on all programs and an Edward McDowell program presented by the music committee. The club has given two scholarships in the Vidalia public schools, one in oratory and one in music.

A presentation of an American drama was given by Mrs. Neese, director of oratory in the high school. Stressing and encouraging better oratory, music and art, we have frequently had pupils from those departments and our talented members appear on the program. The year book committee made a splendid year book, outlining entertaining programs in line with the club's working plan. Two programs planned by the general chairman, dealing with international relations, was given and the club has been kept in touch with all departments of the state and general federation parliamentary drills have been given.

Ellis Health Law.

The public welfare committee met before the Toombs county grand jury with a plea for adoption of the Ellis health law. Two programs were given. A well-known physician and surgeon spoke on the modern trend of public welfare work and the other dealing with community service work. Food, clothing and $5 was given to a destitute family. Aid was also given to three under-privileged children and a Christmas box sent to the war veterans' hospital in Augusta. Committees conducted the Red Cross drive, managed the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals and collected exhibits for the annual Toombs county fair. Reports of all meetings have been sent to the local paper and items of special interest sent to the club page. Reports were sent to district and state chairmen.

Mrs. Bartlett Makes Gift of Lot To Dallas Club

Mrs. A. L. Bartlett, of Dallas, presented a deed to the lot on which the Woman's clubhouse stands to the club as a memorial to her husband, the late Judge A. L. Bartlett. Mrs. C. B. McGarity, district president, made a talk, in which she told the purpose of the gift, and the president, Mrs. H. Y. Holland, accepted it in the name of the club. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Bartlett for this highly prized and very much appreciated gift and she also was made an honorary life member of the club.

The following resolutions were read and adopted by the club:

Whereas, Mrs. A. L. Bartlett in her desire to perpetuate the memory of her late husband, Honorable A. L. Bartlett, in so far as his interest in upholding civic ideals was at all times uppermost; and whenever the opportunity presented itself, showed a deep interest in the educational life of the community by giving of his services in various ways; and he recognized and expressed appreciation of the embodiment of these ideals in the purpose and work of the Woman's club; and Mrs. Bartlett, knowing his interest and concern for community service, and wishing to further his conception in these matters, has seen fit to purchase and present to the Woman's club the lot on which their clubhouse stands, reserving such space as described in the deed upon which to erect a memorial to Honorable A. L. Bartlett:

The club extends to Mrs. Bartlett sincere thanks and appreciation of her thoughtfulness in perpetuating the memory of the Honorable A. L. Bartlett in this way, which will be of such benefit to the community in which he lived such a full and useful life.

Mrs. C. B. McGarity, Mrs. J. F. Welch, Sr., and Mrs. Joe I. Matthews drew up the resolutions.

Tallulah Students Present Operetta In Auditorium

Tallulah Industrial school students presented "Miss Cherry Blossom," a finished operetta, as the climax to the graduation exercises Friday evening, May 20 in the Isma Dooly auditorium of the school, owned and maintained by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The operetta was presented by a company of nine principals and a chorus of twenty members, with Mrs. Henry Ledbetter, an alumnae and teacher in the school suggested and chose the operetta and with the cooperation of Miss Bertha Taylor and Miss Myrtis Stewart, accompanist.

Rustic effects, Japanese windows, seats and screens, made by the students to simulate a Japanese garden, wherein the scenes of the operetta were laid, were augmented by Japanese parasols, fans, kimonos and chrysanthemums.

Splendid Cast.

Miss Doris Young, as "Miss Cherry Blossom," displayed marked talent and brought grace and attractive personality and charm to the part. The role of "Komeko," the proprietor of a tea garden in Tokio, was sung by Julia Taylor, who is a born comedian and who brought full measure of humor in facial expression, acting and voice, to the comedy part for which he has a positive flair. George Edwards, as "Togo," a politician of high degree, presented a make-up which accentuated his part to as high a degree as the rank he was supposed to occupy. Margaret McGuire, Blanche Dodson, Edwin White, Ragga Duncan, Nell Mappin and Marjorie Cleveland, in the other main roles, contributed largely to the success of the play.

The chorus of Geisha girls, American girls and men displayed unity in work and gave sparkle to the performance. Ida Cochrane, Fannie Moore, Lella Albertson, Eula Barron, Marie West, Gladys Ledbetter, Annie Lane, Caretta Chipley, Agnes Ritchie, Levada Hix, Maud Ridley, Grace Lance, Hazel Trippe, Elizabeth Whatley, Frances Edwards, Edna Barron, J. T. Yearwood, Grady Nixon, Roy Nix and High Darnell composed the chorus.

Mrs. John F. Lester, a prominent musician of Macon, and a trustee of the school, cooperated with the teachers to weld into form the fine performance given by the students. The capacity of the Isma Dooly auditorium, which seats about 450, was taxed to accommodate the audience, many of whom came from as far away as Highland, N. C., to witness the exercises at the school.

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, former president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and a factor in the success of the school, was an enthusiastic visitor at this time.

Miss Anne Carrington Davis, presiding genius and principal of the school, believes that "beauty cannot be separated from education."

Mrs. John K. Ottley, of Atlanta, is president of the board of trustees and chairman of the Greater Tallulah school movement.

Augusta Club Holds Party.

A unique and delightful way of closing the club season was enjoyed by the Augusta Woman's club on Tuesday, May 23, when the members and their friends met at Hickory Nut lodge for a spend-the-day party. This charming resort is situated about nine miles from the city on the top of the South Carolina hills, overlooking a large lake formed by innumerable strong springs of clear, pure water. In the attractive rooms of the lodge cards were played, while the broad verandas were filled with groups sewing, chatting or busily making out committees and programs for the next club year.

Dinner was served on long tables extending along the west piazza. Place cards seated the outgoing and incoming officers at the center, where a large basket of flowers was placed, until the close of the meal, when it was presented to Mrs. David Nachman by Mrs. L. S. Arrington. Fragrant gardenias and bright colored spring flowers adorned the long table where the guests made merry while enjoying fried chicken, home-grown vegetables, ice cream and cake. Mrs. Guy Bowen, the newly-elected president, was honored in the first toast, which Mrs. Brenner called on all to drink, pledging her whole-hearted, loving service and a membership of 300 at the close of the next year.

The occasion was very informal, just a big family spend-the-day party, but Mrs. Nachman and Mrs. Bowen were much touched by the many expressions of love and appreciation voiced by all present. However, the greatest honor went to Mrs. J. S. Plaxco, the never-failing chairman of social events, who so carefully planned the day, just one of the many delightful affairs she has arranged during the past two years. Next year Mrs. Plaxco will act as treasurer for the club, which is assurance that business will have to come before pleasure. Prizes were given at each card table. Music and other diversions furnished by Mrs. Plaxco and her committee made it a day long to be remembered.

It was decided to meet during the summer at the home of Mrs. W. M. Smith and sew for the bazar to be put on in the winter.

A new feature to be added to the regular program is to spend 15 minutes of each meeting in "community singing."

A letter was read from Mrs. Settle and it was moved and carried that the club see the senator and representatives personally and urge them to support the bill to create a park commission for the state, and that the state reserve at Indian Springs be developed as a park. The study for next year will be, "Bible Types of Modern Women."

Bainbridge Club Plans To Build Clubhouse.

The Bainbridge Woman's club held the last meeting of the club year Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. C. S. Hodges, in Cyrene, the president, Mrs. Conger, presiding and gave a silver tea on the following Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Dominges for the benefit of the proposed clubhouse building fund.

The treasurer, Miss Olive Morgan, reported $418 in the treasury, exclusive of the recent donations to the building fund. The public welfare committee stated that a box of clothes had been sent to the needy and that magazines had been distributed to the prisoners at the county farm. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. Custer, reported that five of the resident women's clubs invited to join the Woman's club in building the new clubhouse, had already accepted.

E. H. Griffin gave an interesting talk on Georgia products day, May 31. He urged the club to cooperate in this state movement initiated by Decatur county. Several distinguished men will speak on this occasion here; a community sing will be conducted by Miss Elizabeth Gilbert and every effort will be made to make this celebration a big event.

The club members voted to dress entirely in cotton on Georgia products day. A large number of visitors were present to hear the program rendered by Mrs. Grim, Miss Bessie Mayes and Miss Mary Frances Hornsby.

The hostesses, Mrs. Hodges, Mrs. Conger, Miss Olive Morgan, Mrs. Wilmer Wimberly, Mrs. Davis Tonge and Mrs. Guy Overstreet, served refreshments at the conclusion of the program.

Indiana Federation Presents Mrs. White.

Mrs. Barum Heads Augusta Federation.

The annual meeting of the Augusta City Federation was held at the clubhouse Thursday, May 25. Reports of the outgoing administration showed that the year just closing had been most successful. The object of the federation is to furnish a clubhouse for all federated clubs in the city, and to undertake such work as calls for the united effort of the organizations. It is not the policy however, to assume any responsibility that can be delegated to a special club, or in which all clubs are not obligated. In this way overlapping is avoided, and a feeling of confidence prevails. In her annual report, Mrs. David Bloch, the retiring president, stated that the outstanding feature of the work had been the team work accomplished by the clubs as a whole, and the remarkable spirit of friendship and understanding that prevails. Each club pays one dollar per capita toward the running expenses of the clubhouse, but the various clubs as well as their individual members, make special gifts toward furnishing and upkeep, and and the federation unites in at least one annual undertaking the proceeds of which will hasten the day when a more adequate building will be erected.

Augusta feels particularly appreciative of the efforts of Mrs. David Bloch during the past two years, and the permanent advancement made under her gracious and wise leadership, after two strenuous years as president of the Philomatic club she was looking forward to a well earned rest, when the unavoidable resignation of Mrs. Charles Bowen as president of the federation, made her innumerable friends turn to her as the one best fitted to assume the great responsibility of entertaining the 1926 convention of the Georgia federation. In going out of office Mrs. Bloch still has many responsibilities resting on her; in the federation, the philomathic club, and in the Woman's club, having recently been elected second vice president of the latter.

The new officers elected need no commendation, being those who have served as presiding officers of their respective clubs, while no greater assurance of success and joy in service could be given than to say that Mrs. H. P. Burum has been elected president for 1927-1928. Mrs. Burum, who is probably the most dearly loved clubwoman in the city, will be ably assisted by the following officers: First vice president, Mrs. W. C. Kellogg; second vice president, Miss Anne K. Sancken; third vice president, Miss Alice Stewart; recording secretary, Miss Josie Radford; corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. M. Howard; treasurer, Mrs. A. B. Von Kamp; auditor, Mrs. Estelle Owens.

Mrs. Mellichamp's Report Features Tech High P.-T. A. Meeting

The report of all activities for the past year, given by the president, Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, was a feature of the Tech High P.-T. A. meeting held in the Military building of the school May 15. This being the last regular meeting of the year, reports were made and officers elected for the coming year. A sketch from the minstrel show given by the boys at the Woman's club auditorium was presented, and representatives from other organizations and activities at Tech High spoke to the members, explaining the plans and ideals of their clubs. R. N. Eckett, Jr., proposed a resolution, which was passed, that the association go on record as opposing any reduction of the salary of the superintendent of schools.

The following is a part of the annual report of the president:

"The library has been transformed into a most attractive, useful room. Curtains were made and furnished by the P.-T. A. One side of the shelves was installed by the school; the last side was generously donated by the Rotary and Mr. Horne, of the Horne Desk company. We now have six thousand books in the library, and it is a source of great help and pleasure to many boys. At the end of the membership drive, the association gave a supper in the Military building to the four classes securing 100 per cent membership of parents and teachers. Thirty-two dollars was given the boys to aid them in fixing up their baseball diamond. Thirty dollars was given Major Woodward to buy an instrument for the band. Through the courtesy of the forestry department of the Woman's club under Mrs. Herbert Choate a good beginning was made in beautifying the grounds on the Jackson street side with shrubs. Petitions in the interest of T. H. S. have been sent to both the council and the board of education. The president has spoken before the board of education in behalf of Tech High and has visited a great number of private citizens. Your president visited the planning commission of the city carrying to them your request that they correctly spell Ninth on the markers on the street of that name, it having been spelled incorrectly for a number of years, and this right at the entrance of one of our high schools. The association handled most successfully two rummage sales, thereby adding one hundred dollars to the treasury. Your president had charge of a wonderful exhibit of Tech High work in the basement of better homes No. 1, which was visited by thousands of visitors. This was a splendid advertisement for Tech High and the splendid work it is doing for our boys. In completing this year's work your president wishes to thank each and every one who has aided her and to beg each one here to get the Tech High spirit and work for greater Tech High."

The officers elected were as follows: Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, president; Mrs Vernon Shearer, first vice president; Mrs. G. R. Macnamara, second vice president; Mrs. George Haney, third vice president; Mrs. Garland Embry, fourth vice president; Mrs. T. C. Wesley, fifth vice president; Mrs. T. J. Wesley, recording secretary; Mrs. R. N. Eckett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. D. L. Wise, treasurer.

English Ave. P.-T. Honors Officials With Luncheon

In compliment to the graduating class of English Avenue school the Parent-Teacher association, the Fifth Ward Civic league and certain school and city officials, an appreciation luncheon was held in the auditorium of the English Avenue school Wednesday with Miss Lula L. Kingsbery, principal, as hostess. This affair was to acknowledge particularly the work and cooperation extended the school that made possible the completion of the school park and garden. The auditorium, the scene of the assemblage of guests, was radiant with baskets of spring daisies. The daisy motif was carried out in detail in all decorations and favors of the pupils' tables. Covers and favors were the handwork of the school children and were gifts from the low sixth grades to the departing classes. The banquet table, at which were seated the guests of honor, was especially lovely in flowers gathered from the school garden. Golden nasturtiums and varicolored sweet peas were beautiful compliments to the work of the youthful gardeners. Dainty butterfly baskets, to which were attached miniature diplomas that unrolled as the programs of the day, held nuts and mints. About the auditorium were placed the art and gardening posters, sand tables, bird houses that were prize winners at the recent Mayfair exhibition. Preceding the luncheon an address of greeting was given by Beatrice Hopkins, pupil of low sixth grade, followed by Carl Dickerson, who gave the response. During the luncheon a musical program was given by the school Harmonica club, directed by Miss Neta Scarlett; the Glee club, directed by Miss Carrie Lampkin, and by Miss Helen Butler, violinist. On the luncheon plates fresh beets, spinach, mustard and radishes temptingly testified that the garden project was a complete success. Mint for the tea also was gathered from the garden.

Miss Kingsbery spoke of her appreciation for the cooperation and friendship of the community and civic bodies. She particularly thanked the representatives of the city park and water works departments who gave such valuable aid in the garden work. Miss Kingsbery later introduced the following speakers: J. E. Bowden, of the Civic league; Allen Couch and Harry York, of city council; Miss Hattie Rainwater, supervisor gardening public schools; N. M. Rapp, of the water works department; L. L. Ransbotham, in behalf of the P.-T. A., presented Miss Kingsbery a basket of flowers.

During Mrs. Foster's administration many splendid features of parent-teacher work have been accomplished, as the following report will show:

In rendering the summary of the year's work, she expressed her appreciation of the cooperation and the support of all coworkers, which assisted her so materially in serving the needs of the school and the community. Faith P.-T. A. President Presented Handsome Gift

Thursday afternoon was the regular meeting of the P.-T. A. of Faith school. This was the final meeting of the year, and was featured by a splendid program, led by Miss Emma Wesley, principal, with the "Normal School" as the topic. The first number on the program was a trio composed of normal school girls, who sang very effectively, "Juanita" and "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton." Following this, the topic, "What the Normal School Means to—First, the Child; Second, the Student; Third, the Community, and Last, the City," was dealt with by the following teachers: Miss Jernigan, Miss Dickerson, Miss Stone and Miss Pollard. The subjects were discussed in such a manner as to give the audience a better understanding and a fuller appreciation of the advantages they are enjoying by having the normal school connected with the elementary grades. This concluded the program, but a very interesting and instructive talk was given at this time by J. P. Wall, one of the school's influential patrons, who gave some idea of the scope of the work being done.

Before the regular business meeting was begun Mrs. Simpson gave a short expression of the appreciation of the teachers and the members of association, of the untiring devotion which the faithful president, Mrs. J. P. Wall, has given to her office for the past six years, and presented her with a beautiful silver loving cup in honor of her service.

S. M. Inman P.-T.A. Elects Mrs. Perry For President

S. M. Inman School P.-T. A. held its last meeting for the year on Wednesday, May 25. The president, Mrs. A. L. Myers, was in the chair.

The youthful violin class, taught by Miss Lee, gave interesting selections accompanied by their instructor. These lessons are given at the school and show a great deal of study. Mrs. Patterson spoke a few words in reference to study of music.

Classes from sixth grades, Mrs. Snow's and Miss Carmichael's classes, sand several songs taken from the songs of long ago. An amusing farce was produced by Miss Carmichael's class.

A splendid council report was read by Mrs. Willingham Smith, Mrs. Marvin Perry, vice president, gave the recommendations from the last board meeting. All officers and chairmen made their yearly report.

Mrs. R. R. Ritchie spoke of summer reading classes. This is to be sponsored by teachers and mothers as leaders.

Mrs. A. L. Myers, president for two years, made her yearly report. Her splendid work has inspired many women to effort, and made the S. M. Inman school a real factor in P.-T. A. work.

Mrs. Albright, principal, in behalf of the mothers and teachers presented Mrs. Myers with a beautiful shoulder bouquet in appreciation of her work.

Mrs. Fort Land, Mrs. Alfredo Barilli, Jr., and Mrs. Fletcher Maffett, and others present, spoke a few words in appreciation of the work of outgoing president and officers.

Hapeville P.-T. A. Elects Officers At Final Meeting

At the Friday meeting of the Hapeville P.-T. A. the annual election of officers was held and a summary of the past year's work given. Mrs. W. M. Schneider was elected president; Mrs. P. T. Reddick, vice president; Mrs. W. M. Walker, recording secretary and Mrs. J. M. R. Warren, treasurer.

The year just closed has been one of the most successful of the entire organization, with Mrs. P. T. Reddick serving as president. Much constructive work has been accomplished in supplying books to needy children, lunches to undernourished children, a successful lunch counter has been operated, equipment for playgrounds and classrooms to the amount of about $200 has been purchased during the past year. A planetarium has been placed in the upper grade room at a cost of about $40.

The records show a larger number of members enrolled and better attendance than any previous year. Among the speakers of prominence at program meetings were Rev. Marvin Williams, Mrs. P. L. Jeter, Mrs. R. F. McCormack and Professor Ramsey. A social hour with refreshments at the close of all meetings has added much to the success of the administration.

The first grade room, with Mrs. D. W. Brown, teacher, won the prize for the most mothers present at the last meeting. There will be no meetings of the P.-T. A during the summer months.

All Saints' P.-T. A. Is Addressed by Dr. Singleton

The annual meeting of the P.-T. A. of All Saints' church was held Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Sims Bray, the retiring president.

Dr. Gordon Singleton, speaker of the occasion, gave a talk on "The Worthy Use of Leisure." Appeal was also made for a revival in this crowded present of the almost lost art of conversation.

W. W. Davison, superintendent of All Saints' church school, gave a report of the conference on religious education held recently in Rochester, N. Y., by the department of religious education, national Episcopal council. Sewanee, said Mr. Davison, continues to hold a place of leadership in the teaching service of the church, while the Sewanee summer school has taken high rank both as to scholarship and methods. Many teachers go from the diocese of Atlanta to take the course in teacher training, yet there is promise that for the coming term they will attend in even greater number.

Through Mr. Davison's report it was also learned that with the many Episcopal church schools in the United States that of All Saints' is well and favorably known. It was known, he said, that with its 100 per cent standard of excellence All Saints' church school had won the bishops' banner, that 75 per cent of its teachers are trained and that its Easter offering amounted to more than $800.

Such facts as these were brought out in the Rochester conference as reported by Mr. Davison, but it was not until the Rev. W. W. Memminger addressed the meeting that the parents and teachers learned that the superintendent of All Saints' church school had been put in the national council's religious education board in an advisory capacity. A high tribute was also paid by Mr. Memminger to Mrs. Sims Bray's unremitting loyalty to the task during her term of service.

The new official board of All Saints' P.-T. A. follows: President, Mrs. E. N. O'Beirne; vice president, Mrs. Sims Bray; secretary, Mrs. Howard See; treasurer, Mrs. Sherwood Blodgett.

Boys' Hi P.-T. A. Meet Featured By Election of Officers

The Boys' High School P.-T. A. held its last meeting of the year Friday evening when reports of the various chairmen and officers showed the splendid work accomplished the past year. The ways and means committee, of which Ben S. Read is chairman, has been untiring in its efforts to aid Boys' High activities, and notable among its achievements is the formation of the Boys' High School Athletic association. W. V. Kingdon, chairman of athletics, also deserves much credit for the successful year's work.

Both faculty and association joined to praise the work of the hot lunch committee, Mrs. John Mullin, chairman; Mrs. Philip Essig, cochairman. This committee has done splendid work, serving nutritious hot lunches for five cents to the boys, and making a good profit as well.

Mrs. George Price and her library committee have done fine work and Mrs. W. L. McCalley, Jr., better films chairman, reported the work done that has brought cleaner, better pictures to Atlanta.

Brief reports also given by Mrs. J. T. Brice, telephone committee chairman; Joel Hunter, citizenship chairman; Hal Hulsey, for the dramatics committee and school publications; Mrs. Joel Hunter and P. H. Epps for the music committee; high tribute was paid Gaines W. Walter for his faithfulness and efforts in developing the B. H. S. Concert orchestra. Mr. Hancock reported for the military committee, and expressed his appreciation for the work done this past year by the officers and chairmen.

Major Gilbert Marshall, of the Fourth Corps area, was a guest of the association and spoke of the history of the C. M. T. C. movement and the principles of the camp training. "Better the Boy" is the idea of the entire camp, he said briefly.

George Powell spoke of the responsibility of holding public office, and the indifference the people at large to voting and their duties as citizens.

Mrs. George Price, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following nominees for the offices for the coming year: President, John T. Hancock; first vice president, Mrs. Henry Bauer; second vice president, Mrs. Joel Hunter; third vice president, Mrs. S. A. Visanka; recording secretary, Mrs. Richard Clark; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William L. McCalley, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Philip Essig.

The recommendations of the nominating committee were accepted.

At the conclusion of the meeting a vote of thanks was given the president, Mr. Hancock, for his untiring and faithful year's work.

Moreland P.-T. A. Reelects Officers at Final Meeting

The election of officers for the coming year and reports of standing committees featured the final meeting of the Moreland P.-T. A. Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. R. P. Smith, the efficient president, was unanimously reelected as were the following officers: First vice president, Mrs. M. R. Woodall; second vice president, Mrs. D. W. Durden; recording secretary, Mrs. Clarence Bell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. J. Hays; treasurer, Mrs. John Hurt.

Members-at-large to serve on the executive board are Mrs. H. T. Gordon, Mrs. Leonard Crawford and Mrs. T. R. Campbell.

A full report of the state convention, recently held in Macon, was given by Mrs. Durden, representative of Moreland. Mrs. W. J. Hays reported details of the district meeting held at the old Chandler Harris school. Of special interest was the fact that Moreland had received first prize for the best parent-teacher programs of the elementary schools.

Chairmen of all standing committees made reports which showed the result of many hours given for the good of the association. Among the outstanding activities as reported were: (1) That the standard of excellence placed Moreland in class A; (2) pre-school circle has registered 34 children; (3) subscriptions were placed for 14 magazines; (4) many books were added to the school library, including nature studies; (5) Moreland was represented at each district and council meeting and at the state convention; (6) assisted in the support of special class nurse; (7) provided teachers' lunches at every regular meeting; (8) needy families received the required assistance through the welfare chairman.

Of vital interest was the following statement by Mrs. Lillie Wurm, the principal, under whose guidance much has been accomplished: "During this year the children of Moreland school have taken a prominent part in all inter-school activities. At the Mayfair they won three blue ribbons, three red ribbons and three white ribbons for best posters, booklets, cut flowers and artistic flower arrangement. At the music memory contest, 198 pupils made 100 per cent. At field day they won the silver cup for boys' athletics, two silver buttons, two pairs of keds and the girls' pennant for bat ball. Our Junior Red Cross has been active in all the work of the chapter. Our Camp Fire Girls sold 138 dozen 'do-nuts.' They also have had the best attendance at camp fire meetings of any troop in the city."

The kindergarten children in costume under direction of Mrs. Albright and Mrs. LaFontaine, and the children of the first and second grades, trained by their teachers, Miss Dibble, Miss Harris, Mrs. Cloud, Mrs. Patterson, Miss Maddox and Mrs. Beeland, provided the entertainment of songs and dances.

Class prizes were won by Mrs. Beeland, first grade, and Mrs. Ivey, fifth grade.

Reiterating An Old Policy

A CHILD or any person with a limited or with no knowledge of Jewelry values can trade here with the assurance that they will get the same values and the same prices that we would give to an expert buyer. Every article that we sell or offer for sale must be exactly as represented. This is of especial importance in Diamonds where the slightest variation in color means a difference of many dollars, or in silver where an almost unnoticeable difference in weight adds to or takes from the correct selling price.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

CONCERTED efforts to prevent the razing of "Sutherland," for many years the home of General John B. Gordon, of the Confederate army, and to preserve this famous old Kirkwood landmark as a shrine for future generations, brings to the fore the fact that Janet McLeay, a theatrical celebrity, who recently won her laurels as leading lady of that recent Broadway hit, "An American Tragedy," was born just 20 years ago in this historic southern mansion. Hanging on the walls of her dressing room in the Longacre theater in New York is a framed photograph of the picturesque house for which she possesses a great sentiment. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. McLeay resided in Atlanta for several years, leasing "Sutherland" during one summer, where their daughter first opened her sky-blue eyes. She grew to beautiful childhood, fairy-like and ethereal in appearance, with lily-white skin, and long, golden curls hung far below her waist.

When she was ten, her parents moved to the metropolis, and Miss McLeay, who is brilliantly educated, a linguist, a musician of taste, and a very gifted person, developed a decided dramatic talent. It was an inherited one no doubt, because her father's brother was for many years leading man with Wilson Barrett in England, while a paternal aunt was on the stage in Canada. After graduating from the Scudder school, she took up dramatic art, but, her family had no idea she was serious in her work. It required some persuasion on Miss McLeay's part to finally gain her father's permission to try to secure an engagement. He humored his ambitious little girl, never dreaming that an unheralded and unknown person could secure a try-out when hundreds of older actors were without work. He told her that a number of prominent actors were his patients, and through them he would bring influence to bear upon the subject. But this was not to the liking of Miss McLeay. She was desirous of achieving success through her own efforts.

And she did. She played the part of "Bella Griffiths," in the "American Tragedy," with great distinction and charming understanding for several months, a role quite different than most stage flappers, as she was required to intone her lines and draw out the final word of each line with a decided drawl. It was Miss McLeay's creation of the character that won praise from the critics. Then came her great moment. She had studied every move and gesture of the blonde, rich and beautiful "Sondra Finchley," and when the regular player was stricken ill one day stepped into the role she had understudied at the evening's performance. So satisfactorily did she read her lines, that three days later the part was given her permanently.

Thus it was Janet McLeary overcame the superstition that an understudy never secures an opportunity of playing the role she studies and became famous overnight on Broadway in the play Patrick Kearney made from Theodore Dricer's novel.

Even in New York, the largest city in America, she is a great favorite. She sings and dances as well as she acts, possesses that indescribable something called personality, and her beauty is a natural inheritance from a very beautiful mother.

When the play closes for the summer Mrs. McLeary and her talented daughter will sail for Europe to enjoy the pleasures of a nice rest and vacation, so that the little actress who holds Atlanta in affectionate regard may take up her work next fall with renewed energy.

THE WORLD of society is teeming with rumors of engagements, of weddings; and even the most prosaic of us turn interested ears to bits of gossip and sentiment that that down to us on our uninteresting levels.

Wafted on ocean breezes comes news of a romance that soon will blossom under romantic Italian skies. The story revolves around one of the city's most popular widowers and a charming widow from the city made famous by Henry Ford, whom Atlantans remember from her first visit by her queenly dignity, her form divine and the mass of lovely gray curls completely covering her aristocratic head. The gentleman in question is no less prominent in the financial world than he is in social circles, being president of one of the city's strongest banks and a member of all the social clubs. When in the city he maintains a handsome home for his two splendid sons, one grown to manhood and the other fast approaching 21.

Sailing in March for an extensive tour of the continent in the delightful company of his sons, he first met the object of his affection, who also is traveling in Europe, in Naples. Under the romantic spell of the Canal City, the attachment ripened and rumor says that the next meeting will take place in Paris. There the knot will be tied and Atlanta society will gain in unmeasured degree by the acquisition of so charming a creature.

LAST WEEK saw the departure for the Pacific coast of Mrs. Eugene Black, Jr., president of the Atlanta Junior League and Mrs. Philip Wilcox, bound for Portland, Ore., to attend the annual conference of the national league. Owing to the increased size of the organization, each branch is allowed but two delegates, as it was found impossible for the hostess league to house the visitors except at hotels, which exigency the league desires to avoid.

En route from Atlanta Mrs. Black stopped in Chicago to visit Mrs. Marshall Diggs, the former Miss Alice Muse, and the Chicago league kept open house at the Casino club for the delegates en route to Portland, entertaining them at luncheon, tea and dinner.

A special Junior League train left Chicago, making stops at Minneapolis and Spokane, social festivities being planned in each of these cities for the visitors.

Mrs. Black and Mrs. Wilcox expect to return through Yellowstone park.

ANOTHER ROMANCE in which Atlantans are vitally interested concerns a gentlemen and a lady whose views of life are rather more retrospective than introspective—that is to say that they are enjoying the calm of middle age after lives of usefulness as two of the city's most prominent and beloved citizens.

The wedding date is set for June and an extensive European tour will follow. Broad culture and a deep appreciation of the finer things of life form a basis for congeniality and companionship and we bespeak for them much happiness.

Both have experienced the departure from this life of a former mate and the lady is grandmother to a group of adorable grandchildren. Petite and trim and brunette, her attractiveness is in direct contrast to the stalwart height of her fiance, who always is as well groomed as she is dainty and chic.

AS A SENIOR steps upon the threshold of life, that is the time, in the judgment of those who are wisest, for this confident young miss to look ahead. In this business of seeing farthest the seniors of St. Joseph's hospital—that is, judging by the prophecy that was read recently at the commencement exercises of the hospital—are most proficient, and at least give evidence that they intend "cutting a figure" in the world some day.

Every prophecy is a story built somehow out of the dreams and the knowledge of one precocious member. The story of the nine young graduates at St. Joseph's begins on a railroad train when a sedate senior of 1927 has unexpectedly changed her identity (none but those nearest, in fact and in feeling, would ever recognize her) into that of sedate Madame Estelle Martine di Frustini—no other than Estelle Martine, one of the nine of 1927. Across the isle a woman is reading something worldly; it must be by the look.

"My gracious! the world has certainly changed. Sister Loyola would never have approved of that."

The name of Sister Loyola cements the friendship of two old classmates and gives a glimpse of each of the members of the class of '27. A weekend was spent with Doyle Savage, whose son, Alphonse, is to marry the daughter of Marie Riordan McElhanes. Marie Bell is now (many years to come) the superior of St. Joseph's; Gillie Lowe is an instructor of science in Germany; Agnes Humphries, who back in the old days at St. Joseph's always wished her suitors a "bon voyage" S. S. America, is O. B. supervisor in the Chicago General hospital. Phena Harvell is still as wonderful a nurse as ever; she was Dr. Julian Gladstone Riley's favorite. And so these two old acquaintances have a look at the comrades of years ago until the porter, Sam, who himself played his part at St. Joseph's, announces the next stop.

The history and prophecy of the school, written by Miss Margaret Brooks, included the following hits: "We wonder if Miss Marie Bell has found out the meaning of P. D. Q.?" "Why does Miss Agnes Humphries always wish her suitors a 'bon voyage' S. S. America?" "Miss Alma Smith explains that all that is necessary to obtain a box of Whitman's samples from a Grady interne is a dark corner and a masterful man." "Say, Miss Martine, did you put the Macintosh in the bed?" "Miss Phena Harrell, Dr. Julian Gladstone Riley's favorite nurse—a real recommendation in itself." "Dot Savage entered somewhat tardy, but through no fault of her own." When Miss Marie Riordan failed to write the night orders, Miss O'Kelly asked, 'Sister what are the vacant rooms'—that's Marie Riordan, that's Marie Riordan." "The student nurses want to know what kind of chickens shine is taking such an interest in Larnett, Ala." "Gillie Lowe, Gillie Lowe, go into the laboratory and pray."

"BY THE SIGN ye shall know them," is truly applicable to one of Atlanta's prettiest 1926-'27 debutantes. We noticed only a few days ago a sparkling jewel adorning the fourth finger of the left hand of this beautiful brunette, who resides with her parents on Atlanta's most fashionable road. The question is: Who is the lucky man? Even her sisters of last winter's Debutante club are puzzled. It is understood that for many months an out-of-town admirer has sought the hand of the fair belle. But we who have loved her since childhood believe that her heart has been won by the popular Atlantan who is a graduate of the state university and is prominently identified with insurance circles.

CHRIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH in Macon, built over 102 years ago, associated for generations in the family of Mrs. Devries Davis, was chosen by her daughter, Mrs. James Whit Blakeney, in which to plight her troth recently, for as far back as 1868 the Chesneys have worshiped in this edifice, her maternal grandfather, the late T. O. Chesney, being for many years its senior warden.

Fashionable society foregathered there last week at high noon to witness young and beautiful Miss Devries Davis wed Mr. Blakeney, an aristocratic South Carolinian, residing in Atlanta. One of the most interested spectators at the ceremony was "Mammy," the beloved servant of the bride, her mother and maternal grandmother, dressed in black, offset with snowy linen cuffs, collar and cap. She made the trip from Florida to see her "baby" married, her affection for the family existing through a period of many years.

"Mammy," whose real name is Annie Chatman, was born in Thomaston, reared in Griffin and cooked in the home of Mrs. Blakeney's grandparents, the T. O. Chesneys. When Miss Theo Chesney married Devries Davis, moving to Atlanta, to make their home, "Mammy" helped to put their new home in running order, and was with them when the present Mrs. Blakeney opened her eyes upon this mundane sphere just eighteen years ago. And, when she named her wedding day in May, a special delivery letter was sent "Mammy," inviting her up for the auspicious event, as the bride had no idea of marrying unless this precious family servant could be there.

Mr. and Mrs. Blakeney are motoring through the Carolinas on their honeymoon, and "Mammy" is in the city with Mrs. Davis, assisting in putting the finishing touches on their apartment on Frederick street, and to remain with the bride and groom for awhile.

Mrs. Blakeney has enjoyed great advantages of travel, having toured her own country and those of Europe. She is a beauty of the Spanish type, with an untold charm of manner, but, with all the honors that are the rightful homage of a young woman of unusual grace and charm, Mrs. Blakeney isn't spoiled. She was one of the beautiful southern girls selected a year ago to make a screen test for the Paramount School of acting.

A CLEVER RUSE recently practiced by a popular Atlanta widow to prevent other designing widows from taking her beau has just come to light.

She had been relieved of two of her best beaux during the year because of her generosity in sharing them with friends. So, when a handsome gentleman from the east wrote that he was coming down for the Easter holidays, she kept it a dark secret. At the Biltmore tea-dance she only allowed him to dance with the married ladies. At the Piedmont Driving club dinner-dance, she was besieged with requests to be introduced to the distinguished looking visitor.

The ingenious widow told everyone that her friend was married and did not care to meet an one. When the dance was over, he had met only two ladies, one being engaged and the other belonging to the non-philandering married class.

RUMOR, that impartial bearer of the affairs of the elite as well as the less eminent members of the social whirl, is passing a bit of news along as ruthlessly as the manner in which the matter in question was done. Red hair, it would have us believe, is suggestive of things impulsive, a bit impromptu and out-of-the-ordinary, it would have us believe.

A certain young woman, the story goes, attractive and charming and just as capable of winning the affections of a tall brunette as she was in the days when she was a popular student at Washington seminary, has, if you would believe it, stolen away and been secretly married to the self same handsome young man.

Her mother, too, we continue to hear, is a Titian blonde herself. But rumor this time is as incons'erate as it is fleeting and refuses to tell us their names.

Another bit of news of interest that reaches our ear is the imminent marriage of a certain young Atlantan who is leaving a most attractive bachelor quarter, where, with three others, he has carried on in part at least that enviable existence of the other sex just to follow a pair of blue eyes and equally as charming bobbed brown hair. This fortunate young miss is as demure and as irresistible as the discriminating taste of her fiance would lead one to believe. Countless numbers, we hear, are wishing them "bon voyage" in the forthcoming adventure.

Miss Minter Wins Graphic Art Award In New York School

Miss Anita Yvonne Minter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Minter, 40 Rogers avenue, S. E., was graduated Friday from the graphic arts department of the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts, of which Frank Alva Parsons is president, and was awarded the Gloucester scholarship in recognition of her superior work as a student.

Miss Minter's many friends in Atlanta will be delighted to learn that she is expected in Atlanta the latter part of next week and will be at the home of her parents until the latter part of June when she will leave for Gloucester, Mass., to spend the summer in the Gloucester art colony for post-graduate study under some of the most famous commercial artists of the United States.

Miss Minter has specialized in poster work and has received several valuable prizes, one of which was for $50 awarded on a poster that she did the past week. She is a post-graduate of Girls' High school, of Atlanta, and attended Agnes Scott college, Decatur, for three years, specializing in art under Miss Louise Lewis, who is principal of the art department of Agnes Scott college.

Another evidence of the superior art ability of Miss Minter is the fact that she completed two years of the work within the first year, finishing third in the second year class, and that she won the highest honors of her class this year. The slogan, "Atlanta Always Ahead," has been justified again in the success of this talented Atlanta girl who went to New York two years ago to complete her training in graphic art.

Miss Beasley Weds Mr. Kiser At Home in Sarasota, Fla.

Sarasota, Fla., May 28.—Atlanta society is interested in the marriage of Miss Edyth Cofield Beasley, of Sarasota, Fla., and Marion Columbus Kiser, of this city, which was solemnized Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at "Whittier Estates," the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Myrick Beasley, which is situated near Sarasota.

On account of the recent death of Colonel William Lawson Peel, of Atlanta, the groom's grandfather, the ceremony was a quiet event, the Rev. Dr. Neighbor, rector of the Sarasota Episcopal church, officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, John Myrick Beasley, and the groom was attended by his brother, Lawson Peel Kiser. The bride wore an attractive navy blue georgette crepe costume fashioned in two pieces. The sleeveless bodice was made of white georgette crepe trimmed with white moire. White moire also trimmed the cuffs of the navy blue crepe jacket. She wore a smart hat of navy blue straw and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Attendants' Costumes.

Miss Helen Beasley was her sister's maid of honor and Miss Louise Arnold, of Atlanta, was the only bridesmaid. Miss Beasley was gowned in pastel green crepe fashioned along straight lines and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies. Baxter Maddox, of Atlanta, was the only groomsman.

Following the marriage service Mr. and Mrs. Beasley entertained at an informal reception. Mrs. Beasley wore a gown of white crepe with a shoulder bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Kiser, the groom's mother, wore a black costume with a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Mr. Kiser and his bride left for a cruise of the Caribbean sea. They will return to Atlanta, where they will make their home with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, on Paces Ferry road. Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, the groom's parents; Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser, of New York; Lawson Peel Kiser and Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Stephen Watts, of Charlottesville, Va.

Prominent Families.

The bride formerly resided in Atlanta and with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Myrick Beasley, moved to Orlando, Fla., four years ago, coming later to Sarasota for residence. With her sister, Miss Helen Beasley the lovely young bride-elect has enjoyed wide popularity in Atlanta and in Florida. She graduated from the Girls' High school in Atlanta, completing her education at Shorter college in Rome. She is a beautiful young girl of the Irish type, possessing a faultless complexion and deep blue eyes. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon Beasley, of Auburn, Ala., and Mr. and Mrs. Craig Cofield, of Atlanta, who are numbered among the south's pioneers, and have been prominently identified with the growth of the south.

Mr. Kiser is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, of Atlanta, and a brother of Dr. William H. Kiser, of New York, and Lawson Kiser, of Atlanta. His parents are outstanding figures in Atlanta's social and civic life. The groom is a nephew of Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Stephen Watts, of Charlottesville, Va.

He is a grandson of the late Colonel William Lawson Peel and Mrs. Peel, who were prominent leaders in Atlanta's social and philanthropic circles. His paternal grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Marion Kiser, were constructive figures in the south's financial realm.

The groom attended the Atlanta Boys' High school, going later to the Asheville School for Boys and graduating from the University of Virginia, where he was a popular member of the S. A. E. fraternity. He is a member of the Piedmont Driving club and the Nine O'Clocks in Atlanta. He is associated in business with the Dunlap Insurance company.

Bellengrath-Baker Engagement Is of Cordial Interest Here

The above photograph presents Miss Auwie Onesta Bellingrath whose engagement to George Claude Baker, Jr., of Savannah, is announced today. Photograph by Winn's, Inc.

Of cordial interest throughout the south and east is the engagement announced today of Miss Auwie Onesta Bellingrath to George Claude Baker, Jr., of Savannah, Ga. Miss Bellingrath is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leonard Bellingrath, of Atlanta, and comes of distinguished ancestry. She is of the Prussian family of Von Belling, which come to this country and settled in North Carolina, later moving to Atlanta, where their home was the center of the social life of that period. Various historians testify to the assistance given the Confederate cause by the elder Bellingrath, and the gallantry of his three sons remains a matter of pride.

Miss Bellingrath's Ancestry.

Miss Bellingrath is the granddaughter of the late Herman Bellingrath and Miss Ida Fuller, of Montgomery, Ala. Maternally she is the granddaughter of the late William Andrew Spinks and Mrs. Spinks, beloved pioneer citizens of Atlanta. She is descended from the Skinner and Campbell families of England and Scotland, and is also related to the Mappio family. She attended Washington seminary, later continuing her studies in New York city. In recent years she has made her home there with her brother, Charles Leonard Bellingrath, Jr., where she was a general favorite in literary and artistic circles. Her blonde southern beauty attracted wide attention in the east; a lovely compliment being paid Miss Bellingrath in the charming portrait recently made of her by the artist, Thomas James Delbridge, formerly of Atlanta.

Mr. Baker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Claude Baker, of Savannah, Ga., who are actively known in Sunday school work there. Mr. Baker, Sr., has been connected with the Virginia-Carolina Chemical corporation for the past 27 years, and is a prominent Kiwanian of Savannah.

Paternally Mr. Baker is the great-great-grandson of Rev. John M. Smith, one of the very earliest pioneer clergymen in this part of Georgia. The old Mount Gilead church and Mount Gilead campground near Ben Hill, Ga., stand as a memorial to him because he was the donor of this land and the organizer of this historic old church. As a young man he built and taught in the first school house in this part of Georgia. Later he held several public offices.

Mr. Baker's grandfather is John M. Baker, a beloved old citizen of Ben Hill, Ga., and a Confederate veteran who, though a young lad, did active service under the banners of General Lee.

Maternal Ancestry.

Maternally he is the grandson of the late Dr. Franklin Walters, whose parents were early settlers of Franklin county, Georgia.

Mr. Baker was graduated from Emory university in 1925 and is now a senior in the Candler School of Theology. He was president and baritone soloist of the Emory Glee club last year and during its concert tour of Europe. He is widely known as a radio artist, and is warmly known in musical circles of Atlanta for his church and concert singing. At Emory he is outstanding in the student body, being a member of the Omicron Delta Kappa honorary fraternity, of the Eagles club honor society, an honor roll student, is captain of the theological football team, and a member of the student activities council.

Sunbury Chapter Unveils Three Historic Markers

An event outstanding and interesting to all Daughters of the American Revolution was the recent unveiling of three historic markers in one day by Sunbury chapter, of Winder.

One commemorates the intersection of two old Indian trails, another the intersection of the old Milledgeville road and Bankhead highway, while the third marks old Fort Yargo, which was built prior to 1800.

At each marker an instructive program was rendered, with Mrs. W. H. Quarterman, vice regent, presiding. The flag salute was led by the Boy Scouts and several patriotic songs were rendered by members of the Coral club. Mrs. Frances Haralson, chaplain, offered prayer. Brief addresses were made by Rev. John H. Wood, Rev. Taylor Morton, Rev. George Barrett.

Masters Harold Jackson Fortson and Lewis Harper Williams unveiled each marker, while Masters Charles Maddox, George Holsenbeck and George Smith placed the floral offerings. It was through the generosity of Mrs. Henry Pledger, regent of Sunbury chapter the past three years, that these attractive markers were above-named markers to the chapter, erected. She not only presented the but was also instrumental in securing $100 from the state committee for the erection of a marker on the Jackson trail, thereby giving Sunbury chapter four historic markers within seven months.

Barrow and Jackson counties, with these memorials marking historic spots, have reason to be proud of them. They will stand for years and not only mark historic spots of the past, but inspire with patriotism and love those who are making history of the present.

The achievements attained by the chapter in Winder the past year have surpassed any of previous years. Sunbury has been on the state honor roll each year since same was created, and at the state conference this spring was the only chapter in the state to be awarded two out of six prizes offered.

Among many things the regent, Mrs. Pledger, presented along with the markers were a number of patriotic booklets to establish a lending bureau for the county schools, 500 choice fruit trees for the mill village and 130 yards of material for

Jewish Woman's Club Sponsors Better Baby Contest

The Jewish Woman's club held a successful better baby contest at its clubhouse, corner Clarke and Washington streets, Tuesday afternoon, May 24. There were about 100 babies ranging from the ages of one to five who were examined by Dr. Joseph Yampolsky, who recently has been elected president of the Georgia Children's society, who was assisted by Dr. Thomas Boling Gay. Children were given refreshments and, as a souvenir of the occasion, a rubber bib.

Gov. Martin, of Florida, Pays Homage To Valiant Leadership of Davis

The thought of civil war days and of the valiant leadership of Jefferson Davis is very fresh in my mind now because our state legislature is keeping alive and green the monument on our Olustee battlefields and is making more appropriations for those veterans and their widows who have so few days left with us. That Florida has no more scars than we have may be due to the courage of the soldiers of this and other states who served as a buffer between the opposing forces and our state. Certain it is that we as a part of the former Confederacy owe much to the memory of Jefferson Davis and the men who surrounded him in the days when he was leading the south and her people in their great struggle. The state of Florida, joins with Georgia and the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the commemoration of Jefferson Davis, one of the south's greatest characters.

JOHN W. MARTIN,
Governor of the State of Florida.

State President Gives Resume Of Confederacy Chieftain

BY MRS. OSCAR M'KENZIE,
President of Georgia Division.

One hundred and nineteen years ago, June 3, Jefferson Davis, the youngest of 10 children, was born in a big house in Christian, now Todd county, Kentucky. His father, a descendant of Welsh ancestry, was Samuel Davis, and his mother was a beautiful Scotch-Irish girl, named Jane Cook. Samuel Davis began life as a farmer near Augusta, Ga. Jefferson Davis attended school in Kentucky, and at Jefferson academy. At the age of 12 he entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. Here he was noted for his respect for his professors, and was, according to their testimony, "the most polite boy in college." He was "considered the brightest and most intelligent of all the boys as well as the bravest and handsomest." He entered West Point, and was only 20 years of age when he graduated there.

Studied at West Point.

In an address by Dr. Daniel Albright Long at Concord, N. C., June 3 1921, he says: "It was at West Point that Jefferson Davis studied 'Rawle's View of the Constitution,' which taught him that if a state seceded (showing that it was an acknowledged fact by the constitution that a state had the right to secede), the duty of a soldier reverted to his state. Hence, Davis, Robert E. Lee, Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson, Joseph E. Johnston, Albert Sidney Johnston and others acting upon his instruction, cast their lot with their state in 1861."

Abraham Lincoln was mustered into service (for the Black Hawk war) by Lieutenant Jefferson Davis, of the U. S. army. This is the only record that these men ever met or were brought in personal contact with each other. In the war with Mexico, Davis became a hero many times. At Monterey, he distinguished himself; at Buena Vista, he was wounded; he scaled the walls of the City of Mexico. Later he was elected United States senator, then became secretary of war in President Pierce's cabinet. When Buchanan was made president, Mississippi sent him back to the United States senate.

The first wife of Davis was Sarah Knox Taylor, daughter of General Taylor. His wife, with whom he eloped, lived three months. Eight years later he married Miss Varina Banks Howell, daughter of William Burr Howell. The life of Davis touches many southern states. His mother was from South Carolina, his father from Georgia, he was born in Kentucky, lived in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia and fought to free Texas. Men who had no special love for the south were forced to acknowledge the nobility of his character.

The New York World said of him after his death: "Jefferson Davis was a man of commanding ability, spotless integrity, controlling conscience and a temper so resolute that at times it approached obstinacy. He was proud, sensitive and honorable in all his dealings and in every relation of life." Charles Adams, a Union soldier and grandson of John Quincy Adams, said of Davis: "No fatal mistakes either of administration or strategy were made which can be fairly laid to his account. He did the best possible with the means he had at his command. Merely the opposing forces were too many and too strong for him. Of his austerity, earnestness and fidelity there can be no more questions than can be entertained of his capacity."

Davis in History.

What is the place of Davis in history? Ben Hill said: "He was the most honest, the truest, gentlest, bravest, tenderest, manliest man I ever saw." Prescott, the historian, who knew the history of Benton, Webster, Clay and Calhoun, was asked how Davis compared with these great senators. He replied: "Davis was the most accomplished." Ridpath said: "He was a statesman with clean hands and a pure heart, who served his people faithfully, from budding manhood to hoary age, without thought of self, with unbending integrity, to the best of his ability. All who knew him personally were proud that he was their countryman."

"Others won more laurels on the field of Mars. Rushed to the helm of the Confederate ship of state in a tornado, he proved to be the greatest combination of heart and brain which ever commanded 600,000 men and held out for four years against 2,800,000. Every year the tenderest hands will cull the sweetest flowers, weave them into garlands and deck the gateway through which Davis and his heroes marched to glory. The name of Davis will shine as a star of the first magnitude until the muse of history writes 'finis' with a pen of fire."

In the early spring, on a dark rainy day, on a U. D. C. trip to south Georgia, I passed through Irvinville, the town where Jefferson Davis is said to have been captured. A modern bridge spans a dismal swamp, where a thick undergrowth of cypress trees with distorted trunks grow in inky waters. A misty grey moss enshrouds the whole place. It is lonesome, dark and cold. A weird bird darts out, as if in haste to be away from a place fraught with such gruesome memories. It seemed a sad yet most eloquent mute testimonial of nature that the southland, and particularly the Daughters of the Confederacy, should hold in their hearts a vain regret that Jefferson Davis, our exemplary statesman and president of the Confederacy, has never received the honor and praise due him for the gallant sacrifices made by so intrepid a leader.

The prime objects in the founding of our great organizations were to care for, cherish and make happy our living veterans; to enshrine the names and lives of our Confederate soldiers in wreaths of honor and glory they so richly deserve, and to stand for the truths of southern history. Let us on June 3 renew our pledge of allegiance to these ideals of our great organization, and come with grateful hearts to the shrine of our great leader to place flowers of sincere appreciation, profound gratitude and honored esteem in the wreath of memory of Jefferson Davis, only president of the Confederacy.

1. When and where was Jefferson Davis born?

2. Who were the mother and father of Jefferson Davis and what states were their homes?

Jane Cook of South Carolina was his mother and Samuel Davis, of Georgia, was his father.

3. How many children were there in the Davis family? Name them.

4. Where did Jefferson Davis attend school?

His first schooling was in a little log cabin near Woodville, Mississippi, at the early age of 5. He next attended a Roman Catholic school, St. Thomas, in Kentucky at the age of seven remaining there two years. His father then decided to place the young boy at Jefferson Academy near home. At twelve he entered Transylvania college, Kentucky. Afterwards he entered West point, where he graduated at the age of 20.

5. What national service had he rendered the United States government before the southern states seceded?

He served in the Black Hawk war, in the war with Mexico, was United States senator from Mississippi, and secretary of war under President Pierce.

6. What position of trust did Jefferson Davis hold 1861-1865?

8. (a) What southern state first secured legislation to have Jefferson Davis' birthday, June 3, made a state birthday?

Georgia.

(b) What chapter of the U. D. C. performed this patriotic act?

The Margaret Jones chapter U. D. C., of Waynesboro, Ga., has this distinction.

9. What are the characteristics that made Jefferson Davis great?

"The gentleness, the force and strength of his character; his superiority to adversity; his superiority even to prosperity; his candor; his truthfulness; his fine sense of loyalty; his devotion to his country; his love for the union; his unyielding adherence to principle; his clean honesty, alike in private and public life; his freedom from malice and simplicity and purity of his life; his Christian charity—these are the things which made Jefferson Davis great.

10. Give a short summary of Davis the man.

"Summing up his life it will be found that Jefferson Davis was a gentleman, a scholar, a statesman, an orator, a soldier, a patriot, a philanthropist and a Christian.

"New Orleans at a quarter of one o'clock on the morning of December 6, 1889, the great heart of Jefferson Davis ceased to beat—a stainless life was closed!"

It has came to pass that the "men who wore the grey," the cause which Jefferson Davis sponsored, have been singularly honored by a precedent never before established in the history of the world—the issuance of a memorial coin by a government commemorating the valor of bravery of the soldier against whom they fought and over whom they were victorious, an act of which the south will ever be proud.

Though the nation can never erase its action in causing the arrest and imprisonment of President Davis and the failure to again accept him as an American citizen, this act was at a period when passion and hatred was at its heights and after 60 years, clear-minded, patriotic citizens of the nation issued a beautiful coin inscribed a "memorial to the valor of the soldier of the south."

Not only has a precedent been established in the issuance of the coin but also in the fact that the government allowed it to sell at a price double its face value of 50 cents that the additional amounts might be used in the carving of Stone mountain, a deserved honor to the Confederate government.

Governor Walker Honors Jefferson Davis' Memory

We who hold the reins of government as a sacred trust stand at attention on the day—June 3—that commemorates the birthday of the chieftain of the Confederacy. To one who ever held his head high under defeat we pay reverential respect, knowing full well the agony of suffering, of vanquished hopes and despair that the noble soul of Jefferson Davis underwent during the travail of the War Between the States.

Through the fiery trials of the desolate sixties his undaunted spirit plowed its way along the furrows of misfortune, injustice and oppression, and when the taps sounded the signal that his work here was done we know that the soul of Jefferson Davis fared forth to Higher Realms secure in its rightful inheritance.

May we emulate the example of this man whose memory we will ever honor, and may the blare of martial music which presages the passing of other souls over the Great Divide signify the patriotism which we reverence and which, please God, will ever be a law unto us.

CLIFFORD WALKER,
Governor of Georgia.

Mississippi is peculiarly proud of Jefferson Davis and the work of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in keeping our memories fresh and reminding the children of our southland of the sacrifice of its leaders is indeed a great work.

DENNIS MURPHREE,
Governor of Mississippi.

Last Official Escort Of President Davis Taken From Veteran

Following the interesting reminiscence by W. R. Bringhurst, of Clarksville, Tenn., of his association with the military escort of President Davis after the fall of Richmond, given in the Veteran, it is appropriate to give the names of the 10 men who were selected as the special escort of President Davis when the larger body of troops was turned back at the Savannah river. This list is taken from the Veteran of January, 1909, and was furnish ed by the late F. G. Terry, of Cadiz, Ky., who had it from "the gallant young lieutenant who was one of that illustrious band." Comrade Terry says: "It will be seen that five of the number were from Trigg county, Kentucky, which county furnished something like 400 men to the Confederate service."

The escort with President Davis when captured in May, 1865, was composed of the following men, all of whom were from company B, Breckinridge's second Kentucky cavalry: Captain Given A. Campbell, from McCracken county, Kentucky (not captured); First Lieutenant Hazard P. Baker, Trigg county, Kentucky; Private Harvey C. Sanders, Trigg county, Kentucky (he had a $20 gold piece received while on this duty); Minus C. Parsley, Trigg county, Kentucky (not captured); James T. Walbert, McCracken county, Kentucky; Harrison Smith, Lyon county, Kentucky; W. N. Ingram, Trigg county, Kentucky; Tom S. McSwain, Paris, Tenn. (not captured); W. L. Heath, Corbin, Ky.; W. A. Howard, Trigg county, Kentucky (not captured).

It would be interesting to know if any of these comrades are now living.

Miss Rachael Farmer Is Honor Guest At Party Series

Miss Rachael Farmer, a bride-elect of June, was honor guest at a bridge-tea given by Mrs. George Roerig on Friday afternoon at her home in Decatur.

Pink and white snapdragons and larkspur gracefully arranged in vases and baskets adorned the mantels and consoles, carrying out the pink, blue and white color scheme. A silver basket filled with pink and white snapdragons and larkspur, the handle tied with pink tulle, formed a lovely centerpiece. Pink candles in pink pond lily candlesticks encircled this.

The guests were Miss Rachael Farmer, Mrs. J. Farmer, Mrs. A. M. Farmer, Miss Hilda Muench, Miss Martha Branch, Miss Mary Lucile Pelot, Miss Mary Ellen Bennett, Miss Louise McCrary, Miss Martha Kroner, Mrs. Maynard Sanders, Miss Mary Patterson, Mrs. George Buckley, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Dorothy Cheek, Miss Mary Hughes, Miss Margaret Cochran, Miss Della Carlisle and Miss Lillian McCormack.

One of the prettiest parties in Decatur recently was the bridge-tea and handkerchief shower given for Miss Farmer Saturday afternoon by Miss Mary Ellen Bennett and Miss Louise McCrary at their home on Sycamore street.

Pastel garden flowers of many varieties adorned the lovely home, carrying out that color motif, which ran through every detail.

Following the game a shower of exquisite handkerchiefs was presented to the bride-elect in a unique manner.

Little Ida B. Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Sanders, entered dressed entirely in a costume of handkerchiefs and carrying an old-fashioned bouquet of handkerchiefs. After dancing the minuet for the delighted guests, Miss Farmer was requested to unpin the handkerchiefs which formed her costume.

Miss Farmer was gowned in lavender georget. Miss Bennett wore a white ensemble and Miss McCrary wore blue-figured georget.

Miss Weeks Honors Miss Estelle Gardner.

Miss Marion Weekes was hostess at a bridge-tea on Saturday afternoon at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue in Decatur in honor of Miss Estelle Gardner, a popular bride-elect. The color scheme of pink and white was beautifully carried out by using sweet peas and larkspur, also in the score cards and refreshments. Miss Clara Weekes and Mrs. W. H. Weekes assisted in entertaining.

The guests were Miss Estelle Gardner, Mrs. E. L. Gardner, Mrs. Joseph Green, Miss Gena Glenn, Miss Joyce Alexander, Mrs. Joe Oppert, Mrs. Homer Howard, Mrs. Jennie D. Finley, Miss Laura Barrett, Miss Margaret Neal, Miss Catherine Shields, Miss Rosilee Robinson, Miss Myrtice Brown, Miss Carrie Brown, Mrs. Eugene Kirkland, Mrs. Leon O'Neal, Mrs. Alfred Branch, Jr., Mrs. Hugh Flake, Mrs. Dan White, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Ed Lovelace, Mrs. William Christie.

Gov. Byrd, of Va., Sends Message To Jefferson Davis Edition

In issuing a special Jefferson Davis edition of its official organ the United Daughters of the Confederacy, through the Georgia division, pay just and well-merited tribute to the memory of one whose name blazes among the brightest in the annals of the western world.

Soldier, statesman, administrator, patriot, Davis has bequeathed the whole south, which he loved so well, a name and fame whose luster will not be dimmed by the passage of the years.

Secretary of war in the federal government, United States senator from Mississippi, president of the Confederate States of America, an orator of the first rank, a popular leader whose dignity and ability commanded the loftiest regard, of undaunted courage and born to command, the name of Davis ranks high in that galaxy of southern immortals, than whom there are none more worthy of admiration and of respect.

HARRY FLOOD BYRD,
Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

The commonwealth of Virginia through the medium of its governor, th Honorable Harry Floyd Byrd, reaches across the miles and joins hands with Georgia's governor, the Honorable Clifford Walker, to pay homage today to the memory of Jefferson Davis, the chieftain of the Confederacy.

While we realize now that there is no north or south in sectional feeling, the travail of the war between the states and the suffering involved have formed a close bond between the states which seceded, which nothing can sever and which blots out all distances making our southland forever a united body. While we all prize and revere Old Glory and ever feel the patriotic urge as it passes, yet when the loved Stars and Bars arrive, a different feeling of emotion grips our hearts.

Thus felt Jefferson Davis, the man whose memory we of the south revere on June 3. His allegiance to his flag was unfailing, ever he bared his head at its approach, and the ideals for which it stood were his shield and buckler. His unfaltering spirit, leading ever to heights unscaled called forth all that was most noble in his compatriots. Chieftain of our Confederacy, his unwearied spirit waged on and on through woe and disaster to bring laurels to the land he loved, and well may we pause to lay a little of rosemary on his last resting place. Rosemary for remembrance and blossoms of red and white, one emblematic of the flaming courage of his bravery, the other signifying the purity of his standards.

We Feature Genuine Orange Blossom Engagement and Wedding Rings.

Intimate Glimpses of Georgia's New "First Family"

The home life at Commerce, Ga., of Dr. L. G. Hardman, who will become Georgia's governor on the last Saturday in June, is shown in the photographs on this page taken at the home of the governor-elect, "The House by the Side of the Road," at Commerce. Dr. Hardman was born in a stone's throw of his present home and has lived in this neighborhood for more than three score years. He has one of the most beautiful homes in the state, which he built and designed himself. He set out all the trees, planted all the flowers and supervised the laying out of the grounds. He raises all the food he uses in his home on his own land. An interesting story of Dr. Hardman and his family appears in the news section of today's paper. (Photos by Francis E. Price)

GEORGIA'S NEW "FIRST FAMILY"—Governor-elect Hardman, his amiable and gracious wife and bright and attractive children will arrive in Atlanta about June 21 to move into the governor's mansion. In the picture (left to right) are: Sue Colquitt Hardman, Mrs. Emma Griffin Hardman, Miss Josephine Hardman, Dr. Hardman and Lamartine G. Hardman, Jr. The baby girl sitting at Dr. Hardman's feet is Emma Griffin Hardman.

FORSAKEN FOR THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—This magnificent home of Governor-elect Hardman will be left temporarily by the Hardman family during the time Dr. Hardman serves as governor. It is one of the show places of Commerce, Ga., and is the center of a beautiful five-acre estate. The great mountain oak tree was set out forty years ago by Dr. Hardman, who planted all the other trees on the place.

AT HOME IN THE KITCHEN AS WELL AS DRAWING ROOM—Mrs. L. G. Hardman, wife of Georgia's governor-elect, is a busy domestic supervisor as well as active in all kinds of social, church and charitable work. She is a gracious hostess and has made "The House by the Side of the Road," the Hardman homestead, famous for the cordiality albeit simplicity of its hospitality.

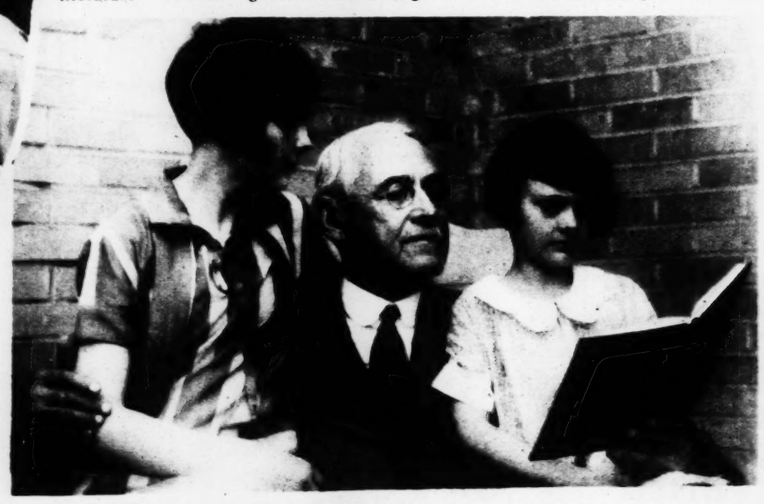

GOVERNOR-ELECT HARDMAN IN HIS LIBRARY—Although his activities as a manufacturer, banker, farmer, physician, business man and developer keep Dr. Hardman busy he puts all business aside when night falls and retires to his home for rest, recreation and reading. He reads reference books and prefers standard literature. The new governor has a large and well selected library.

Birthplace of Dr. L. G. Hardman at Commerce, Ga.

HERE'S "MISS MATTIE"—She will serve as personal secretary to Georgia's new governor, Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, but it will not be a new job for her. She has served as Dr. Hardman's confidential secretary in all his business activities for more than a quarter of a century. Known to everybody in Commerce and environs as "Miss Mattie," her full name is Mrs. H. C. Carrington and she is seen here with some flowers in front of her attractive home in Commerce.

THE STUDY HOUR AT THE HARDMAN HOME—Governor-elect Hardman in a customary pose with his daughters, Sue Colquitt and Emma Griffin.

WHERE GEORGIA'S NEW GOVERNOR GOT HIS START—The old cabin back of the ancient oak tree is the office used by Dr. W. B. J. Hardman, father of Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, governor-elect of Georgia. It stands by the side of the road about one mile from Commerce, Ga., facing the old Hardman homestead. Dr. Hardman first read medicine here under his father, who was a contemporary of Dr. Crawford Long, who first used ether as an anesthetic and who at that time was living in the neighboring town of Jefferson, Ga.

Treasure house of Art and Beauty

No more sumptuous and impressive home is to be found in the south than the magnificent marble palace of Colonel Sam Tate, at Tate, Ga., heart of north Georgia's marble-producing section. The structure was built of this stone and its interior is decorated in lavish style and furnished with many gems of the craft of the maker of furniture, the artist and the sculptor. The accompanying group of photographs was made by Francis E. Price, staff photographer.

MISS JEANS' MAN

by H. DE VERE STACPOOLE

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The Story of a Little English Town and of a Heart That Carried the Memory of Its First Love Down the Years.

Last night the dogs did bark;
I went to the gate to see;
Every lass had her spark,
But nobody came for me.
—Baring Gould.

BUNBURY on a bright summer's day looks like a village constructed for the stage of Drury Lane and put out to dry and take weather colors.

The cottages are nearly all thatched with a thatch nearly three feet thick, the walls are thatched; and when I tell you that you will know the county. It is perhaps the most thatched village in England, barring Cockington, and in the maps of the great fire insurance companies it is marked with a red cross—at least it ought to be.

Tramps have marked it, too. A tramp who knows his business and can read signs will, on entering Bunbury, avoid the parsonages and be attracted to Miss Jeans', the second cottage on the left as you come in from the London side and just past the Lion hotel.

"O, what a sweet old cottage!"

Every charabanc, every motor, every side car, on entering Bunbury, sends up that sentiment from female lips or hearts.

"O, what a sweet old cottage!"

I have said it myself. You can't help saying it, no more than you can help saying, sometimes in England, "What a lovely day!"

And there, half hidden by its clipped box hedge, the old cottage lurks shyly, listening to its eternal song of praise.

Like a virtuous country maiden beset with admirers—though, indeed, it is rather old to figure in that simile—it has no price.

A man once wanted it to take to America with him. He was Mosenheim of Pittsburgh; looked like Svengali, and had a reputation to match. He fell frantically in love with it—and was repulsed by Miss Jeans, who was an old lady with a mind of her own—and a tongue.

The cottage has nearly an acre of ground, half of it apple orchard; the rest includes a bit of lawn and a kitchen garden, which the lady worked for herself, with the help of Hobbs, the man whose wife owns the little shop near the postoffice, a shop in scope, atmosphere, and general appearance strangely like the emporium kept by the sheep in "Alice Through the Looking Glass."

Hobbs came two days a week. He was not a good workman; his mind had too broad a horizon. Settling affairs of state at the Crown and Anchor was more in his line than weeding potato beds. But he worked fairly well for Miss Jeans. The dread of her tongue kept him at it.

All the same, she did not like him, and she would have changed him only there was nothing to change him for, he being the only male thing in Bunbury village open to hire as a jobbing gardener.

II.

It was the 10th of July, the sound of traffic and motor horns had ceased, and Bunbury lay under the warm, star sprinkled dusk. Every window of Miss Jeans' cottage was open, and from where she sat in her parlor stitching by the light of the lamp she could hear the village preparing to go to bed.

A snatch of song from the closing Crown and Anchor, Maythorn's dog disturbed by some unaccustomed footstep, talkers in the street beyond the hedge.

She pursed her lips as she sewed, reviewing, maybe, the shortcomings of Hobbs or the loganberry jam she had been making that day—some trifle, for nothing but trifles, happily, ever came in the way of her peaceful life, assured by a small but fixed income derived from an annuity.

The little girl who acted as general servant had gone home.

It was a pleasant picture, that room, with the cat on the hearth rug, Staffordshire ornaments, painted faced grandfather's clock ticking in its corner, and the great mug of sweet peas standing on the table by the window.

"Here," one might have said, looking at the flat busted, kindly faced woman stitching at the table, "is the end of a life, at least the ending of a life." A life that by contrast makes foolish all lives buttressed by the pomps and vanities of the world. Marriage, wealth, fame—what could they have given her better than this? How many things might they not have given her worse? Now, as she worked, Harmon's dog, next door, disturbed in the sanctuary of its mind by some step unknown or presence suspected, suddenly took voice and was answering Maythorn's like triphammer answering triphammer.

Miss Jeans looked up, then she put her sewing on the table and came out. Some one had raised the latch of the gate.

A man stood before her, a man who lifted his apology for a hat.

"Lady," said the man.

"Now, what do you want?" said Miss Jeans in a testy voice, but more as though she were talking to a child or a troublesome dog. "You ought to know that this is no hour to be coming about places—after dark. What are you doing in Bunbury?"

It might have been the commandant of the Tramps finding fault with the dress and drill of one of the brigade. At all events the reproof sounded more like the reprimand of a superior officer than the words of an enemy, and was evidently taken in that spirit.

"It's not my fault, lady; it's a bad foot, else I'd have been at Sudby by now. Got it in the war."

"Which war?"

"The ol' Boer war, lady."

Miss Jeans' eyes, accustomed now to the light, made him out clearly, an oldish man with a noble and prophetic head.

"Well," she said, "I haven't got anything for you, but if you'd like a bit of bread and cheese, you're welcome. Sudby's shut and there's nowhere in the village you can put up for the night, but there's an outhouse in the orchard there, with a bit of straw, you could have till morning, if you promise not to smoke."

The adventurer, agreeing to these terms and offers, took his place on the little seat by the door as pointed out and Miss Jeans vanished into the house and round to the kitchen.

The place was his for a moment with the front door open as it was. He might have ravished the eight-day clock or made off with the cat or the six rat tail silver spoons in the drawer of the table, but these possibilities that would have, no doubt, troubled the mind of the ordinary spinster never occurred to Miss Jeans. She was above them—or rather not of them.

She returned with the bread and cheese and half a mug of cider.

It was always a pleasure to her to rob Sudby of a prey. She knew what the leather-hearted guardians did to tramps at Sudby, so as to make them tramp in some other direction and the outhouse in the orchard, originally intended for the housing of a donkey and cart, was being put to no new service tonight. She came out with the bread and cheese, went in and came back with the lamp in one hand and the mug in the other. Having handed the mug, she inspected her guest by aid of the lamp as though he were some new and doubtful purchase and then retired, leaving him to eat in peace.

"Knock when you've finished," said she.

She went on with her sewing, her lips pursed more tightly now.

Charity with Miss Jeans was always allied with Faith and Hope, faith in the real stuff of humanity and hope that even the most deplorable wanderer might yet find the celestial goal.

The gentleman eating his supper outside was occupying her thoughts. He was a remarkable man. The noble and prophetic looking head had shewn itself in the lamplight for what is was —a thing spoiled. Not degraded, but spoiled originally in the making. When young it must have been good to look at, yet even then marred by a want that gave it cheapness—made it little, almost commonplace and without real significance for evil or good. All the same it was interesting and in a world where mediocrity rules, even remarkable.

She seemed stitching it into the linen as she worked, turning her head sideways occasionally to get a new view of it. Sometimes she stopped as though in deep consideration.

Then came the rap of a mug on the seat and, putting the sewing on the table, she came out. The moon had just lifted itself above the trees beyond the road by the orchard and Miss Jeans, plate and mug in either hand, stood for a moment in converse with her guest who was now nursing his bad foot.

"What is your name?" asked she.

"James Summers, lady."

"You needn't call me 'lady.' How comes it that you are in this condition? Can you not find work?"

No, indeed, he couldn't. It all came from his having gone to Australia when a young man, a place where they don't teach trades, on a sheep farm, he was—and today in England it was hard to find work even for the young men—and his foot!

"But you must have to walk a good deal?"

That was true, but his foot had a habit of giving out at the end of a day's tramp.

"Where did you come from originally?"

He came from Maltby in Shropshire.

"Maltby," said Miss Jeans. "I know there. I have some relations living there by the name of Jeans at the Home Farm."

Yes, he remembered them though it was forty years ago since he had seen Maltby. He remembered old Mr. Jeans, but he'd be dead most likely now a long time.

"Yes," said Miss Jeans, "he died over thirty years ago and the farm was sold and bought by a cousin of the same name. He's there still, I believe. Well, it's strange your coming from there and me knowing it. Were you a native of it?"

Born there. Lived as a boy at the Brook Farm, got his education at the village school, that was before the old schoolhouse was struck by lightning. He gave details of the place that proved him to be no liar and then, having finished, rose and was escorted by the lady across the orchard to the outhouse where the moonlight was strong enough to disclose the straw in the corner.

"And, mind, no smoking," said Miss Jeans.

III.

Tramps, however human, have a certain unreality about them. They belong to the tribe of wandering men from which house dwellers originated, but so long ago that tribal understanding and sympathy has been all but lost.

That a tramp should once have had a family and a home comes to one as a strange fact. Miss Jeans' tramps had always come to her out of the blue and vanished therein just as moths sometimes came into her little sitting room to flutter out again. She had never questioned a tramp before and it seemed no doubt to her a doubly strange fact that this specimen had not only once possessed a home and family, but that the home had been in Maltby, a place she knew, and where relatives of hers resided. Maybe that was why she made her great attempt at reclamation.

Standing before him next morning as he was finishing his bit of breakfast on the seat beside the front door, she opened what was in her mind.

"Now you'll be hanging about on the road all day waiting to get into Sudby," said she, "and when you get there it's only a plank bed and a piece of bread and some gruel. Don't tell me, foot or no foot, you are quite able to do regular work. Would you take a job if it were offered to you?"

He declared that he would, that work was his earnest desire, but that, belonging to no trade union, he was barred from all employment of a settled nature.

She looked at him. He was clean, otherwise the idea in her head would never have been entertained. He had asked for and obtained a basin of water and piece of soap and a rough towel—and used them. His beard and hair he had evidently combed with an invisible comb and his clothes, though poor enough, were not ragged or disgraceful.

He was a superior of the Order and that spoke of a certain pride and moral balance, precious seeds that if watered and protected might grow into everlasting trees. All this she saw and behind all this in her mind, moving like an uneasy spirit, was the desire to have done with and get rid of Hobbs.

"I'll give you a job," she said. "You won't have to belong to a trade union. There's a lot of work to be done in my garden. I can't give much and it's not a full man's job, but if you like to stay and do it, I'll give you a try. Eight shillings a week is all I can afford and your food. There's no cottage that takes in people here, but you could have that place in the orchard. It's dry. Better than a casual ward, anyhow. I'd have it fixed up for you. Have you ever done gardening?"

To her surprise, instead of kicking up his heels at the sight of this job of work, he declared that he had, also that a garden was the thing he liked most in the world. Also, he did not cavil at the wage.

"Mind you," she said, "I expect you to work, and no smoking in the outhouse."

"You try me, ma'am," said James Summers.

"I will," said she.

She went to the kitchen door and called forth Mary Elizabeth Jane Cordery, housemaid, parlor maid, cook and general servant, aged fifteen and a half, and with a face like a Canadian apple of full color. Her she dispatched to fetch Rupert James Cordery to help carry the little old bed in the spare room to its destination in the orchard. The outhouse did not require cleaning; nothing in the possession of Miss Jeans ever required cleaning, but the straw had to be removed.

The floor was concrete and therefore dry; there was no window, but plenty of ventilation, and chests of drawers and wardrobe were unnecessary.

When Rupert Cordery had finished the furnishing under the direction of the old lady she dispatched him to Hobbs' shop with the information that, Miss Jeans having obtained the service of a permanent man, Hobbs need not call on the morrow.

IV.

James Summers had come like a moth in the dusk. Attracted by the light of the first cottage in the village, he had found Miss Jeans. Nobody had seen him come, and when the news that she had a permanent man went about there was less gossip than there might have been had people known that the P. M. was a tramp.

Even if they had there would have been less gossip than there might have been had Miss Jeans been any one else.

A beautiful character cannot exist unknown and unrecognized. A genius, a sage, or a saint might exist in Bunbury or any other village unperceived, or at all events unvalued, but even the meanest and lowliest folk perceived Miss Jeans. Nobody ever sung her praises, but nobody ever spoke ill of her; nobody thought much about her. She was just there like the village pump, and nobody ever thought of offering her a service for nothing, or a gift. Yet she existed in the subconscious mind of Bunbury, and had she died the village would have gone into mourning more perhaps from a sense of loss than a sense of sorrow.

Respected, that is the word. And what a wonderful word it is in its right application—that is, when it implies "liked," which I think is as great a word when used in its universal sense as "loved."

Miss Jeans was respected, she was above criticism and gossip. All the same her permanent man, when he came fully into the village, could not but be an object for talk.

He was a queer looking chap—the points about him that would have pleased an artist gave pause to the villagers. They couldn't swallow at first that pseudo noble and prophetic looking head and, with the true instinct of workers for workers, they recognized the face that he was not quite of them. It was reported that Miss Jeans had got him from an advertisement; but he was harmless and civil spoken, and presently and by degrees he became less of a foreign body and of less interest. He became Miss Jeans' man.

And Miss Jeans, after a week or so, found she had no cause to regret her choice. James did his work, and there was plenty to do. Now was the time for sowing mountain spinach and he sowed it, for pruning the rambler roses, for sowing rye for green manure in the spring, and for a host of other small businesses which he performed, not perhaps always well, but always willingly. Hobbs had worked like a robot, with little of the energy of a robot but with all the mechanical dullness.

It was different with James. James was what he professed himself to be, fond of a garden; and fond, though for a gardener too fond, of all living things therein. For instance he could not kill snails. He collected them and threw them into Parker's piece. This pleased Miss Jeans.

All the same, his excellencies and want of bad qualities gave her food for deep meditation as she sat of an evening stitching at a shirt—she was making him some shirts.

How was it that he had ever fallen so low—ever fallen into the condition from which she had rescued him?

On the third Saturday of their mutual relationship the answer to this question gave the first hint of itself.

V.

James had begun to mix up with the village. That is to say, he would speak to the casual person in the street on the subject of the weather, and he had met in with several of the village worthies at the Crown and Anchor.

On this, the third Saturday, he did not return in time for tea. He always had meals in the kitchen and better food, as a rule, than his mistress. The white cloth was laid on a piece of the kitchen table, the food set out and the chair placed, but James was not there.

An hour and a half later he returned—drunk. Quietly and respectably drunk; able to walk, able to talk, but drunk.

He sat on the little seat by the front door happily sheltered by the hedge from the road and used half a box of matches trying to light an empty pipe, and he would have talked about Lloyd George to Miss Jeans if she had stayed to listen.

She left him and went in to put the useless tea away, and somehow, in some way, like a person who has been let down by a doubtful motor car, she was not surprised. She had found the flaw.

Later she went out and told him it was time for him to go to bed, and took the match box away, he agreeing effusively on the subject of the danger of fire from match boxes. He even left his pipe, as a token of honest intentions, on the seat. Then he departed for bed, and the old lady brought her chair and stitching outside, it not being full dusk yet.

Here she was in a position to cut him off should he attempt another excursion to the pub, but he made no such attempt, and the darkness came with glow worms in the hedge and great cockchafers booming in the air, the barking of watch dogs and, lastly, the sounds peculiar to the closing of the Crown and Anchor.

Then she went in and to bed.

She was far too human not to allow for a slip. Men will be men, and even the best men will sometimes deviate from the path of common sense to wander in those meadows where the attempt to light empty pipes seems a rational act. But the best of men, though liable to a slip, are not, as a rule, slippery by nature.

Was James of this kind? Were these attacks likely to recur? Time alone could tell, and on this unsatisfactory premise she fell asleep.

Next day was Sunday and he had not to work. He made no apology other than was conveyed by a subdued and deprecating manner, and on Monday he got to work again and things went on as before, but the indication already given was correct. James' failing was beer.

He never touched whisky, he never made a scene or a disgrace of himself; but with unfailing regularity he went to the Crown and Anchor—always of a Saturday—and got drunk.

Not drunk according to the standards of Bunbury, but quite drunk enough according to the standard of Miss Jeans, who had a horror of the exhibition forms of alcohol—even the mildly hilarious. After once quietly remonstrating wtih him and reducing him to great despondency for a whole afternoon she said no more.

It was the thing that had most evidently brought him down in lite. She began to understand him strangely and completely, as though all the mechanism of his life had been laid bare. When young, no doubt these fits, or attacks, if you like the word better, had evidently been more violent and prolonged, throwing him out of many a job, steadily sinking him to the level of the road. But James was old now and the disease less virulent. In fact, to Bunbury he was just a man fond of a glass and in no ways disrespected, since he never sang, nor shouted, nor staggered, nor made a fool of himself.

But to the woman who supported him his disease was a quiet grief, something that had to be borne. She could no more put him on the road again than she could turn adrift a child she had picked up out of char-

They Had a Flock Uv Flaming Youths In Shakespeare's Day.

YESTERDAY it rained pritty hard, so I decided to stay in the house an' read. I only have 2 books, Nick Carter, wich I bought, an' Punk Plays by William Shakespeare, wich I found. I koodn't find my Nick Carter so I had to read Bill's Offenses against Humanity. I got an awful kick out uv one entitled:

Two Gentlemen of Verona.

In the city uv Verona lived 2 young ginks named Valentine an' Protheus. They were known around the swinging door establishments as Dizzy Protheus an' Comic Valentine. They had bin brot up together, in fact they were graduates uv the same billiard hall, an' were therefore very chummy, although Protheus used to slip Valentine a severe pain in the neck by telling him about his love affairs.

"Lay off that racket," sez Valentine; "don't mention the noisy sex to me—I know enough to stay clear uv 'em. Wen yew holler 'Hay' at a horse, he figures that he's gonna eat. When yew holler 'Hey' at a dame, she hopes she is. I know all about 'em."

Billing Papa!

Never-the-less, Protheus insisted on running around dragging poor little Cupid by one leg. At present he wuz hard hit by a squaw named Julia, an' he spent so much time hanging on her gate that the neighbors thought he wuz one uv the hinges. At last Valentine got so doggone weary uv hearing this bimbo rave about his petting partner that he decided to beat it before the darn thing got contagious, so he packed his pocket flask an' 2 extra collars into a flour sack and went to a burg called Milan.

After Valentine had gone, Protheus sat down an' wrote a letter to Julia. It wuz only the fifth letter he had written her that day, so naturally his conscience bothered him, because he felt that he had bin neglecting the gal. At this moment his old man entered the room. Being the first uv the month, the old geezur wuz dragging a flock uv bills with him. He slipped Protheus a look wich denoted that all wuz not well.

"Greetings," sez Protheus; "how goes it, Papa?"

"¾&?¼!*;:'!?*½?" sez Papa looking at one uv the bills, "I see yew have busted another window in the Gondola Cabaret."

"It wuz an accident, Old Timer," sez Proth; "me an' the head waiter had an argument about——"

Proth Gets the Air.

"I also note," sez Papa, "that yew rented an entire box at The Spaghetti Frolics the other night an' charged it to me."

"It wuz this way," starts Proth; "Me an' 4 guys——"

"Furthermore," sez the old duffer, looking at another bill, I see yew took my new 8-cylinder Rolls-Ruff out the other evening an' used the street lamps for bowling pins. This bill frum the repair shop looks as though they had to fix every part uv the car except the door handles. This monkey bizness has gotta stop! Anyhow I hear yew are buzzing around sum gal named Julia."

"Yup, that's right," admits Protheus.

"Well, go an' tell Julia good-bye," sez the Pater, "because yew are leaving for Milan. I'm sick an' tired uv following yew around with a check book in one hand an' a fountain pen in the other. Pack up yer golf sticks an' catch a freight! The 'welcome' remark on our door-mat is apple-grease as far as yew are concerned frum now on. Good-bye, good luck, an' don't sprain yer wrist writing home for money."

So Protheus does his last swinging act on Julia's garden gate, an' promises to kum back sum day an' marry her if she has enough money, after wich he went an' grabbed a rattler for Milan.

A Star Boarder.

It so happens that Valentine is having a gay time in this burg. He must have carried his precinct or got a big drag sum other way, because he is now an inmate uv the Duke uv Milan's household, an' is grabbing his board an' lodgings gratis. Also, the Duke has a ritzy looking daughter wich Valentine has slipped for, an' it begins to look like the Cheerful Credit Furniture company is gonna unload another pair uv twin beds. This filly's monicker is Sylvia.

Protheus breezed over to the Duke's hangout an' wuz wildly greeted by Valentine, who dragged him in an' presented him to the Duke. The latter, after hearing that Proth wuz a bum with a ornery reputation, decided that maybe he kood use him, so Proth also became an inmate uv the Royal Boarding House.

As soon as they wuz alone, Valentine slipped his boy friend an earful uv dirt to the effect that, although he stood ace-high with Sylvia, Papa wanted her to hook up with a lounge-chameleon named Thurio.

"An' therefore," sez Valentine, "me an' the blonde panic is thinking uv eloping."

"Gimme a look at this appetite-wrecker," sez Protheus, so Val trots him over an' hands him a knock-down to the Duke's daughter.

The Double X.

Right away Proth stumbles so hard for this Lingerie Artist that he forgot all about the gal he left behind him, an' he decides to slip Valentine the double X an' sign this blonde riot up on a lifetime contract to burn his toast for him. So he goes to the Duke an' informs him that the star boarder intends to elope with the gal. The Duke gits real peeved, an' kicks Valentine out uv the joint. Whereupon the latter goes into the forest an' meets a band uv outlaws.

"We are robbers," sez the outlaws; "give us yer money."

"I am a gentleman," sez Val, "an' therefore I have no money."

"Well," sez the robbers, "if yew have ever had any experience at robbing, we might let yew join our outfit. Most us us got our early training by driving taxicabs. Did yew ever drive a taxicab?"

"No," sez Val, "but I wuz once a waiter in a night club."

"O, migawd! Yew can be our captain!" howls the robbers, with awe-stricken gasps uv admiration.

A Merry Mixup.

In the meantime word reached Verona that Protheus wuz swinging on another front gate, an' Julia got wind uv it, so she decided to go to Milan an' find out why gentlemen prefer blondes. She disguised herself as a boy an' after arriving in this burg, she went to Proth an' asked him if he needed a servant. Protheus, who didn't recognize her in the outfit she wuz wearing, slipped her a job carrying mash notes to Sylvia. A hot mix-up, I calls that! Everything wuz going fine until Proth annexed a second-hand guitar an' started singing beneath the blonde mama's window. He had a singing voice which wuz rather over-ripe, in fact it wuz so rotten that every time he hit a high note it started to rain. After listening to this gink, Sylvia decided that Valentine wuz a real bargain, so she removed enough uv her clothes to be properly dressed for the street an' went out looking for her lost sheik.

While this wuz going on, Valentine wuz making quite a reputation for himself by sand-bagging travelers an' shaking them loose frum their street car tickets. The boy had taking ways.

The Dumb Finale.

Sylvia met him on a path in the forest an' they fell into a clinch. A moment later Protheus, who wuz lookin' for her, arrived accompanied by Julia. Jist as a nasty argument wuz about to commence, Thurio arrived, also looking for the Blonde Panic, so Valentine smacked him for a 6-yard loss. Then the Duke put in his appearance, an' it began to look like a booksellers' convention.

Well, to make a long story short, everybody forgave Protheus, although he didn't know why it wuz necessary, an' then the Duke forgave Valentine an' said he kood have his daughter, so the poor simp took her an' thought he wuz gettin a swell present. Protheus an' Julia also got married, an' that's Shakespeare's idea uv a happy finish, the dumb kluck! A heluva story I calls it!"

The Say-So of Holleran Yell

By Westbrook Pegler

Don't Gossip; Do Business Direct; It Pays Better.

I ALWAYS try to think well of my fellowmen, and I never believe any gossip about them, as I realize that most of my fellowmen are low characters and I would not take their word for anything. Personally, I know enough about most of my fellowmen to have them jailed up, but I am a believer in the Golden Rule and I find gossip is distasteful to my nature.

If a man finds out something about another party, it is better for all concerned if he goes straight to the party and states the situation, instead of going around blowing a police whistle, because when you start horning away on the law bugle you only attract the coppers. Then, if there is any adjustment to be made, the chief of police or the lieutenant will be likely to make it, and the party who blew the squeal organ is no better off than he was in the first place.

Needs Fire Escapes

It always fills me with contempt to read letters in the papers complaining about little things around town, because it is my policy in such matters to go straight to the party concerned and do business direct, without causing any unnecessary trouble.

To put the matter concretely, we will imagine that I am a politician, and I discover that there is a gambling house operating on the ground floor in my neighborhood, without any fire escape. Now, as a public-spirited citizen, I realize that a gambling house without a fire escape, even on the ground floor, is a menace, because you can never tell when a still is going to blow up and start a fire, so I would feel it my duty to take the matter up. However, I would not go to the coppers, because, as I say, I am no gossip, but I would go to the proprietor of the place and I would call his attention to the situation.

"My dear sir," I would state to the proprietor, "I know you will thank me for reminding you that you are violating the law and I am sure you will appreciate my motive in pointing this out to you instead of hollering 'copper,' and causing a lot of unnecessary trouble and expense."

A Weekly Reminder.

Then, if the proprietor was a conscientious man, he would thank me for my interest and give me a present of some funds as a reward for doing this. I might come back about once every week for an indefinite time and remind the proprietor about this over and over again, and as long as he assured me that he was grateful for my interest and intended to remedy the situation when he could get around to it, I would not think of gossiping to the police.

Some people are extremely sensitive about gossip, and a man once hurt my feelings very seriously because he thought I was circulating rumors about some trouble that he was in, although I did not know about this trouble at all.

Lots of Nerve.

We did not have much jam on our bread at my house at bed time as all of my fighters had gone to college to study for the heavyweight championship and my affectionate old lady was beginning to make sordid suggestions about getting me a working-job and earning some wages. This plan was repugnant to my nature, as I never had much experience in working-jobs, and, moreover, I did not think that anybody would employ me, owing to the gossip that my fellowmen are always circulating about me. I determined that I would do this only as a last resort, but one morning I got a report card showing that my best fighter had flunked his examination in literature and I realized that he would never be champion of the world, so I decided there was nothing for me to do but look for some kind of work.

Consequently I clipped some want ads out of the papers and went into the writing room of one of the hotels and started to write some letters inquiring about the jobs. I felt very downcast and I did not want any of my friends to see me doing this, as they would gossip the news around town that I was looking for work and the public would decide that I was a failure in my profession. So, as I wrote the letters, I would put them in the envelopes and address them to the newspapers, and as I was writing another one I realized that some one was looking over my shoulder. Of course, I turned the paper over quickly and looked up and I then saw that the man was an acquaintance of mine.

"Well," I stated to this party, "you have got a lot of nerve looking at a party's correspondence in this manner, and I trust that you did not see what I was writing in this letter, because," I stated, "I was just writing to the editors of all the papers telling them about a party in town who has been doing some unlawful things."

"Was is about me and that little trouble I have been having?" this party inquired, and, of course, I was surprised, as I do not pay any attention to gossip and I did not know he had been having any trouble.

"Well," I asserted, "I would rather not state what the letters are about until they come out in the papers."

This party seemed to be very much excited when I said that, and he stated that if I gossiped about him he would send some unlawful characters around to take care of me.

"That would be very foolish of you," I remarked, "because it would only make the editors of the papers more curious, so if I were you, my dear sir, I would try some other plan, as there are several ways to approach such a matter."

The party then reminded me that we had been friends for a long time and he said he hoped there never would be any trouble between us that could not be settled without any trouble.

"Well," I stated, "it is no trouble to me to write these letters, my dear sir, and, on the contrary, it is a pleasure, but if you wish to take the matter up further I will not mail the letters until I hear from you, as I am not inclined to gossip and I would much prefer to adjust the situation."

Still Wondering.

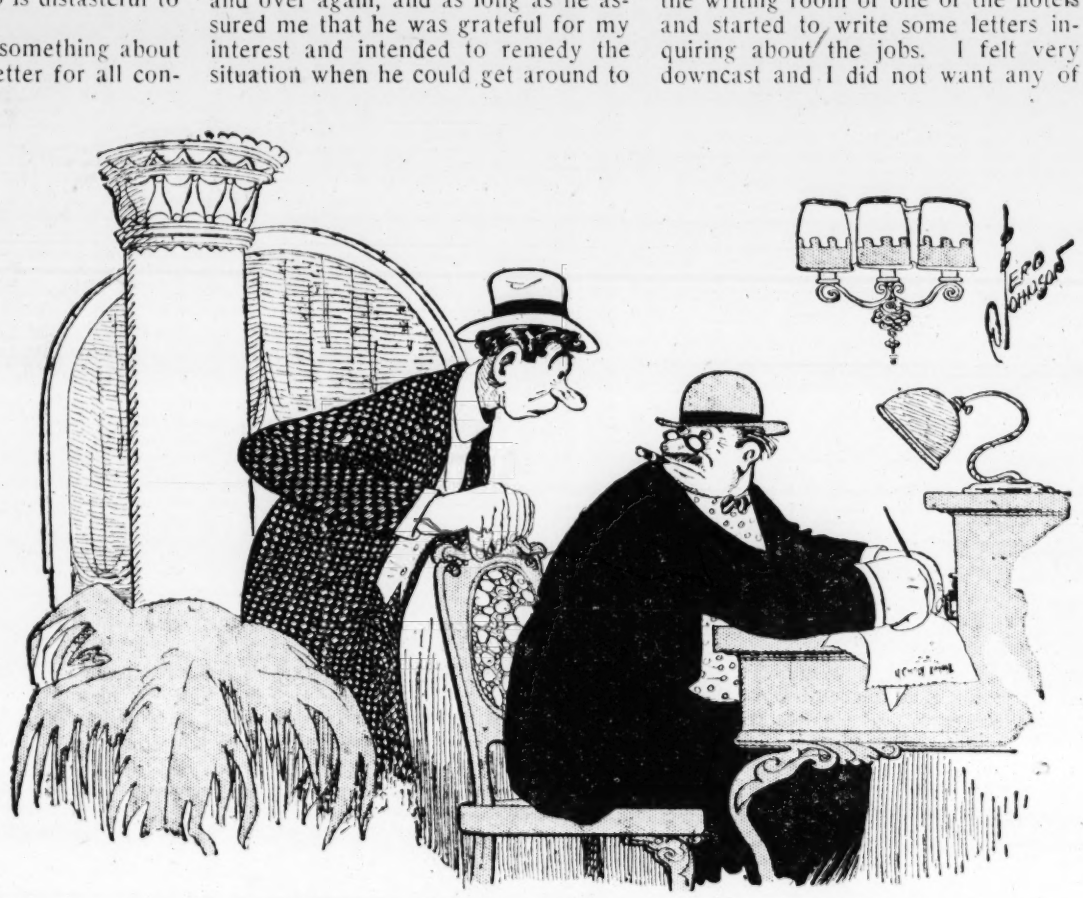

All this time I was wondering what kind of trouble the party had been having, but I was too polite to ask, as I am not interested in gossip about my fellow men and do not believe it, anyway.

So the party called me behind some palms and asked me if I happened to need any funds, and I replied that this was very kind of him and I would like to procure $500. The party then pulled out his leather and handed me five hundred skins. And I took out the letters answering the want-ads and tore them up into a great many small pieces which I put in my pocket.

"Now, I rely on your sense of honor as a gentleman," he stated, "to forget about this matter entirely and never write any more letters of this nature."

So I put the money in my pocket and assured him that I would never write any more letters of this type. I was very sincere about this. And to this day I have not got any idea about the kind of trouble the party was in and, moreover, I am not interested, as I always try to think well of my fellew men and never believe any gossip about them, realizing that most of them are low characters and unworthy of belief.

Broadway Banter

—BY— FORNEY WYLY

THERE appears to be nothing a musical comedy won't try. The latest outrage perpetrated by this particular form of relaxation lies in its daring to drape itself around Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" and blandly coming forth as a hullabaloo called "Oh! Ernest!" There should be a law making the world safe from musical comedies.

"Oh! Ernest!" is a pretty sorry affair. Past experience has taught us that Mr. Wilde's lines are not the easiest to speak effectively and some of the best dramatic actors and actresses have faltered considerably in such an undertaking. What, then, can be more distressing that to have to listen to a lot of musical comedy people spout the Wilde epigrams exactly in the tone they would adopt in saying "So's your Uncle Minnie." Then they introduced a character who says "I'm Polyanna from Indiana" and I can't for the life of me remember any Polyanna in "The Importance of Being Earnest."

For the presence of Dorothy Dilley in its cast, many thanks should be offered. This ingratiating young person was the "Little Butterfly" of several years ago's "Music Box" and was Kitty of "Kitty's Kisses" last year. She dances enchantingly and is responsible for the only bearable moments of the evening.

"Oh! Ernest!" works awfully hard to make nothing out of something.

Between whizzing taxis and onrushing street cars at Broadway and 45th street the other night, I am sure I saw Marion Smith from your town. I hope he reached the curb in safety. Then I saw Kenneth McMillan smiling benignly beneath the first straw hat I saw on Fifth avenue this year. Lawson Kiser I encountered at the tea Katharine Murchison Green gave for Frances Ellis McKenzie during her recent visit here. Arthur Hurd I ran into the other night and I went out of my way to mention that charming Atlanta girl just married with whom Mr. Hurd used to do a lot of Driving Club dancing. There is nothing I like better than reopening other people's old wounds. Spencer Tunnell I saw in Childs—the one on Fifth avenue at 57th street—not so long ago. Incidentally this is the Childs to which at the moment you always head immediately upon realizing you've got on dinner clothes. Then there was Abner Calhoun at "The Circus Princess" the other night, finding it as far as I could judge a delightful evening in the theater.

What Has Happened to Justice?

CHIEF BYRNES called the Nathan case New York's most famous and most mysterious murder. It happened before most of us were born, yet still it stands, a classic among mysteries.

Benjamin Nathan, wealthy New Yorker, was beaten to death in his home at the height of a fierce storm. In the house at the time were Nathan's two sons, Washington and Frederick, the housekeeper, and the housekeeper's son. None of the living occupants of the residence had apparently heard anything suspicious during the night.

Innumerable theories were advanced. It was like a mystery drama wherein every character is suspected of the crime. The police said it looked like an "inside job," but that was about as far as they got. Later there were "confessions" and accusations, mostly involving burglars with ulterior motives.

But the Nathan case never was solved. It was one of the most complete failures ever chalked up against justice.

* * * *

By some strange fate, while nobody was ever punished for the dastardly assassination in New York years ago of the rich Benjamin Nathan, whose unrevenged murder is the greatest mystery the metropolitan police ever failed to unravel, one of his relatives passes judgment on many murderers arrested in other crimes.

For Chief Justice Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, for thirteen years a member of the court of appeals in Albany, which is the highest court in this state, is, according to old newspaper records, a nephew of the murdered rich Wall street broker.

Nathan was slain within a few months of the birth of Judge Cardozo, who has reviewed countless appeals taken by slayers to the high court from sentences by judges of inferior jurisdiction.

Since Judge Cardozo's designation to be one of the seven judges of this court on February 2, 1914, this tribunal has reviewed records of trials of 154 murderers afterward put to death in Sing Sing. It has also passed upon numerous cases where the defendants either obtained new trials or had their death sentences commuted by a merciful governor.

In no celebrated murder case in America has justice ever been so prostrated as in the Benjamin Nathan case. Some who remember the furore the crime created will tell you the police "fell down." Veteran policemen insist, however, that the police learned who committed the foul deed but that their hands were tied. The family laid it to a burglar; the police to an "inside job."

Capt. James McLaughlin

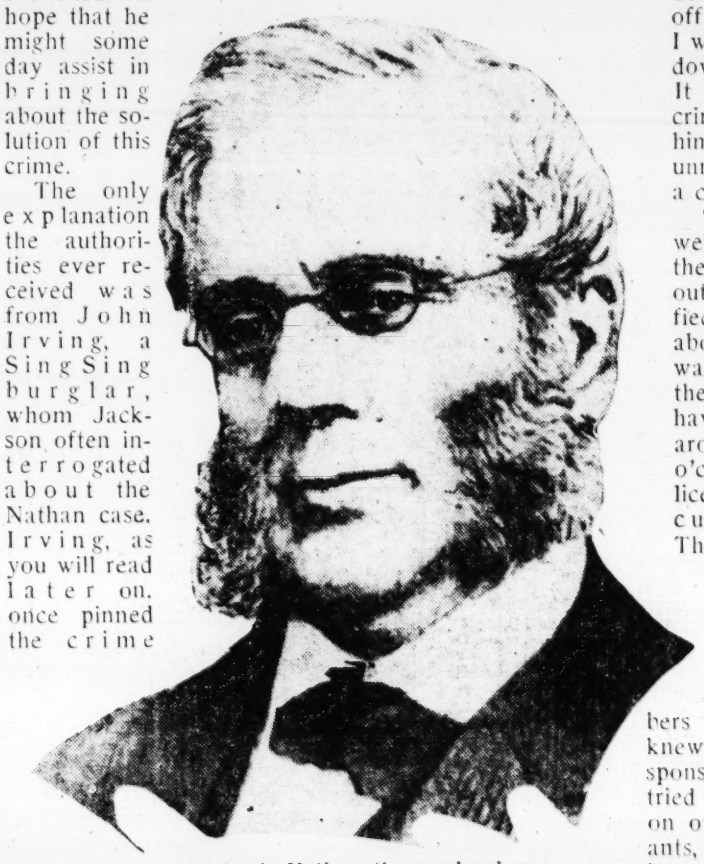

Something happened recently that again centers attention upon the famous Nathan case.

Wall Street Power.

Three factors made the murder a thrilling one. One was the brutal way Nathan was bludgeoned to death in the library of his mansion while torrents of rain slashed at the windows during a terrific thunder storm. The second was the manner in which the crime convulsed Wall street, in which the rich broker had been a gigantic power.

The most important element of all was the fantastic theory offered by noted doctors that a tell-tale expression left in the eyes of the dead victim indicated that the broker recognized, before he died, the assassin who struck him down. This theory caused the mystery to be later referred to as "the magic eye case."

We told you in the foregoing paragraph of an event lately that brings the Nathan case to mind now. This was the death of former State Detective James Jackson, who for forty-five years made his headquarters at Sing Sing prison. Until his last days, and he lived to be nearly 86 years old, he had cherished a hope that he might some day assist in bringing about the solution of this crime.

Benjamin Nathan, the murdered man.

The only explanation the authorities ever received was from John Irving, a Sing Sing burglar, whom Jackson often interrogated about the Nathan case. Irving, as you will read later on, once pinned the crime upon Dan Kelley, another Sing Sing burglar. The police, however, found so many flaws in his tale that they cast him aside as a notoriety seeker and a faker.

"I always hoped to get to the solution of that terrible crime," said Detective Jackson a short time before he died, "because it was so brutal and so baffling. I got some leads that satisfied me that no professional criminal was in on it. I learned enough to know that it was an inside job, but who killed Mr. Nathan I never could establish.

"I don't know whether his awful experience could have left any expression such as the doctors described in the eyes of the murdered man, but what the doctors said did have a tendency to make many people agree with the police that it was an inside job."

Remembers Nathan.

There was something beside the natural instincts of a detective that interested Jackson in that crime. Nathan, before he was murdered, had for years maintained a summer residence in Ossining, or Sing Sing village, as it was then called. The state detective knew him personally.

Policeman Henry Cooley, the oldest patrolman in the Yonkers police department, also remembers Nathan and the uproar his death created. Cooley was a youth living in Sing Sing village when he first saw the broker who afterward met such a tragic end.

Captain James McLaughlin, one of the oldest living veterans of the New York police department, who lives in Yonkers, describes the details as though the crime had happened only a week ago. He was one of the policemen on duty in lower Manhattan when the crime was discovered early on the morning of July 29, 1879, and the alarm sent out.

Although now 86 years old, Captain McLaughlin, spry in step and keen in memory, remembers all about the Nathan case.

"Yes, I remember it very well," he exclaimed. "He was murdered in his mansion on West 23d street, right off Fifth avenue. I was a patrolman downtown then. It was a terrible crime. They beat him over the head unmercifully with a carpenter's tool.

"I remember well the morning the alarm went out. They notified the police about 6 o'clock. It was decided that the murder must have occurred around 1 or 2 o'clock. The police never prosecuted anybody. They knew who did it, all right. It was an inside job. The police finally decided the members of the family knew who was responsible. Someone tried to put the crime on one of the servants, but the police knew they had no part in it.

Like Snyder Murder.

The revolting way they murdered Nathan is like the Snyder murder in Long Island.

"I met the brother of Mr. Nathan once in Yonkers years after. A servant dropped dead in his summer residence in North Yonkers and I went there to investigate. He was anxious that there be no publicity."

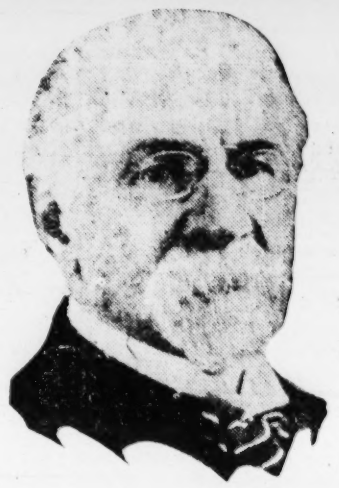

Some idea of the stir the crime created in this country at the time will be afforded by citing, briefly, who Benjamin Nathan was. He came of a rich family of old settlers, and was born in New York city. He was well educated, socially well connected and had accumulated a large fortune in Wall street.

He was a director of the stock exchange. He had retired shortly before his death and transferred his business to some of his six children. The sons were Fred, Washington, Julius and Harmon Nathan. His daughters were Mrs. Lucius Moss and Mrs. Mendez Cohen. Nathan's sister was the wife of the late Supreme Court Justice Albert Cardozo, a noted jurist who was on the bench in New York years ago.

The Nathan town house, a four-story brownstone and marble mansion, was at 12 West 23d street, Manhattan. That locality was regarded as "uptown" in those days. The business activities of Manhattan were mostly below First street. The gay life of the town, now in the "roaring Forties" had not yet advanced above 14th street.

There stood directly across the street from the Nathan mansion the Fifth Avenue hotel, which was then one of the city's finest. This has given way in late years to a big office building, while the Nathan house was replaced years ago by a five-story building used for carpet showrooms.

On the morning of July 28, 1870, Nathan rode into town from his new summer place at Morristown, N. J., on the railroad. He told his wife, Mrs. Emily Nathan, that the following day being the anniversary of his mother's death, he would not return home to Morristown that night but would remain in town to attend religious services the next day in his mother's memory.

The evening of the day he left his wife he was joined by his son, Washington Nathan. They repaired to the home of Nathan's sister for a visit.

They left there about 8:30 o'clock, the elder man going to his city home, while the son left, as he explained to the police next morning, to keep an engagement with a young woman.

Temporary Bed.

When Nathan reached home he found the housekeeper, Anna Kelly, there. So was her son, William Kelly, who acted as manservant in the household.

A temporary bed had been fixed up in the center of the spacious front parlor-bedroom on the second floor of the house. It was placed near the door leading into the library.

The father remained up late, going over some documents and papers in his desk and safe. While he so busied himself, a terrific rainstorm suddenly let loose. It was accompanied by thunder and lightning, with crashes of great violence. The water fell in torrents for a long time. It was one of the worst thunderstorms in years.

What a fine night for a murder! If there were any policemen around, the storm drove them to cover. Pedestrians deserted the street. Few carriages ventured out.

The flash of a pistol, if one were to be used, could not be distinguished from the flare of lightning. The noise of a shot or a call for help would be drowned out by the violent storm.

An entrance could be forced by an outsider, without the slightest regard for the noise of breaking in, which under ordinary weather conditions would betray the intrusion at the very start.

Such were the weird, yet favorable, circumstances under which, everybody agreed, the assassin must have stolen up to Benjamin Nathan, busy with his valuables and documents in the open library safe.

What took place when Nathan, cos-

Shattered Romance Of Po

How Mrs. H. Phelps Clawson C of the Love Poems That Origi Her Heart and Left the M Wrote Them and Lavi His Wealth Upon H

LINES to a lady's eyebrow, and triolets celebrating the glories of her hair are all right in their way, but it takes more than a well-turned poem to keep a wife contented in these restless, modern days.

So H. Phelps Clawson, of Buffalo, N. Y., and London, and Valia Venitskya Clawson will get divorced and go their separate ways. Just another romance shattered. Just another of those "perfect matches" turning out not to be so perfect, after all.

Clawson has already sailed for Egypt to forget and, perchance, to ask the Sphinx to solve the riddle of the way of a girl with a man.

Being more practical, his wife is planning a return to her first love—the screen. It is understood she will become a member of the Hollywood movie colony as soon as her divorce is granted.

H. Phelps Clawson was born with a golden spoon in his mouth, if ever a young man was. The only son of one of the richest and most aristocratic men in Buffalo, he is good-looking and gifted besides.

Phelps first gave the neighbors something to talk about when he announced that he was not going into a business office to learn a business "from the ground up," but was going to make the writing of poetry his vocation.

"But what else will you do?" queried the good burghers of Buffalo who understand the tow-boat business rather better than they comprehend the muses.

"Nothing," said the amazing Mr. Clawson. "Writing good poetry is a full-time job for any man." So he proceeded to travel and study and write poetry, which turned out to be amazingly good.

Much of his stuff was published with flattering comment in the revered Saturday Review of Literature, and he got complimentary letters from college professors.

Clawson decided, while completing some verses to be included in his first collection, to have the book published in London, and it was while he was having a series of conferences that he met Valia Venitskya.

She is a Russian of the old noblesse, and was engaged in cinema work in England. Their courtship, according to London gossip, was a whirlwind affair, as became the wooing of a beautiful Moscovite by an ardent young poet from Buffalo, N. Y. He knew her just a week when he sailed from London, leaving her with an engagement ring, and having her promise to follow him out to the States a few weeks later.

Mrs. H. Phelps Clawson, whose dark Slavic beauty was the inspiration for some of the finest poems her unhappy husband ever wrote

When he informed the good folks of Buffalo that he was going to get married, there was some scoffing, for the general view in that city was that Phelps rather scorned girls, and did not consider them much worth a man's while.

"Who's the girl, Phelps?" they asked him, and when he said, "Valia Venitskya," there was loud and prolonged laughter.

Still they did not believe the poet was in earnest, but all agreed that if he ever did marry he would marry a girl with a name like that.

And then, as they say in the cinema shows, came Valia herself, in all her beauty and allure, and they were married, and people stopped fooling about it and began telling each other what a grand match it was.

"I'm in love for the first time, and it's the kind of thing songs are written about," said Clawson.

"It will be forever," said Valia. "It is the most wonderful thing that has ever come into my life. I want nothing more from fate than to be permitted to be my husband's inspiration and his mate. I want him to go on with his writing. I am sure he will make a great name for himself, and I am ready to subordinate my own desire for a career to help him all I can."

She surrendered her contracts and he installed her as mistress of his home in Highland avenue, Buffalo. It is one of the most beautiful homes in the city, and he had it remodelled to suit her taste. With plenty of money and the aesthetic sensibility which has made him a writer of fine verse, he fitted it up until it resembled a magic mansion, filled it with priceless Egyptian antiques, and built his bride a bath of crystal and tile that was fit for a queen.

That was not quite three years ago, and having decided they were destined to live happily forever afterward, the citizens of Buffalo dismissed the fortunate pair from their minds and went about their own affairs.

The first faint rumblings that heralded the beginning of the end came when Valia began to confess to women friends that she found domestic life a bit cloying after her exciting years as an actress.

Being an inspiration, she intimated rather than said, was a very monotonous occupation for a healthy, active girl. Not for a moment did she hint she wished she had married a taxi driver or a bond salesman or a man in one of the more ordinary walks of life. But it began to get about that she found the air on Paranassus a bit rarified and was quite fed up on poetry.

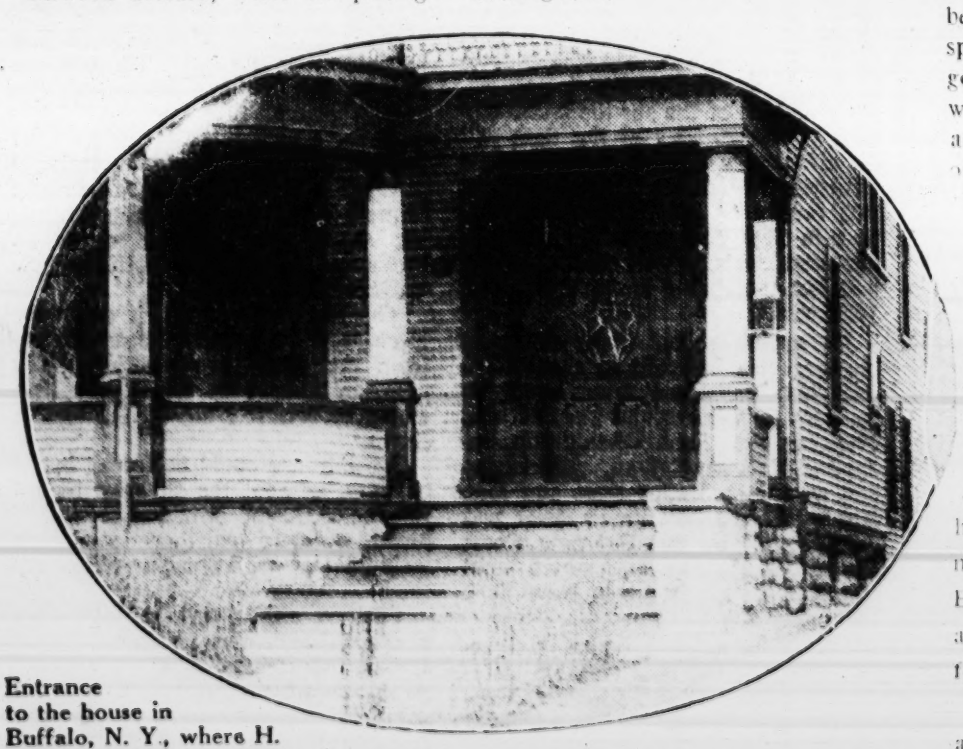

Then, a few weeks ago, she quietly packed the seventy trunks that gave the Buffalonians such a thrill when first she arrived from London, bought a ticket for a certain mid-western state famed for the speed of its divorce courts, and shook the dust of Buffalo from her dainty feet.

She did not take Mr. Clawson along, and she has not returned to Buffalo. Instead, after arranging the preliminaries of her divorce action, she went on to the west coast and began to make a tentative study of the Hollywood colony.

Left all alone with his muse, Clawson did not take the public into his confidence. He was brutally frank when a busybody asked him where Valia had gone, and informed the gossip that it was "nobody's business."

Mrs. John... Claw... former actress and ... mother of the poet, ... seems to be making a ... cess of her married ... with his father

Then he did a little packing on his own account, hung a "For Sale" sign on the house into which he and she wove their dreams three years ago, gave the key to a real estate agent, and set sail for Egypt.

In his first book of verses, titled "Transmutation and Other Poems," he addressed at least half the poems to the lady who later became his wife.

In one, "Absence," he gives a lyrical and yet fairly adequate picture of her:

I saw you stand before me in a dream.
Slender and tall like some wild woodland flower
That leans above a mountain's crystal stream,
Whose source is hidden in a Druid bower,
And then again as comes a summer breeze
That blows o'er meadows deep in waving grass,
Where bright-eyed daisies laugh and orchard trees
Hold out their blossomed branches as you pass.
So does my soul, when purified and clear,
Reflect your image fair of radiant hue,
And my heart laughs to feel your presence near,
And yields its richest fragrance unto you.
I see through you; to you my thoughts I give;
I am not I unless through you I live.

Portrait of Mrs. H. Phelps Clawson, the former Valia Venitskya, whose suddenly broken romance with the Buffalo poet has sent him to Egypt to forget, and her to Reno for a divorce

And another tender effusion is frankly titled, "To Valia." It runs as follows:

Your hands upon my breast I seem to feel,
Stirring those secret things that far apart
I long had kept but now shall not conceal,
Since from the fear-locked caverns of my heart
Your faith in me has rolled the silent stone.
For all [illegible] the earth appears
And enters in. A voice I had not known
Filled with the pent-up music of my years
Now sings. The surge of life within the grass,
The chant of the young blossoms on the tree
Have freed my prisoned soul—the winds that pass
Are bringing beauty on their wings to me.

A fragile fragment of beauty, cajoled out of nothingness by a poet's fancy! Almost as fragile as the love it celebrates!

Exactly what was lacking to make the pretty romance a success, nobody in Buffalo seems to know. One who knows is in California. The other is Egypt-bound.

Until he married Valia, Clawson was rated the most eligible bachelor in Buffalo, and at one time or other half the girls of his own social set have set their caps for him. And half the fond mothers of that set have dreamed of their darling daughters making the eccentric young poet forget his rhyming, marry and go to work.

Clawson himself has always cultivated an aloof, amused attitude toward life and its tragedies and comedies and melodramas. He often called organized society "the circus."

There is a little history to that attitude of his. Years ago, Clawson made the acquaintance of Mrs. James Stillman and her daughter, Anne. He spent much time in the Stillman drawing room and at the Stillman summer camp in the Adirondacks.

When referring to society as "the circus," he always told his hearers that the expression was coined by Mrs. Stillman [illegible]e evening as she stood at a [illegible]rawing room window looking down on Fifth avenue, with the lights coming on and the [illegible]ds scurrying homeward.

Several years ago, when he was going about in society a little, he never showed up at a dance with a girl on his arm. Nor would he join the stag line, and cut in on lucky fellows who had partners along. Rather, he would stand on the sidelines, surveying the milling young men and chattering young women, with a smile of amused tolerance more befitting a man of eighty than a young fellow in his twenties.

Certainly he did not show the aloofness, and the detachment that might have been expected of such a philosopher when his Valia decided she couldn't be his inspiration any more. He behaved, on the contrary, just like a stock broker or a lawyer or any other young man suddenly brought face to

The Romance of Nikko Cheyne

INSTALLMENT XII.

At Plevi.

BARON VILASTO was roused from sleep by a light touch on his hand. He blinked, stirred, and sat up. Bettany, in a white wrap, was beside his bed.

"My child, what is it?" he asked. "Are you ill?"

She shook her head.

"I am going on to the roof," she said.

He held his watch to his ear and touched the spring.

"But it is only four o'clock."

"Is it? I didn't look at the time—but I thought I would tell you where I had gone."

"You seem strange," he said. "Give me a moment and I will come with you."

"No, Sidimir. Nikko is there."

"Cheyne! But the trap was locked—why do you think."

"I am sure—I felt it—he woke me—calling."

"But that was dangerous."

"No, not aloud—just a message I——"

Suddenly she seized his hand and clung to it.

"You are frightened," said he.

"I—am—rather—frightened. If he were not there it could only mean—that—but he is—must be. I'll soon——"

She ran silently from the room, lowered the trapdoor steps and unlocked the padlock. Before lifting the trapdoor she hesitated, and when she stepped out on the roof it was with her eyes shut and not courage enough to open them.

"Coward, coward," she reproached herself, and pushed back the lids with her fingers.

To all appearances dead, Nikko Cheyne sprawled face downward on the roof. She ran and fell on her knees beside him. He was breathing—he was asleep. With a little cry of thankfulness she picked up his head and laid it in her lap as though he were a child. Nikko stirred, but did not wake. She pulled the bundle he had brought toward her to make a rest for her back and moved her hands over his hair. A happiness too intense for words stole through her as she held him there and looked down into his face.

He was so young asleep—so clean—such a boy. At the corners of his mouth a smile played, and the color of his eyes shone through the shut lids.

Every line she remembered—and her thoughts went back across a gulf of seven years to that tragic last meeting in the hotel at Paris, where to fill the emptiness before her she had stored a picture of his face to carry for all time in her heart.

The picture had not failed, and looking on him now was like holding up true memory before a mirror. Nikko moved his head and a small island of doubt gathered between his brows.

"No," she whispered, and stooping, kissed his forehead. "Not that look, Nikko. There is no need, my lover."

The island vanished. He gave an easy sigh, rubbed his cheek against her hand and settled into deeper sleep. Time stole onward—shadows shortened—the sun clambered up into the sky.

It was nine o'clock when Baron Vilasto came out upon the roof. He had brough a bowl of coffee and roll.

Bettany shook her head and laid a finger to her lips. Vilasto nodded, set them down beside her and retreated quickly.

Perhaps the sense of another presence startled Nikko to sudden wakefulness. He sat up and stared at Bettany wildly.

"Hush," she said. "There is no one here."

His expression relaxed.

"I was asleep—I shouldn't have been asleep. Some one—anything."

She shook her head.

"This little kingdom is still my own. We are safe here."

"How did you know?" he began.

"You called me—and I came."

"You heard?"

"I felt—and then I found you asleep."

"For how long have I——"

"Three hours—four perhaps. You must have been tired to sleep with your head against the roof."

"Was it?" he answered. "I dreamed——"

He looked down and saw the creases his head had made where it had rested in her lap. He picked up one of her hands and held it to his face.

"That couldn't have been a dream."

"Nikko, Nikko," she said, "I love you so lying like a child in my arms."

"I have wasted the most precious moments of my life," he answered reproachfully.

"I love you so," she said again. "It was like when we were in Paris—together—not saying a word—but together."

He looked at her devotedly—devouringly.

"This little kingdom is still my own; we are safe here."

"Was that enough to make you forget all else, Bettany—will it be enough?"

She gave an infinitesimal movement to stop him.

"Let us ask nothing today," she said. "Today is utterly ours, Nikko. Until tonight we two are all that matters."

"You're wonderful," said he. "When shadows wide as a country stretch between us you step through them and they are gone. A hundred things have happened, Bettany, that I am here to tell. Aren't you curious? Am I not to begin?"

"Yes, O, yes, soon—we have all the day. Until tonight you are my prisoner, Nikko."

"Until tonight," he laughed. "Forever!"

She moved her shoulders.

"And I yours—I yours. It's good—it's lovely to be sure of that."

She gave a shiver of delight, passed a hand almost roughly over his face, and laughed.

"We'll have breakfast now, Nikko, our first together." And putting the coffee bowl between them, she broke the little roll into halves. "I can get more if there isn't enough."

"I was only hungry for you, Bettany."

"But you must eat. Please do."

She watched him swallow a mouthful of bread and take a gulp of coffee.

It tasted so good that he took another.

"That's better. What is that bruise on your throat, Nikko? All blue it is."

"We had a fight last night."

"We?" Interest sparkled in her eyes.

"Raoul and Jean Festubert, Max Gourod, Kressen and myself. We were getting horses."

"Yes."

"We got them all right."

She was silent for a moment—then:

"I want to know, Nikko. It isn't away from our love—it is part of it. I want to know all that has happened to you—little—big—all. I've been a prisoner here for ten months. One almost forgets there is a world. And you must want to tell. Only women put love by itself in their hearts. With men it is one with the rest of their lives. They carry it with them into action, into their work, into everything. Tell me how you have worked and loved me since you came to Sciriel."

While he talked she sat with her chin resting on her knees, sometimes nodding—sparkling—shrinking. Once she said:

"What a broken little country," and there were tears in her eyes.

And when he spoke of Foscani.

"He was here last night. No, keep down. You would be seen from the street, standing."

At the end.

"Tomorrow night. I shall be ready."

"The uniform you are to wear is in the bundle."

Bettany gave a small gesture of disgust.

"Very well. But what a finish, Nikko—to ride away wearing——"

She saw the look of pain on his face and hastened to smooth it away with an impulsive pressure of the hand.

"I should be ashamed to have said that. Forget it. Pride—just vulgar pride. Yes, go on. I am to be dressed ready after dusk."

Nikko nodded.

"Yes, that is all. We shall decide tonight the exact method before I start for Plevi."

"I am glad you are going to Plevi," she said. "I shall feel certain that way. But O, Nikko, I wish you could be here as well."

"If you knew how I wished that," he began, then switched to, "but they are splendid fellows. You can trust them to the death."

"So there are still a few who love me"

"Bettany!"

Her voice fell to a lower note with a touch of bitterness.

"But so few that I am no longer worth while——"

From the distance came the pulsing of a drum, bugle notes, and the tramp of marching men.

"What's that?" she asked.

Nikko listened and the sound grew. There were voices now, singing the rough new songs of the revolution.

"Freedom, freedom, God has given freedom;
Freedom, freedom, bear the banner high."

"One of Foscani's patriotic marches," said Nikko, and shrugged his shoulders. "There was an order poted in the streets yesterday bidding all who were not engaged in work to join the march."

The sound increased in volume.

Bettany rose, moved across the roof, and leaned over the parapet.

"Hundreds," she said, "hundreds of them, with his guards as sheep dogs."

A Blue Ribbon Serial By Roland Pertwee

Keeping low, Nikko went toward her and peered through a square rain vent into the street.

The procession, headed by its makeshift band and a squadron of the civil guard, was moving toward the house. It was a tatter-demalion company, impressed mainly from the slums of Djevo, but toward the tail end marched a hundred or more decent citizens, having, as it were, gathered themselves together in a class of their own. These better looking folks seemed to have attracted to themselves quite a number of the guard, who by voice and gesture were urging them to give evidence of patriotic fervor.

"Sing up, you fat bellied hogs," a mighty voice shouted. "Sing!"

The cadences of the foolish vaunting song rose and fell.

Bettany drew herself up and stood erect as the procession came before the house. Some one saw her, pointed, and as though by an order common to all, the sea of faces turned upward.

The song stopped, the whole procession halting in its stride. Some one laughed. A figure dressed in the filthiest rags hopped out into the roadway, danced like an ape, and made derisive gestures with his hands.

"Yow, yow, yow!" he yelled. Yow! What does freedom taste like?"

And suddenly from among the decent burghers leaped a fat man who beat clenched fists into the leering face. In an instant two of the guards fell upon him.

Then a voice—voices—rang out.

"Let the man be. Leave him. He was right to strike."

And another voice:

"Natalie! Natalie!"

And twenty throats roaring: "Natalie!"

A whistle blew. The mounted guard at the head of the procession wheeled their horses and spurred with sabers bared toward the center of the tumult.

Some one shrieked. A pistol barked. A fight broke out in the crowd itself. Tearing, clutching, the thud of fists against faces.

Some one cried:

"To hell with Foscani! Down with the revolution!"

An officer with a voice like the roar of a cannon shouted:

"Clear the street! Clear, you scum, or be shot!"

Madness was abroad. Many fled, but a little band in which a spark of old patriotism had suddenly flared rallied, bunched and shouted back defiance. As if by magic a space was cleared on both sides of them.

"Break into the house! Set her free!"

"Set her free!" was their battle cry.

A shutter on a ground floor was flung open and half a dozen rifles squibbed and squibbed again. The bullets slapped into the unprotected bodies. In that close packed group of foolish martyrs the dead had no room to fall.

The mounted men rode in with their sabers, resistance crumbled—the remnant broke and scattered.

Then silence—then that voice again, herding together those who had stood aside.

"Fall in! March! Sing, hogs, sing!"

The drum throbbed, bugles blared, the procession moved on.

Bettany had not stirred. Erect as a pillar she stood looking down upon the quiet corpses that lay in such strange shapes upon the road. At last:

"They died for me," she said. "For me, and I shall never even put a flower on their graves."

* * * *

At noon a message came from Foscani to apologize to Bettany for what had taken place before the house. He trusted that she would not allow it to interfere with her peace of mind. Steps, he assured her, would be taken to prevent any recurrence of the outbreak.

Steps were taken, and during the afternoon there were fires in several parts of the city, when certain good citizens, suspected of having taken part in the riot, perished with their families in the flames.

A little before dusk an open cart came and collected the dead bodies. As the driver drove away he shouted, "Dead royalists. Dead royalists," over and over again, as though he had wares to sell.

Since the tragic affair there had been many comings and goings to and from the house. Visits were paid by several members of the D. S. N., and the captain of the guard was complimented on the admirable shooting of his subordinates.

Fearing some one might come up to her floor, Bettany left the roof and sat miserably in her little room, while Nikko crouched on the leads behind the chimney stack and counted the hours until darkness.

A plan had developed in his mind directly arising from the morning's tragedy, and, seated alone up there, he worked it out in detail. Only one thing troubled him, but he did not see how it could be avoided.

"And anyway," he said to himself, "murderers deserve to die, and Max Gourod will sleep none the worse for his part in the business."

Toward dusk Bettany stole up to the roof and gave him food and drink. For half an hour they were together. He told her the arrangements he had made and she nodded her consent.

"I shall wait, now, until you go." Then shivered.

"It's cold for you here."

"It was not cold made me shiver," she said, then cried out: "O, my dear lover, I don't want you to leave me. I'm afraid."

"We shall succeed, Bettany."

"Not of success, but—but—Nikko, stop my saying any more—my mind is whirling with terrors that, spoken of, might come true."

"Bettany!"

He drew her to him and kissed her mouth, her eyes, her hair, until slowly her muscles ceased to twitch and she lay limp in his arms.

A clock struck nine.

Nikko stirred uneasily.

"You must go?"

He nodded. She clung to him.

"This day was spoiled for us by martyrs, Nikko, but we have other days."

For a long moment they held each other tight.

"God bless you, dearest, dearest."

"God bless you, lover."

He vanished like a ghost, and though she peered down into the garden she saw nothing of the path he had taken.

* * * *

A little after the half hour Nikko Cheyne appeared at the House of Friends.

The four had already gathered, Max and Pierre having arrived but five minutes earlier.

"A lift on that same ration convoy," Max explained. "Else we would not have been here before tomorrow's sunrise."

"It is fixed for tomorrow night," said Nikko. "Here is the plan."

He expounded swiftly but exactly.

"I dared not trust to the tree. If the sentry below were to see he would fire and—after all, the brutes shot unarmed men for sport today."

"I was there," said Raoul. His face was white with anger. "I was there, and because of what was before us I skulked with that gutter filth while the murders were done."

"I am only afraid of the noise," said Nikko.

Max Gourod waved him down.

"I have a pair of .22 automatics," he said. "Very quiet, and with a reduced charge—it would be at close range."

Nikko nodded.

"They have revolvers."

"Bah!" said Max Gourod. "I shoot with both hands. Besides, these others will be there, while Pierre attends to the sentry."

"Is everything understood?"

"Everything."

"You won't fail?" said Nikko earnestly. "For God's sake don't fail!"

"Never fear," they said in chorus.

He gripped the hand of each man in turn.

"At the leech gatherer's hut, then?"

"We shall be there."

"Luck, then."

Nikko Cheyne went back to Mekla's house, where he saddled his horse, mounted, and rode down to the city gate.

"Who goes?" cried the sentry.

"Friend. Do you want to see the liberator's signature on a pass?" and Nikko fumbled in the breast pocket of his coat.

"I have seen it often enough on every wall," said the sentry, with a gruff laugh. "Pass out, friend."

Nikko spurred through the gate, turned on to the grass by the place of execution, and cantered beneath the wall to the house where the horses were so queerly stabled. Here he changed into the uniform of the mounted police, buckled on the sword, and dragged a hard bitten roan mare down the stairs to the hall, where by feel alone he saddled and bridled her.

"Thirty-five miles, my beauties, to the half-way house, and no stopping by the way. Come on, now."

Dropping a carbine into its leather bucket and bringing the mare alongside his own mount, he swung to the saddle and galloped away into the night.

The great adventure had begun.

At the half-way house, the deserted farm standing back a quarter of a mile from the road, he changed his sweating horses for two of those that had been left in the outbuildings by Max and Pierre on the preceding night. The new horses were fresh and lively, and stretched to their task with fine spirit.

A few hundred yards from his starting point was a cross road, one leading to Plesna, the other to the frontier. Nikko took the latter. From the farm to Plevi as the crow flies was something under thirty miles, but in the uncertain dark Nikko thought it safer even though it meant an increase in distance to keep to the road.

The hoofs clattered merrily through sleeping villages, but though dogs barked no one looked from the window to see who rode so hard.

Nikko came to the leech gatherer's cottage a little after two o'clock. The pond at the back with its loathsome population reflected a single star as he rode by. Two o'clock. Fifteen miles to go and still an hour and a half of darkness. He slackened rein and let the horses make their own pace along the mysterious road that wound through the forest of Svorzo. It was an uncanny place—a place full of ill omen and of a silence like the grave.

A white owl flapped past him on silent wings, the wind of them stirring his hair; and twice the dismal howl of a wolf echoed among the trees.

Nikko breathed a sigh of relief when of a sudden he felt the cool of open spaces, and, looking up, saw the stars shining in the heavens and before him the lights of the prison of Plevi.

The barn was to the right—three hundred yards away and easy to find. A solid structure, for all that there was a hole here and there where mortar had crumbled between the blocks of rough hewn limestone. Nikko rode in and, closing the great door behind him, let the bar fall into its slot.

Loosening his horses' girths, he tethered them to the hay grid of a manger. Then, standing with his back to the prison, he struck a match and looked about him. In one corner was a bit of hay—and beside it a loaf of bread, a sausage, and a jug of water.

A clear message that Savarin meant to keep faith.

With a sigh of relief, Nikko dorpped down upon the hay and, closing his hand round the butt of his pistol, fell into a deep sleep.

* * * *

Nikko awoke to the sound of low grumbling explosions. The prison gangs were blasting in one of the quarries near by. Looking through a gap in the wall, he saw columns of yellowy blue smoke rise, mushroom, and melt with the bursting of every charge. Upon an eminence half a mile away dominating a pit the shape of an escallop shell stood a number of warders, their rifles held at ease. In the pit gray figures moved like maggots in a carcass.

Between the pits and the stone pile of Plevi prison was a constant coming and going of chained gangs. Nikko was too far off to see the faces of these men, but from the way they dragged their feet it was clear they were in advanced stages of exhaustion and despair. As they stumbled he could hear the clink, clink of the chains that united them.

And these poor, cowed creatures less than a year before had been the proudest gentlemen in Sciriel. Bad food, hard usage, and the indignities of prison life had brought them down to the level of scavenger dogs.

The warders who walked beside them carried revolvers and heavy whips, which they did not hesitate to use.

Degradation is never a pretty thing to watch. The whole place was a blot—a scar on the lovely landscape of Sciriel—and Nikko turned away in angry disgust.

Sitting on the hay, he attacked the loaf and the sausage, but after what he had seen of the poor, starved wretches near by he felt ashamed to eat. Rising, he carried most of the bread to the two horses, and fondled their warm, smooth noses and sleek necks and talked to them in low whispers of this and that.

And so an hour went by. As yet he had not looked at his watch, but when he did he was surprised to find that it was after two o'clock. He had slept much longer than he imagined, for which he was grateful. Nothing in the world is more wearing to the nerves than the hours of waiting before action.

The growl of the blasting echoed dismally among the mountains.

For want of something, of anything to do, Nikko clambered up a broken ladder to the loft. From here, through gaps where tiles had fallen or twisted, was a panorama of the countryside. The prison, the quarries, the white road along which he had traveled the night before—the mighty

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga

The Ultimate Victory of God.

THE second basis of hopefulness for the world is in the setting forth of the vital teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the workability of these teachings.

The face and figure of Jesus Christ have been dimmed and the vital simplicity of his gospel has been complicated by false traditional accretions.

The same peril besets us, against which Jesus warned the theological teachers of his day, "in making void the word of God through traditions."

Some years ago Dr. Borden P. Bowne wrote:

"The Christian revelation is essentially a revelation of God. It teaches us what God is, and what He means. It is, primarily and fundamentally, a revelation of the righteousness and grace of God. It tells us how God feels toward us; how we are to think of life and its meaning, of death and destiny, of our mutual human relations also, and the spirit in which we are to live. The answer to these questions constitutes the gist of Christian revelation; and this answer the church forever repeats in its profession of faith in God the Father, in His Son, our Saviour and in the forgiveness of sins in the kingdom of God upon earth, and in the life everlasting. These ideas have come with abiding power and definiteness and fullness into the world's thought and life only along the line of God's revelation of Himself through the prophets and through His Son."

Various influences have resulted in destroying the simplicity of the Gospel and reducing its power.

We have sought to force on the minds of people the dogma of Biblical inerrancy even in the realm of science. Churchmen here spoke as if it were a fundamental matter that Moses should have written the entire Pentateuch, and as if a belief in the two-fold authorship of Isaiah were a dangerous heresy.

The rejection of certain theories of the atonement has been regarded as a denial of the fact of the atonement.

Dr. L. P. Jacks in his book, "Religious Perplexities," has described this injury to vital Christianity;

"Christianity in the official or authorized presentation of it is a smothered religion, smothered because almost to the point of total asphyxiation and collapse but not quite; smothered by the vested interests of great institutions, and by the ambitious fears and self-seekings that such interests breed; smothered by the elaborate theological defense that the Christians have built, not against anti-Christ, but against each other; smothered by anxieties, not unnatural in their embroilments, for its own future.

If you take Christianity along with its entanglements, encumbrances and unnatural alliances, if you present it with all the secular baggage which the ages gave fastened upon it, you will then find it a hopelessly perplexing thing."

The Nicene Creed has bulked larger in the thought of the churchmen of the past than the Sermon on the Mount, but this misplaced emphasis of a rigid orthodoxy did not lead to industrial justice nor to arbitration for international disputes.

There has been a confusion of the central realities of the Christian doctrine with the interpretation and explanations of this doctrine in the history of the Church.

The explanation of a fact has been confused with the fact itself. A church editor gives forceful expression to this confusion:

"In opposition to all these subtleties of reasoning, extremes of belief, confusions of teaching and absurdities of practice, come the clear, simple, straightforward teaching and example of Jesus. In vain men search the words of the Christ for arguments to uphold the major part of the dogmas that have oppressed the church of the living God through the centuries. The precepts of the Sermon on the Mount, the parables of the sheep and the goats, the prodigal son, the Good Samaritan, and a few passages from the Gospel of John give the substance of His teaching, the essence of which is the spirit of love, the spirit of truth, and the possibility of conscious communion with a personal God. The spirit of love guided by the spirit of truth, scientific, theologic, philosophic, afraid of nothing but error, the spirit of truth warmed by the spirit of love so that every new discovery becomes not a cold and formal thing but a part of the divine revelation—these principles reinforced by a mystic communion with the Father are yet destined to take this world for Christ."

Jesus affirmed the abiding certainties of the Christian doctrine with absolute positiveness and finality. "I am the way, the Truth and the Life."

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

Contrary to popular notions, Jesus confessed His absence of knowledge on some things, but when He came to moral issues, to righteousness, to right relationships between man and man, and God and man, He always spoke with the note of authority and certainty.

Dr. W. N. Clarke wrote:

"Here are five great realities that had come from Christ into experience, and come from experience to be assured possessions of the Christian people. The five great realities are:

The Fatherhood of God, the Saviourhood of Jesus Christ, the Friendhood of the Spirit, the Supremacy of Love, and the Transforming Power.

The assertion of these realities forms the main stock of doctrine in the early Christianity. I doubt whether there were any other truths that deserve to rank with these, though doubtless there are other truths implied in these."

I would state in a different way the truths of the Gospel of Christ that are basic and fundamental, and yet the substance of the two forms of the statement are the same:

1. God is our Father with the necessary postulate of human brotherhood.

2. There is the fact of Jesus Christ: His incarnation, atonement, resurrection and ascension.

3. There is the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

4. Man is the child of God and immortal.

5. There is the fact of the kingdom of God, spiritual and universal in its nature.

All of these mean a right relationship between man and God, and between man and man. We are to keep the central message distinct and emphatic. This is our safety and strength.

The one truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ which is the basis of these five realities, and which belongs to each of them is the supremacy of love, a love which gives Christ's valuation to the human personality, which accentuates human brotherhood, which makes application of the teachings of Jesus to society which hold with a vital working faith to the universal application of the Gospel, and which carries the assurance of the victory of the Gospel in this present world.

Dr. W. H. P. Francis writes: "Either the teaching of Jesus applies now and here, or it applies nowhere and never. We have no use for a law of gravitation which applies to a pebble on the beach, but cannot explain the revolution of the stars. We reject any Christian ethic unless it is universal in its scope and can guide a hundred million associated citizens as truly as the single peasant in his cottage."

"Thou shalt love is a law which has the greatest binding force upon the greatest number of people and finds its clearest application in the desperate emergencies of international affairs."

Miss Jeans' Man

ity. More than that, she would put no bar in the way of this strange necessity which came to lead him periodically to the pub like old Jackman's horse to the village pond.

She had supplied him with shirts. She supplied him with other things without docking his meager salary—boots, socks, underclothes, a new suit. Another woman might have put her foot down and barred the way to the inn. If she had done so James would without any doubt have gone back to the road. Instead he stayed, and staying, he paid her back in a way by his presence.

As a matter of fact, he filled a need in her heart, which craved naturally and instinctively for something to look after other than the cat and herself.

She would have made a good wife, and, barring the fact that James lived in the outhouse and had meals in the kitchen, she might have been his wife from all she did for him and had she not been, in fact, his mistress!

As a mistress she had a power that he would have resented in a wife—the power to make him work.

VI.

For two years and a half things went on in this fashion and then the end came. Age had been holding off from James, and then all of a sudden it fell on him. It was a bad winter, and one night at the Crown and Anchor when he had consumed no more than his customary allowance of beer his legs failed him so that he had to be escorted home. On the way home he had sat down twice in the snow and next morning he was too ill to get up. Miss Jeans called in the doctor.

Dr. Townsend was a physician of the old type. He had brought the whole Bunbury village into the world. He still used a wooden stethoscope. He knew everybody's affairs, and he was the only person who knew the doubtful origin of James.

He had the old time disapproval of tramps in his bones, so to speak, but he knew Miss Jeans and the uselessness of opposing any of her schemes, philanthropic or otherwise.

This morning, when he had declared his patient to be suffering from incipient pneumonia and a case for the county hospital, he scarcely opposed the old lady's decision to remove James from the outhouse to the cottage and her own bed, she taking the spare room. He knew it would be waste of time and his time was valuable.

"Well, have it your own way," said he. "I'll see him again tomorrow and I'll send on the district nurse."

But the nursing was done, for the most part, by Miss Jeans.

However, it did not last long. Neither did the patient.

Pneumonia depends very much on what it is the sequel to. Following upon the life that James had led for many years, it found no resisting powers to combat it and the end came in a few days from heart failure. The effect on the village, taking the cause into consideration, was profound.

The death of the parson, or Tremlett the bell ringer, or any other worthy would have moved the people far less. In two years and a half Miss Jeans' man had become part of the established order of things and almost part of the old lady herself. Her skirts covered him, and it was mainly on her account that the funeral filled the churchyard and that wreaths such as winter could produce were sent from such as could afford them.

She arranged with Grundy, the stone mason, for a headstone to be put up when the ground had properly settled, and then she relapsed into her ordinary way of life; and Hobbs, an older and wiser man, also out of work, came back as temporary gardener.

Spring came, and the crocuses and then the later flowers, and then a little glass jam jar of the ornate type that a certain jam maker puts his jam up in appeared on the grave of the deceased tramp with flowers in it. A tribute to his memory.

No one laughed.

If they had been inclined to do so they would have been checked by the fact, clear enough to be seen, that the old lady was failing. She had been the same age for so many years that it had seemed she might go on being the same age forever. But that is not the way of life.

One day, when the sweet peas were in flower, she sent Mary Elizabeth Jane Cordery, now shingled and in silk stockings, to Dr. Townsend for a bottle of the tonic stuff. He did not send it; he brought it himself, and, finding her wrapped in a shawl on the little seat by the front door, held converse with her facing the scented garden where Hobbs was at work and where the woodbine was filling the air with its fragrance.

"I doubt if it will do me much good," said she, nursing the paper-covered bottle in her lap. "I doubt I'm not long for this world, and my place is over there by him." And then it came out, for there was something in the color of the sweet peas and the perfume of the woodbine and the warmth of the July day that made her speak just as warmth brings out sympathetic ink, and Townsend was her oldest friend.

tumed only in his nightdress, and his assailant met, has never been made public. If the widow or children ever knew, they kept it a family secret. Detectives, however, have described, from what the evidence indicated, how the 57-year-old broker stood off his assailant for a time, while he battled against odds for his life.

The first word of the murder reached the authorities at 6 o'clock in the morning of July 29. Patrolman John Mangum, standing half a block away, heard screaming. He saw two young men, attired only in nightdresses, on the stoop of the Nathan residence.

One's nightgown was covered with blood. His feet too were smeared with it. This was Fred Nathan.

"Come quick," he pleaded, "father has been murdered." Mangum bounced his nightstick on the sidewalk to signal for selp. This brought another policeman on the run.

They hastened into the house. Following a bloody trail of stained footprints, they reached the second floor. On the floor of the library they saw a shocking scene.

The body of the victim lay on the floor. It was on its back. The eyes were open. In them was registered a pleading, pitiable expression. Blood had been flowing from a dozen wounds in the skull. A chair, which formerly had stood in front of the sate, was overturned. On the corpse was only a nightgown which had been white. It was mostly crimson now.

Two bones in the fingers of the right hand were broken and the fingers were cut and bruised.

Mangum, taking charge of the preliminary investigation, sent a neighbor hurrying to the nearest police station. From there an alarm was telegraphed to headquarters. Superintendent of Police John Jourdan instructed Chief Detective James J. Kelso to detail every available plain-clothes investigator in the department to the case.

Fred Nathan Explains.

"Keep everybody in the house," directed Mangum, "and search for the weapon."

Mangum soon found the implement of death. It was a carpenter's dog. This is a tool of iron, about sixteen inches long, with a slight crook on the end like a staple.

As soon as the detectives arrived, they asked Fred Nathan to explain the blood on his feet and his nightdress.

He told them that about 6 o'clock his brother, Washington, aroused him excitedly and said:

"Get up quick! Papa has been killed! Hurry!"

Fred said that he rushed downstairs from the third floor and into the library. He bent down to see whether his father was still alive and if anything could be done for him.

In this way he knelt in a pool of blood and also smeared his feet. This is why, Fred asserted, the trail of bloodstains led down to the porch. Washington corroborated his brother Fred's story.

Kelso, who had arrived to take charge of the numerous police investigators, looked at Fred for a while. Then he suddenly exclaimed:

"I believe you. Tell us anything you know that will help to get the scoundrel who killed your father."

Fred explained then that he had come home just before midnight. There was a light burning in the library. From the hallway, he had said:

"Good night."

The father did not reply. Fred thought nothing of that, he added, because the storm was making so much disturbance that he believed his father did not hear him. He went to sleep and heard nothing until his brother awakened him to tell him of the murder.

The detectives questioned Washington Nathan more closely. They had two reasons for this. First, it was he who had found the father murdered, as he said. Second, he was reported to be the chief beneficiary of a will the police heard the dead father had planned to change.

Washington told the detectives that he left his father on the street the night before to keep an appointment with a girl. Miss Clara Dale afterward informed the police this part of Washington's story was true and that he was with her until nearly midnight. He placed his hour of retirement at 12:30 o'clock.

Thorough Examination.

Chief Kelso had a thorough examination of all doors and windows made, there was not a mark of any description to indicate that one had been forced.

Suspicion of the police that the murderer was well acquainted with the interior of the house was strengthened by other clews. Patrick Devoy, hired man for Prof. Samuel Morse, who lived back of the Nathan home, told the police a closed carriage drew up to the stable in the rear of the Nathan residence at 10:30 o'clock the night of the murder and drew away hurriedly, after remaining through the heavy rainfall, around 2 o'clock in the morning.

The police were swamped with suggestions and theories as to the motive for the crime and the identity of the person who committed it.

Some suggested a rival broker killed Nathan for business reasons.

Police Hold Secret, Says Public

"The police know, but they won't tell!"

How often do we hear that said in connection with a famous murder mystery! The Nathan murder is regarded as the most puzzling in New York history, yet you will hear it gravely stated that the police know the solution but for various reasons have never divulged it. It is also stated, just as wisely, that the police know who committed the Elwell and Hall-Mills murders.

Others suggested a burglar did it. Still others had a theory that it was the deed of a lunatic.

From the dead man a very valuable studded hunting case gold watch, an open face watch and some diamond shirt studs were taken. The police, nevertheless scouted robbery as a theory. They were inclined to think that the jewels had been taken as a "blind" to throw the police off the track of the assassin, who had another motive.

It was partly because of the mutilation of the victim that the police scoffed at the burglary theory.

"One blow on the head from that deadly weapon would render anybody helpless," said Chief Kelso. "Whoever rained those blows on that man's head had some grievance and was unmerciful. A burglar might have hit him once in order to seize the jewels for a quick getaway. He would not linger long enough to mutilate anybody in that way."

The murder shocked the residents of the city. Mayor A. Oakley Hill issued a proclamation offering rewards that aggregated $47,000.

This was a princely sum in those days when mechanics earned a dollar a day wages, and fortunate was the man whose salary amounted to $1,000 a year.

Curiosity Seekers.

The stock exchange offered $10,000 bounty for the capture of the villain. Mrs. Emily Nathan, the widow, announced she would guarantee the payment of the rewards.

In addition $1,000 reward each was offered to recover the diamond studs, $1,500 for the hunting-case watch and $300 for the open-face timepiece.

So sensational was the murder that cordons of police were required for the next two days to keep thousands of curiosity seekers, who came to view the house and choked traffic in West 23d street, in some semblance of order.

The day of the funeral, 10,000 persons massed outside the house. Relatives and friends had to fight their way through the crowd to the Nathan residence, where the funeral services were held. August Belmont, Henry Clews and Supreme Court Justice Joseph Daly, who died a few years ago in Yonkers, were a few of the celebrities who managed to squeeze their way into the house. In the funeral cortege were seventy-five carriages.

The high point of the inquest came when the personable young woman named Clara Dale arose to corroborate Washington Nathan's statements as to his movements between the hours of 9 and 12. Miss Dale was what is known as a "fallen woman." She said Nathan was in her company until 12:10 o'clock.

Dozens of witnesses were heard at the inquest. All New York watched the developments, just as they did in the Hall-Mills and Snyder cases. But the jury could find no verdict. The police eventually abandoned their efforts to corner the assassins.

Some years afterward, Irving, the Sing Sing burglar whom Detective Jackson often quizzed about the Nathan case, believing someone with inside knowledge of the Nathan home may have let the murderer in, made a sensational confession.

He said that Dan Kelley, a professional burglar, who was no relation to the Kelly servants employed in the Nathan establishment, induced Irving and another professional crook to rob the Nathan house.

Irving and the unnamed third man waited, during the storm, in the cellar after breaking in a rear door. They said they must have been there four hours when Kelley, who had gone upstairs shortly after midnight, came down and told them he had got the stuff.

Then Kelley led them, Irving explained, up to the first floor and they all left by the front door around daybreak.

Neither Would Believe It.

Neither Jackson nor Kelso would believe this story for the reason that no door had been broken open in the Nathan house that night. Moreover, other statements Irving made were out of joint with other circumstances of the murder.

Irving went to Sing Sing for various burglaries. Then George Ellis, a convict, declared that if he were in New York he could establish the identity of the Nathan murderer. He was brought down with great secrecy and given a chance to identify the weapon. He picked it out immediately.

Ellis named Billy Forrester, one of the most notorious criminals of the day, as the murderer. Forrester was found in Texas and upon being brought back to New York he hired Abe Hummel of the famous law firm of Howe and Hummel. The case against Forrester failed.

Washington Nathan received bequests of $75,000 from his father, $25,000 from his grandmother, and $10,000 from an aunt. His habits and associations continued evil, the suspicion of guilt seeming to undermine further an already weak character.

In 1879—the year his mother died and left him a trust fund of $100,000—he again achieved unpleasant notoriety. While calling upon an actress, Miss Alice Harrison, he was shot and wounded in the neck by a woman named Fanny Barrett. The bullet was never removed.

In 1884 Washington Nathan married and left America. He lived in London and Paris, dissipated his fortune, and in 1891 creditors brought suit against him. He died the following year. Though but 44, his hair had turned entirely white.

forest of Svorzo, and beyond that the mountains of freedom.

With a little imagination he could almost fix the exact spot on their steep blue sides where the road passed through the frontier post, and where, with the morrow's dawn, the last fight was to take place.

And after that—

A nervousness almost pitiable—contemptible—shook Nikko Cheyne from head to foot. What if something went wrong—some accident—some failure. Suppose Raoul muddled—suppose the gallant four were shot down at the city gates. Or a pursuit—Bettany overtaken and——

Sweat poured from his forehead.

"Damn you, stop thinking," he said to himself, and beat his fists upon his thighs. "Stop thinking."

In a corner of the loft neatly stacked was a pyramid of long narrow tins. Nikko picked up one of them and examined the label.

Dynamite cartridges of the kind used for blasting. Beside them was a box of electrically operated detonators to which were attached neatly wound coils of insulated copper wires. Evidently the loft was used as an explosive dump for the nearest pit.

In the Foreign Legion, who do many jobs besides soldiering, Nikko had taken part in building a military road through the Atlas mountains. He had been in charge of blasting operations and was familiar with the handling of explosives. Then, however, they had used slow fuses, and the electric detonators were new to him. For something to do he occupied himself taking one of them to pieces with a penknife and fitting it together again. It was a clear cut bit of mechanism, the ends being connected by a fine filament of platinum embedded in a guncotton priming on top of a charge of fulminate.

Nikko had put the fuse back in the box when a fantastic idea recurred in his mind. At first he dismissed it as absurd, but the idea refused to be dismissed. Collecting six of the dynamite cartridges and as many fuses, he carried them down the ladder and packed them in the leather pockets of the police saddle.

It was five o'clock when, from sheer boredom, Nikko returned to the loft.

The gangs were being driven in from the pits to the walled yard. The warders had left the eminences upon which they had been standing all day and were returning toward the prison.

Above the prison roof a feather of steam appeared and a siren hooted—thrice. The sound echoed and re-echoed along the range of sullen hills.

"oo — hoo — hoo! Hoo—hoo—hoo!"

It was followed by the yelping bark of a klaxon horn.

Nikko Cheyne spun round quickly.

At the spot where the road emerged from the forest a car appeared, followed by another, and yet another. On the radiator caps of each car fluttered a little flag of black and crimson silk. The first and last cars were filled with men wearing the horizon blue uniform of the civil guard, but in the middle car a tall figure dressed from head to foot in black sat alone.

It was Foscani.

Even at three hundred yards' distance there was no mistaking him. He sat motionless, his great white face lit with that curious and unfeeling smile.

Next to the chauffeur sat the huge Arnaut, Serge, who had ridden up to Nikko in the square on the night he arrived in Djevo.

Foscani had kept his word and come to Plevi—a day—one day too soon.

Fingers cold as death clutched at Nikko's heart.

The prison gates were flung open.

Foscani and his bodyguard drove through.

There's Phil Baker, who is really funny; there are Brennan and Rogers, who at the death of Bert Savoy, took things up where Savoy and Brennan left them off; there's no end of catchy music and vigorous dancing and above all, the seats in this 44th Street theater are comfortable. "A Night in Spain" is one of those fast-moving shows during which you forget completely about little Hazel needing shoes and Lord knows where the money's coming from.

And the women are still contending it's their clothes which cost so much! Theirs? Well, sir, your old correspondent recently decided to discard the sombrero he's been scaring pedestrians with for so long, and made up his mind he'd go in for a new hat. He entered a far from frightening looking shop and picked up an unpretentious gray model as the one he'd like to knock about it. Once this hat reached the Wyly head I distinctly heard the clerk mumble something about $27.50! Now really! And not even a paradise on it! The old sombrero is looking very nicely since it was cleaned, thank you.

After all, I suppose actors have as much right to be absent-minded as anybody. A few weeks back, you remember, all that we thought about was sash-weights. I suppose it was quite excusable, therefore, that the butler in Miss Barrymore's "The Constant Wife" should one evening bounce upon the stage, and instead of announcing the character in the play, quite majestically bellow out "Mrs. Schneider!"

As a matter of fact, I could never get particularly upset over the Snyder-Gray proceedings. Maybe it followed too closely upon the heels of my favorite of all trials, the Stevens-Hall performance. It was not, I thought, showing quite the right respect to them to so soon become clubby with another new mishap. People still in light mourning for the Hall-Stevens trial blatantly and with entire lack of loyalty, went in wholeheartedly for Mr. Gray, the corset salesman, and Mrs. Snyder, his hook-on.

face with the fact that his wife no longer loved him enough to go on living with him. He gloomed and sulked and avoided his friends, and then he went away.

Was he prophetic when he wrote, in "Questings," the following simple but eloquent lines?

Princess, too late your wistful smile I see,
For though my heart is moved to sudden fears,
I cannot come to give this hand to thee;
Thy face I long shall cherish in my mind,
And wonder why the gods were so unkind.

While submitting to no interviews, Clawson did tell intimates, before he went away, that he had no intention of giving up poetry because of the passing of his domestic bliss. On the contrary, he intends to be busier than ever. The intimates in question say that a little suffering never hurt a poet yet, and they expect the young man to produce some of his finest work in the course of the next year or two.

Until now he has had things pretty much his own way. Even his courtship, ardent though it was, did not provide him with obstacles to overcome, for the Russian beauty fell in love with him the first time she met him. That aching heart that has caused so many great writers of the past to wring poignant tenderness out of their own misery is now him. If life be suffering, he has lived. And it would not surprise those who know him should Valia be even more potent an inspiration, absent, than she was when she was by his side.

"When he came here that night I did not know him, weary and footsore as he was and a tramp on the roads, but when he told me his name and that he came from Maltby, then I knew him; but he did not know me, for I was an old, withered woman, not the plump young girl he'd kissed and promised to marry all those long years ago, when he went off to London to seek his fortune.

"He wasn't the man to marry. Never would a woman have been happy with him. I knew it then, for I had sense. But what is sense to a girl when her heart goes to a man?

"Never another man did I look at.

"No, though I had offers in plenty. He was my man and he'd gone away from me.

"It was God's mercy he did. It was not his fault, but the way he was made. Then God sent him back to me to show me what I had been saved from. But God knows he could not help himself, and so He sent him back to me in the end to give him rest a bit and decent burial, and there he lies. And there I'll lie beside him."

"He never knew you?" said the doctor.

"No," said she, "and he wouldn't have known me if I'd come to him as I was when young. I knew by the questions I put that he'd clean forgotten me and my family, but for the name of my father. He would not know me, not if I met him in heaven." She finished with a sigh, to which the wind made answer as it stirred the sweet peas and lifted the tresses of the honeysuckle.

Dr. Townsend left her to pursue his round of the village, much meditating on this artless story and its revelation of a one-sided love affair and a woman's fidelity to nothing.

"But what the devil does she want to lie beside him for?" he asked himself, having reviewed the whole situation and as he was passing the churchyard.

But no one could answer that. Nor man, nor woman, nor wind blowing the grasses upon the graves and the vane upon the steeple—the wind that may alter and fall, ye continueth.

ABOUT WALKING.

Do you ever wonder as you run to school why so many grownups find walking such hard work? It is probably because they did not learn to walk correctly when they were girls and boys.

Although every able-bodied person walks, not many walk properly. When you are young your feet may not trouble you, even if you walk incorrectly, but you are storing up trouble for adult days.

Even in college the effects of bad walking habits begin to appear. Fallen arches sometimes hinder even athletes. With advancing age the symptoms become more acute.

Leon Kranz, physical director of Northwestern university, gives a few simple rules which will insure you against bunion plasters and arch supports.

"Step on the outside border of the foot, so that the weight is on the toes instead of being concentrated on the ball of the foot," Mr. Kranz said. "Place the feet straight forward. Toeing out and toeing in are not only unsightly and awkward, but very injurious for the feet. Get the habit of walking 'Indian fashion' and you will always walk in comfort."

"I have a rare old victrola. It was once in the possession of George Washington."

"But there were no such things as victrolas in Washington's time."

"I know. That's what makes it so rare."

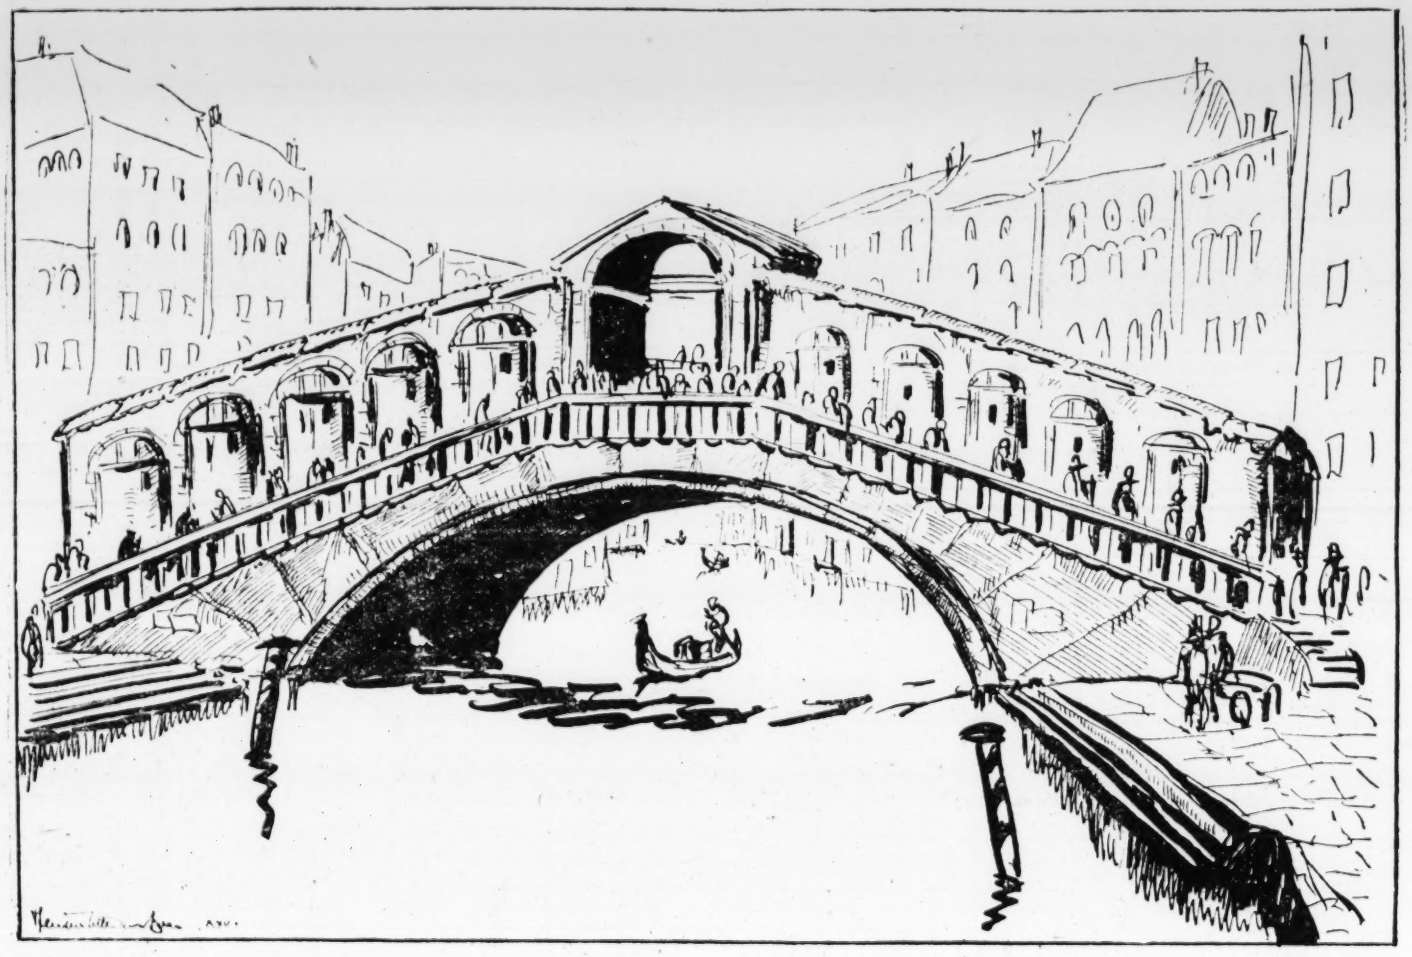

HOW CARELESS.

Mother: "Poor Jimmy is so unfortunate."

Caller: "How is that?"

Mother: "During the track meet he broke one of the best records they had at college."

Famous Monuments — THE RIALTO OF VENICE — By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

You will notice that the houses in the background have been merely indicated by a few lines. That was all that was really necessary. "The play is the thing," as Polonious said to the strolling players in William Shakespeare's well-known tragedy of "Hamlet." All the rest is non-essential and a mere indication of its existence ought to be enough.

Therefore whatever color you use, let the general tone be non-obtrusive, like a well-painted backdrop in the theater.

And the water of the Grand Canal, too, should not be too blatantly blue. For "the bridge is the thing." Now that bridge does not allow you to use a great many colors. The roof of the passageway in the center you can make a Venitian red, a color you find in many paint boxes, or if you not got it, then something red and brown with a slight advantage for the red. The windows you can make green.

But the bridges, alas! must be a sombre gray only you can use all the effects of light and dark grays of which you are capable.

On both sides of the bridge you will see low landing places. Suppose you make the steps and the stones red—rather a vermillion sort of a red. That will snap the bridge, which is the center, right into place. Red is a handy color. Or a dangerous one. As you will notice if you put too many of the passersby in red cloaks.

IT WAS on the Rialto—on one of the "high banks" that the business of the town of Venice was transacted. There the merchants from Kathay and Trevizond and from Alexandria and Famagusta met the representatives of the Great German and French and Flemish commercial houses and dealt with the Venitians who either as middlemen or direct traders were in constant relations with the east.

The middle ages had a weird habit of combining the ornamental with the useful. Hence those famous bridges in London and Florence and Venice which at the same time were used as a place of business and contained and show windows of all those engaged in the manufacture of articles of ornament or arms.

Today when Venice is merely a museum, the Rialto bridge sees few things of greater intrinsic value than cabbages and onions and bunches of garlic. But when Shakespeare wrote his famous play which deals with the love affairs of certain Venitian noblemen, the Rialto bridge and the streets on both sides were the heart of the city and quite as important as the Wall street of modern New York.

It is sad to reflect that here too one can almost count the years that the buildings of Venice will be able to hold themselves upright. It does not matter very much when we are told that the mountains of Switzerland have only four million more years to exist and that when the continued process of wear and tear will have caused them to become as flat as a pancake. But Venice is doomed. The constant change of the tides, leaving the foundations uncovered to the action of the air, the introduction of fast motor boats with their terrific waves, all these elements together with the perishable nature of the old Venitian stone, make it doubtful whether our grandchildren will see anything more than a few muddy ruins.

Which will be a pity, for the people of the eighteenth century were right—"To have lived without having seen Venice was not to have lived at all."

Caught in the Sheep War

A Story of Adventure in the West

By JOHN MATTER

SYNOPSIS.

Peter Martin, left an orphan, goes west to live with his Aunt Sarah and Uncle Dave, who own a sheep ranch. He is met at the station in Three Arrows by Tom Gentry, a surly young man who works for Peter's uncle. At his direction, Peter climbs into a wagon and takes the reins. Immediately the horses run away, and bear down upon a young girl riding a pony in the street. Peter tugs at the reins, and when one of them breaks, he heroically wraps the other around his wrist and leaps from the wagon. Some time later he recovers consciousness and finds himself in a store, surrounded by a crowd and attended by Doctor Harrison, father of the girl whose life he had saved. Peter finds that the piece of rein which he is still holding has been cut with a knife, and immediately realizes that Tom Gentry had started the runaway. While Peter is lying there still helpless from weakness, an evil looking man steps from the crowd and warns him that sheep men are not wanted in this town, and that he had better go back east. He also warns the doctor, and then while he covers the crowd with a revolver, several other men kidnap Helen Harrison, daughter of the doctor, and girl whose life Peter had just saved.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT III.

"But how did you happen to drive into town today, Aunt Sarah?" asked Peter, as they started for the ranch.

Before she answered, Aunt Sarah cracked her whip, the ponies that drew the buckboard in which they were seated trotted down the street and quickly brought them to the edge of town. She cracked her whip again and they broke into a gallop that carried them swiftly along the prairie trail.

"Before he could rise the two men were upon him."

"Never did trust that Gentry critter," she said finally. "After your Uncle Dave sent him to town today to fetch you, I began worrying—which is something I seldom do—so I went for a neighbor to stay with your uncle, and had one of the hands around the place to hitch up my team, and here we are. Lucky I came, too. That Tom Gentry—heaven grant I soon get my hands on him!—had half killed you, a couple of roustabouts had run off with Helen Harrison, that red-faced baboon of a Connors, who used to be a foreman of ours on the ranch till we discharged him for being drunk, had been waving a gun around in people's faces, and every man, woman and child in Three Arrows was standing still and gaping when I drove into town just after all this happened!"

She paused for breath and then continued, "What sort of men folks does them Three Arrows men call themselves? I thought Dr. Harrison had some ginger! But maybe the shock upset him. He was just sort of coming to when I arrived. Well, it didn't take me long to tell him to get out and start searching and the rest of them men folks to do the same. The kidnapers won't harm Helen. They're just trying o draw attention while the cattle gang pulls off some dirty work on us sheep people. Drat that county sheriff of ours! Elected by the cattle gang, he was, and yesterday he found it convenient to go to the next county seat on what he called a business trip. Something's in the wind. It sure looks suspicious."

"What's this about cattle and sheep?" asked Peter. "Is there a sort of war between the cattle owners and the sheep owners?"

"Well, war hasn't been openly declared," replied his aunt, grimly, "but I look for a declaration most any day now. You see, Peter, this is how it is: Up until a few years ago, all the country around here was given over to cattle grazing. It's been that way ever since white men came here. The land grows rough and broken in most any direction a few miles out from Three Arrows, and for miles and miles around here it's not good for much except grazing. The cattle people has always had free grazing and—human nature being as it is—maybe they aren't so much to blame if they want to keep it that way. At any rate, they don't welcome the sheep raisers who are drifting in and buying land and raising sheep."

"Has Uncle Dave always had sheep?" asked Peter.

"No, he used to graze cattle," replied Aunt Sarah. "He made enough money doing it to buy considerable land, and seeing that he's getting older, and also that he figured it would be easier for him to handle sheep and more money in it besides, he sold his cattle a couple of years ago and bought some sheep and started in the mutton and wool game. He's done right well at it, too, excepting he hasn't increased his number of friends, and if the truth is told he has made some enemies out of some old friends. However, as he says, a man has a right to raise what he wants to on his own land, providing what he does isn't harmful to someone else. Furthermore, your uncle says that no man can please everybody. And I reckon that's right, too."

"How did Gentry ever happen to work for you and Uncle Dave?" inquired Peter.

"Don't ask me," replied Aunt Sarah. "I never did like that Gentry better'n I do a rattlesnake, and often I've told your uncle he's nothing but a spy for the cattle people, sent by them to work on our ranch and to learn what he can. But your uncle never took me serious about it. Said Gentry was handy with the horses. Your uncle is a good man and he's always been a first rate husband to me, but there's a stubborn streak that comes to the surface sometimes that even I can't rid of in him. Maybe this will teach him a lesson!"

They rode in silence for a while. Peter was busy with his thoughts. It was all strange to him—the wide prairie, the people he had encountered in a few short hours, and this conflict over cattle and sheep.

"She's a right pretty girl," remarked Aunt Sarah, at length.

"Who?" asked Peter, and found himself blushing.

"I'm not talking about anyone in Chicago," continued his aunt. "And don't you go to worrying about her. Them cattle hands ain't going to harm her. And she don't get scared easy. Another thing, all bruised up like you are, you aren't in no condition to go galloping over the prairie looking for her like you wanted to do. If you can't sit on a horse no better than you can sit on a wagon seat you wouldn't get very far. The next time you want to stop a runaway team, my advice to you is not to fall off the wagon and get dragged in the mud, but it's to put your foot down hard on the brake. Not that I'm not proud of you, just the same but—Look out!"

The trail had dipped down into a little gully to cross a small stream, and the horses were splashing through the water as Aunt Sarah spoke. Before she could finish her warning, a man had jumped to his feet on the bank to the left, and had whirled a lariat. It settled around Peter's shoulders and drew taut so that he could not move his arms.

A man rose to his feet on the bank to the right and shot a revolver rapidly into the air. The startled ponies leaped away like frightened rabbits and Peter was yanked bodily from his seat in the buckboard.

He fell upon the soft earth of the farther bank, where it shelved down to meet the water. Before he could rise, the two men were upon him, holding him down. A handkerchief was bound across his eyes, the lariat end was wrapped tightly around his chest and arms and knotted and he was gruffly told to get to his feet.

As he rose from the ground, he drove his shoulder into the middle of one man. He heard a grunt and a splash, and lashed out with a foot toward where he thought the other man was standing. The butt of a revolver came down upon his head and Peter sank to his knees, then toppled over on his side as oblivion overtook him and he seemed to fall swiftly down into a bottomless, black pit.

Learning To Swim

By H. L. GEBHARDT, Y. M. C. A. Nationally Known Swimming Instructor

Proper Method of Breathing, Combined with the Arm Stroke. Note How the Head is Turned to the Left.

Three other qualities one must be mastered in swimming are balance, relaxation and coordination. In balance the nerves and muscles must be taught to hold and keep the body in a comfortable position in the horizontal plane. This is why swimming is such a great help to a person who is tired. Another reason why balance is so necessary is that in swimming it is easier to pull the body through when there are no brakes on holding it back than it would be if the body were erect or even at an angle of 4 degrees.

Relaxation.

Then comes relaxation, another important quality. The more the body is relaxed the lighter and more buoyant it is in the water. Every swimmer should learn to relax his left arm as his right arm is doing the stroke, and vice versa. This will give you more endurance and you will find that your stroke will be much more even, and that your body will glide through the water with less effort.

Coordination.

The fifth and last quality is coordination. The highest type of stroke is displayed when you are able to make your body do as your mind dictates. This means that you have your breathing timed so that it will work in with your arm stroke and with the slightest twist of the body and also with the leg kick. Most swimmers have dificulty with this quality. Combine these five qualities and you will find swimming easy, enjoyable and beneficial.

Breathing while swimming is just the opposite to natural breathing. A swimmer always breathes through the mouth and exhales through the mouth or nose, whichever is easier for him. The reason for this change is very obvious, when you know that you can get more air in a given time through the mouth than you can through the nose. You should try this easily at first, taking about three seconds to inhale and five to eight to exhale.

A good method of practicing this breathing is to stand in water about waist deep. Take a short gulp of air through the mouth and then bend forward, submerging the face in the water, and force the air out through the nose or mouth, making bubbles. As soon as this is all out, or practically all out, raise the head a little above the surface and take another gulp of air through the mouth and repeat, bending forward and forcing the air out again. This must be practiced continually in order to form the habit of this apparently new and unnatural system of breathing. Do it about ten or twelve times a minute.

The next step is to turn the head to left as it is ready for a new gulp of air. Instead of raising the head straight up from in front, which has a tendency to cut off the air from the lungs, it is just turned to the left side and the gulp of air is taken in over the left shoulder. Breathing in swimming should be done as subconsciously as it is in normal life. If a single drop of water is taken in through the nostrils it is inhaled directly into the lungs and the result is immediate choking and stopping of the breath, while if the water is taken through the mouth and starts down the windpipe the epiglottis involuntarily contracts and prevents the water from entering the lungs.

These breathing exercises can be practiced at home in a large dishpan or wash bowl filled with the water. Do not feel that time spent in this manner is time wasted, because valuable practice can be secured this way.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 29—The Ancient Cretans. By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

EXTENSIVE EXCAVATIONS IN THE ISLAND OF CRETE IN RECENT YEARS HAVE DISCLOSED THE REMAINS OF AN ANCIENT CIVILIZATION THAT DATES BACK AS FAR AS THE TIME OF THE EARLY EGYPTIAN KINGS. —•

IN 2000 B.C. THE CRETAN KINGDOM IS BELIEVED TO HAVE REACHED ITS HIGHEST PROSPERITY. THE CRETANS HAD DEVELOPED A FORM OF WRITING, WHICH THEY SCRATCHED ON TABLETS OF CLAY, BUT NO ONE HAS BEEN ABLE AS YET TO DECIPHER IT.

MYSTERIOUS CRETAN WRITING.

THE CRETANS WERE AMONG THE FIRST SEA TRADERS. THEY CARRIED ON COMMERCE WITH THE EGYPTIANS, AND SPREAD THE CULTURE OF ORIENTAL NATIONS AMONG THE GREEKS, WHO AT THAT TIME WERE BARBARIANS. WHEN THE GREEKS FIRST SAW THE MANY-OARED CRETAN GALLEYS FROM AFAR, THEY THOUGHT THEY WERE SEA MONSTERS WITH A HUNDRED LEGS.

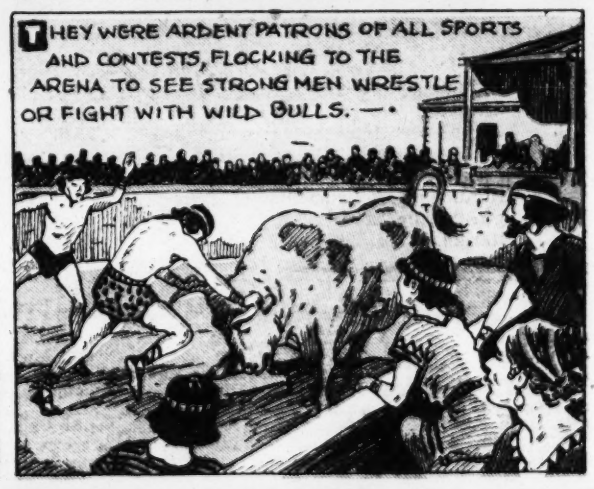

WALL PAINTINGS FOUND IN THE RUINS OF CNOSSOS, THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF THE ISLAND, SHOW THAT THE CRETANS WERE HANDSOME AND THEIR COSTUMES ELABORATE. SOME OF THE DRESSES WORN BY THE COURT LADIES WERE MUCH THE SAME STYLE AS THOSE OF AMERICAN WOMEN OF THE LATE 19TH CENTURY. —•

THE CRETANS WERE FOND OF FESTIVALS AND SHOWS AND, EVEN IN THAT EARLY DAY HAD CIRCUSES FEATURING ACROBATS AND FEATS OF DARING.

THEY WERE ARDENT PATRONS OF ALL SPORTS AND CONTESTS, FLOCKING TO THE ARENA TO SEE STRONG MEN WRESTLE OR FIGHT WITH WILD BULLS. —•

IN ANCIENT TIMES THE ISLAND OF CRETE ABOUNDED WITH WILD BULLS. THESE DANGEROUS ANIMALS WERE CAUGHT WITH STRONG NETS TIED TO TREES.

CRETE WAS FINALLY CONQUERED BY HER LESS CIVILIZED NEIGHBORS, AND BY 1000 B.C. HAD CEASED TO EXIST AS A NATION. —•

BUT THE GREEKS PRESERVED BITS OF CRETAN HISTORY IN THEIR LEGENDS.

ONE OF THESE STORIES TELLS OF A KING MINOS OF CRETE WHO KEPT A TERRIBLE MONSTER CALLED THE "MINOTAUR".

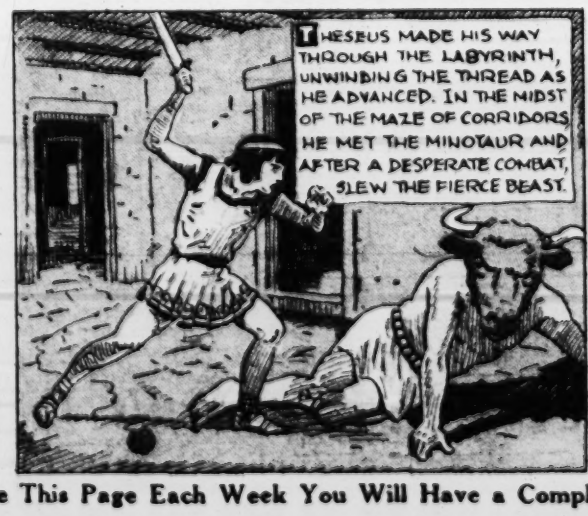

THE MINOTAUR WAS KEPT IN A VAST MAZE OF HALLS AND ROOMS CALLED "THE LABYRINTH." NO MAN WHO ENTERED COULD FIND HIS WAY OUT.

KING MINOS HAD CONQUERED GREECE AND COMPELLED THE PEOPLE OF THAT COUNTRY TO SEND HIM A NUMBER OF THEIR BOYS AND GIRLS EVERY YEAR AS TRIBUTE. THESE CHILDREN WERE FED TO THE MINOTAUR.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THESEUS, THE SON OF THE KING OF ATHENS, RESOLVED TO FREE GREECE FROM THIS TRIBUTE AND WENT TO CRETE WITH A BAND OF THESE DOOMED CHILDREN. REACHING THE ISLAND, THESEUS WAS THE FIRST TO ENTER THE LABYRINTH. HE HAD HIDDEN A SWORD IN HIS TUNIC AND CARRIED A BALL OF THREAD WHICH A CRETAN PRINCESS HAD GIVEN HIM SECRETLY. —•

THESEUS MADE HIS WAY THROUGH THE LABYRINTH, UNWINDING THE THREAD AS HE ADVANCED. IN THE MIDST OF THE MAZE OF CORRIDORS HE MET THE MINOTAUR AND AFTER A DESPERATE COMBAT, SLEW THE FIERCE BEAST.

WHEN THE HEROIC YOUTH RETRACED HIS STEPS BY MEANS OF THE THREAD, WITHOUT WHICH HE WOULD HAVE BEEN HOPELESSLY LOST. AFTER GETTING OUT OF THE LABYRINTH THESEUS SAILED FOR GREECE WHERE HIS SAFE RETURN AND HIS BRAVE DEED WERE HAILED WITH REJOICING.
